"I might show these things to the Dean when I get back to Graydon," he thought. "That is, if it's necessary. I ain't so sure that I won't close it all up before I get back from New York. Gordon and the girl aren't going there for nothing, you can bet on that—and whatever either of 'em does isn't so far removed from Hopkins."

To the detective these clippings were dull and uninteresting, and he was about to replace them in the pocket-book, when suddenly he remembered something, and blushed to think that he had not recalled it before. The incident of the strange radiance of his diamond scarf pin that night in the woods back of the college! What a fool he was not to have understood what caused it. He remembered to have read, on more than one occasion, of the effect of radium on diamonds, and it now became a certainty in his mind that the refulgence of his gem had been occasioned by the presence, somewhere, of some radio-active substance.

"With radium at $5,000 an ounce, though," commented Sullivan, "it don't seem likely that there would be any great amount of it lying around loose out there in the woods. I wonder if there was some in the laboratory? No; if there had been wouldn't my diamond have shone when I was there? And the light disappeared the moment I got away from that one spot in the woods. Maybe there's a radium mine there."

This flippant dismissal of the question did not satisfy him however. He could not dis-associate the matter from Professor Hopkins. The fact that Hopkins, judging by these papers of his, was intensely interested in matters connected with radium may have had something to do with the way the detective looked at it; he was convinced however, that there was something more than mere coincidence in it all.

"I wish I had told the Dean about the diamond business," he thought. "I will when I get back—if it's necessary."

He had an idea that this journey to New York would bring matters to a head. He did not expect to find Hopkins there, but he hoped to trap Gordon and the girl in some manner that would force her to make a full confession of all he wanted to know.

Sullivan arrived in New York hungry. The dining-car was ahead of the car in which Ernesta and Gordon rode. He had noted that with satisfaction at first, because it would preclude the chance of their having to pass through his car to dinner. The arrangement worked ill on his appetite, however, for it prevented him going forward. He was not in a good frame of mind, as a consequence, when they pulled in at the Grand Central Station.

He watched Gordon and the girl alight, and saw them go to a hotel across the street. Sullivan watched them enter the cafe, a few steps beneath the sidewalk, and take a seat at a table near a large post. He wondered if there were not some way he could obtain a table near them, and he went in the main entrance of the hotel to reconnoitre. After some search he found that he could go through the men's cafe and into the dining-room, where they were seated, without being seen by them, the post hiding him. He also observed with joy that a table on the opposite side of the post was unoccupied. In another moment he was seated, and had ordered something to eat. Then he listened, trying to overhear anything that they might say. What he heard was this:

Cold Upsets the Kidneys

And Uric Acid Poisons Bring Pains and Aches to Back and Limbs

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

You feel pains in the back, find the urine heavy and unduly coloured, have indigestion and irregularity of the bowels and these may be the rheumatic twinges.

You wonder what has gone wrong until you recollect that you have been exposed to sudden changes of temperature, perhaps sitting in a draft or passing from a very warm room to be chilled by the outdoor air.

The kidneys are most susceptible to cold, and a sudden lowering of temperature throws an extra burden on them by closing the pores of the skin, which are ordinarily a great aid to the kidneys in removing poisons from the blood.

The danger lies in not understanding the meaning of the symtoms given in the first paragraph. Once you know that the kidneys need assistance you can help them promptly by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Every day you put off treatment you are taking the risk of developing Bright's disease, dropsy or rheumatism. Because of the inactivity of the failing kidneys your system is being loaded with poisonous impurities, and that means pains and suffering.

Children Injured

Ordinary Cathartics and Pills and Harsh Physic Cause Distressing Complaints

You cannot be over-careful in the selection of medicine for children. Only the very gentlest bowel medicine should ever be given, except in emergency cases. Ordinary pills, cathartics and purgatives are apt to do more harm than good. They cause griping, nausea and other distressing after-effects that are frequently health-destroying and a life-lasting annoyance.

We personally recommend and guarantee Rexall Orderlies as the safest and most dependable remedy for constipation and associate bowel disorders. We have such absolute faith in the virtues of this remedy that we will sell it on our guarantee of money back in every instance where it fails to give more satisfaction, and we urge all in need of such medicine to try it at our risk.

Rexall Orderlies are eaten like candy. They are particularly prompt and agreeable in action, may be taken at any time, day or night; do not cause diarrhoea, nausea, griping, excessive looseness or other undesirable effects. They have a very natural action upon the glands and organs with which they come in contact, act as a positive and regulative tonic upon the relaxed muscular coat of the bowel and its dry mucous lining; remove irritation, overcome weakness, tone and strengthen the nerves and muscles, and restore the bowels and associate organs to more vigorous and healthy activity.

Rexall Orderlies completely relieve constipation, except when of a surgical character. They also tend to overcome the necessity of constantly taking laxatives to keep the bowels in normal condition. Two sizes of packages, 10 cents and 25 cents. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in Peterborough only at our store.—The Rexall Store, McDermid and Jury, druggists.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

THERE is a bachelor woman of about forty-five who occasionally visits in the capacity of dressmaker several homes in our neighbourhood.

She is rather plain featured.

She has no especial talents.

She is not a brilliant talker or a particularly traveled or cultured woman.

She does not, of course, have the attraction of wealth to recommend her.

And yet, the other day, when her name came up in the conversation, some one said:

"Yes, I like Miss L.'s dressmaking, but I like her even better. I just enjoy having her come to the house somehow." Everyone who knew her echoed the sentiment.

Why?

Just this I think—she's so HEARTY.

I wonder if you know exactly what I mean by that word? I'm not quite sure it can carry all the meaning I want it to take to you.

What I mean is: So full of energy and enthusiasm so much interested in everything, so happy, so alive, so well—I guess it's the best word I can find for it—so HEARTY.

Maybe an illusttration will describe the quality best.

When you ask Miss L. how the world has been treating her since you saw her last, instead of giving an answer such as, "All right, I guess," or "Pretty well," as most of us do, no matter what our blessings, she tells you "splendidly."

And she says it in such a vigorous, happy, God-in-His-Heaven-is-alright-with-the-world voice that you actually feel braced up as if something particularly nice had happened to yourself.

I have heard people ascribe Miss L.'s popularity simply to the fact that she is interested in other people's interests, but I don't think it's wholly that.

That helps immensely, of course, as it always will in this world of egotistical little people who want nothing so much as an audience.

But I think the whole foundation of her charm is the fact that she is so keenly interested in everybody's doings—her own as well as other people's.

I had a clever young college man tell what he thought men liked best in a woman, and it was just this quality—heartiness.

"I don't care whether a girl is pretty or plain, and I don't particularly care about brains," he put it, "but I do want a girl who's thoroughly alive and interested in what's going on about her."

Why?

"Because that makes people like you."

And yet these same girls are not cultivating that equally, or maybe more, friend-winning quality which lies within their reach.

I wonder why.

"The Lottery Man"

BY RIDA JOHNSON-YOUNG

"The other machine has came!" bawled the chaffeur through the broken window pane.

The shout brought them back to earth. Jack scrambled to his feet, his heart beating fast. Helene, to hide her own confusion, ran to the bedroom door. Unconsciously repeating the chauffeur's cry, she announced:

"Aunt Fannie, the other machine has came—come, I mean. We'd better go at once and not keep Mrs. Wright up any longer."

"Awfully soon!" agreed Helene, then added: "I mean it was high time."

"Where's Lizzie, the Embalmer's pride?' 'asked Jack, as Mrs. Peyton and Mrs. Wright hurried in.

"She's getting the wraps together," said Helen. "Poor Lizzie! How she does suffer from Aunt Fannie's wonderful maladies and cures. I'm so sorry you suffered, Auntie," she went on, aloud.

"It's all Lizzie's fault!" declared Mrs. Wright. "She knows I can't stand lobster and ice cream. And yet she eats them, right in my sight. And then, of course, I have to.

She bade them good-night and hurried out, followed by Helene. Lizzie followed slowly, pausing to gaze lovingly at the punch bowl. Jack stepped close to the companion and uttered in a sepulchar voice:

"'Tis closing time, Joe Morgan!"

Lizzie jumped and hustled away in her employer's wake. The Wrights caught Mrs. Peyton's last words as the machine chugged off. "Lizzie, I want you to sit in front of me to keep off the wind!" she cried.

"Say, mother," observed Jack, turning back into the room, "what is there about Miss Heyer that makes her so different from all the other girls I ever met. She's got me going."

"By the way," 'asked Mrs. Wright, "did you give Foxey that big story you promised him?"

Jack's jaw dropped. He stood aghast. For the first time he remembered that he had pledged himself at $1 a chance as husband to any woman who might draw a lucky number in the Examiner's lottery!

"I've just met the One Girl!" he groaned, "and—and I'm a Lottery Man! She'll—she'll never buy a coupon!"

CHAPTER IV.

Thus did the New York Examiner term its Lottery Man idea. Thousands of New Yorkers, glancing over their Sunday morning newspapers, stopped in amazed derision to read the startling story of a "young man—well educated — good looking—hero of many adventures, all over the earth — who offered himself at $1 a chance as husband to the winner of the Examiner' lucky lottery number."

The Federal authorities, ever on the keen lookout for infringements of their stringent lottery law, pounced eagerly upon the story. It was read from beginning to end by one official after another. But what, at first no cognizance of a human lottery gambling began to offer unusual features. Government lawyers were consulted. With furrowed brows they pondered over the knotty case. Here was a series of technicalities that seemed to rob the law of its force.

In the first place, as Jack Wright had said, the law forbade the giving away of lottery prizes. But it took no cognizance of a human lottery prize that insisted on giving himself away. It forbade newspapers to give space to lottery advertisements. But it was puzzled as to the extent of Federal jurisdiction over a man who bought advertising space in a paper to announce the fact that he was making a present of himself to any woman who might happen to have a coupon of a certain number.

Then the law governing frauds was called upon. But Jack and Peyton appeared before a Government commissioner prepared to prove that no fraud existed. The Examiner was printing the strange offer in perfect good faith. And Jack made affidavit of his willingness to carry out his own part of the contract.

Meantime, the contest went merrily on. The Examiner, the first week, printed Jack's offer, gave a brief, fanciful sketch of his career (written by himself) and followed this with a chapter of his adventures in the Arctic regions. Jack had written this chapter with a lurid wealth of excitement, and remarked modestly as he turned in the story, that it "not only out-Pearied Cook, but out-Cooked Peary."

The Examiner, as Jack had suggested, did not divulge at once the identity of the Lottery Man. On the first Sunday it printed merely the first letter of the first name; promising to print an additional instalment each Sunday for eight more weeks until the whole name should be in the possession of all those who had bought and saved all the Sunday editions.

The same plan was observed with his photograph. A lateral slice of his face, including one ear and a fraction of his left temple, was published the first Sunday. Under this were printed the instructions:

"Cut out each week's section of the Lottery Man's photographs and paste on a strip of cardboard. At the end of the ninth week you will thus have a complete likeness of him."

Foxhall Peyton, when he saw Jack's great "idea" blazoned forth in cold type across a whole page of his newspaper's Sunday edition felt a momentary sinking of heart as to the scheme's success. On the face of it the thing was so absurd, so idiotic. Never before, outside of comic opera had a man publicly put himself at auction, on $1 chances, as possible husband for any woman who might choose to cut out a numbered coupon and mail it, together with a dollar bill, to a newspaper.

"It'll be a frost!" he wailed to Jack as the two met on Sunday afternoon to talk over the plan. "There aren't enough idiots in the world—certainly not enough women idiots—to make such a crazy scheme succeed. I wish you hadn't hypnotized me into it. The Examiner will be the laughing stock of the country. And we won't get a single letter in reply to the offer."

"Foxey," observed Jack, comfortingly, "ever since this old world began it has been a human craving to get something for nothing. You'll find there are fully 50,000 women who will risk a dollar for such a husband as I."

"Getting something for nothing," Foxey cruelly corrected him. "is a very different thing from blowing a whole dollar just to get you. Every paper in America will give us the laugh. We'll lose circulation on it No one will send in a single coupon Who wants to buy a lottery husband, anyhow?"

"Who? Lots and lots of people. Isn't marriage the rankest sort of lottery? I only wonder the oGvernment doesn't abolish it as such Here's another point to console you. We state in the story that all the dollars sent in will go to the Lottery Man. By the time there are a few thousand dollars the women will be eager to marry a man who has so much money. Then the coupons will pile in faster and faster. The more money received the faster they'll come. And we state that if the lucky woman refuses to marry me she and I will divide the proceeds. That'll catch a lot more."

"Also, if I refuse to marry her she scoops the whole pot. That'll attract every ugly woman in the United States."

"Is there a woman in America—or in the whole world—who knows she's ugly?" scoffed Foxey. "By the way what does Mrs. Wright think of the scheme?"

"She's laughed herself sick over it" retorted Jack, glumly. "She thinks it's the greatest idea of the century."

"Then you've told her that you are the Lottery Man?"

"Not on your accident policy! she'd be furious. And as she's got to know it soon enough, I'm putting off the day of confession as long as I can, Mother doesn't suspect a thing. But I had the frozen heart for a second, when she looked at that section of my photograph and said that the left ear had a familiar look."

"My mother," observed Peyton, "is so much interested in the idea that she has almost forgotten which of her maladies is worst to-day. I even caught Lizzie Roberts furtively reading your Ananias story of the Eskimo girl up at Etah who fell in love with you and who committed suicide by swallowing three walrus tusks because you so heartlessly refused to be her husband."

"Helene? She's the original Discordant Note in the scheme's harmony You should have seen her face when she read the story. It was a little bit the way you looked that day when the loaded slish can upset over you."

"She—she disapproves?"

"'Disapproves' is too mild a word. She thinks it is 'odious' and says that 'no self-respecting man could so debase himself.' I guess that'll hold you."

"Thank the Lord she doesn't know I'm the Lottery Man!" groaned Jack "but she'll find it out in a few weeks. And then what will she think of me?"

"What will it matter to you? By that time, if the scheme's a success, you'll have lots of cash and be the prospective bridegroom of some lucky one dollar investor. So cheer up."

He slapped his friend sharply on the shoulder to emphasize his words. The action knocked to the ground the overcoat Jack was carrying over one arm. Foxey, with many apologies, stooped to pick up the coat. As he did so, an inner pocket turned inside out.

A sheaf of square, white bits of newspaper cascaded from the pocket and strewed the earth, A glance told Foxhall what the slips of paper were. They were a heap of the marriage lottery coupons cut from that morning's Examine r, and each one bore, in Jack's sprawling handwriting, the name "Helene Heyer."

Jack, scarlet with mortification, scooped the coupons together and stuck them into his coat again. Foxey did not offer to help, but stood, mouth agape, staring at his friend.

"Jack Wright!" he gasped when he could get his breath. "So that's the trouble, is it? There must be fully fifty of those coupons in all. That means $50. How'll you ever raise so much cash?"

"My lunch money for a couple of months ought to do it. That and a few car-fares saved. But keep mum, won't you, old man?"

"Why yes. But—"

"But the fact is that I've gone in on a crazy scheme to make money and to sell myself like a prize ox in a measly lottery. And, ten minutes after I promised to do it, I—I met the one girl who was worth while. Just my luck! The sort of luck that's followed me fro mthe start. Till last night I never knew that love and marriage and all that sort of thing amounted to much. Then, all at once, when it was too late, I met—Her, Oh, I can't talk about it. Just forget what I've said. I'm in on this punk game and I'll see it to a finish. No one's going to nail me for welshing."

"But there's a way out, I tell you," protested Foxey.

"What is it?' asked Jack. "If there's a square way, I—"

"The scheme is bound to be a frost. No one will send in any coupons or dollars. And the Examiner, then, will have to withdraw its offer—and you'll be free."

"No such luck! I'm wise enough to know that. "The idea," as the Examiner says "is due to be the Sensation of the Year." And, as usual, I'm the goat!"

"I warned you last night that sometime you'd meet the right girl—'

"Oh, dont rub it in. How was I to know there was such a glorious girl in all this wide world as Helene Heyer? Tell me that." But maybe you're right after all. The idea may be a fizzle. No one may compete and—where are you going?"

REV. JAS. NORTHY PREACHES TO ORANGEMEN OF CITY

Belfast, Ireland Clergyman Gives an Interesting Address to the Members of Order, Who Attended Knox Church in a Body Last Night.

"Night signifies ignorance, trouble and danger. It was night under circumstances we cannot well understand. Out of the night we hear a piercing cry, and the answer—"the morning cometh and also the night," said Rev. James Northey, of Belfast, Ireland, when addressing the Orangemen of the city in Knox church last night. He chose as his text, the 21st Chapter of Isaiah, and the 11th and 12th verses: "Watchman, what of the night What of the Night ? The watchman said the morning cometh and also the night."

"This is the cry of the people of every age," said Mr. Northey. "It may have been out of the dark night, you looked into the black sky and asked: 'how long ? how long ?' There are those who tell us, that the day is as the night compared to the hereafter. There are those who would tell us that the world is a dark world, and that it is growing worse and worse. The world is not growing worse, and you will see that the sun is shining over the mountain tops, and you will say: 'the morning cometh', but is he right who says: 'tomorrow will be better than to-day, or the future will be without a backset'. Never. The days will grow longer and the nights will grow shorter in our lives, and at last, the light of the moon will continue after the light of the sun, so that there shall be no night. The first year of our Lord, was a successful one, the next year, the clouds were growing, and the next they were growing worse, and so on, until he gave up the ghost on the cross. In the time of Bloody Mary, the nights were dark, and the eighteenth century was dark, and then came in the light of King William of Orange, and of Wesley, and things were speedily made brighter. Romanism is better understood in the Old Land, than it is here. Every reader of history knows that I have not gone too far when I say that there are men in slavery under the rule of the Pope. Some of the statements I am going to make were made in Belfast some time ago, and they startled the people. Priests were sent to contradict them, but it was fruitless, there was nothing like plain facts and the naked truth.'

"There is nothing so helpful to a church, as to know that the winning side, is their side," continued the speaker. "A priest made a statement to the effect that Rome intended to bend the necks of an Imperial race. That race was England. She knew at the same time that she was losing, but she knew that if she could win England, she would be victorious. She made the attack, and she was only too successful. In England Protestantism is greatly honeycombed by Romanism. They have gained great influence with the press, and in the periodicals, and nuns have come to her shores. And in Ireland, what is the state ? It can not be denied Rome has been ruling there for some time, and we are lamenting over many a concession that she has got. She got hold of education to an alarming extent. I say, we Protestants having experience in that land, and having a knowledge of the massacre of 1643, are we to be of Romanism? In the United States and in Canada, they are growing, this being so, what are the prospects ? Fifty years ago the Pope was not only Pope, but he was King. Fifty years ago France was the chief arm of the Vatican. Now the Pope is no longer King of Rome, and, Italy is free of his domination. Even his clergy, the travellers tell us, have little respect for him. Where is France in comparison with 50 years ago? She has closed convent after convent, school after school, and England is crowded with the outcasts. There was a time in Spain that they could not say or put in print, anything that referred to the Protestant place of worship but now they say that the Protestants have a right to worship as they please. In Austria, it is the law that a person has to register their faith, when they reach a certain age, and now 55,000 register themselves away from the Catholic church. In France, thousands of priests have left their churches, and gone to ordinary work. Rome has made no progress in England, nor in Scotland. What of Ireland ? Sixty years ago, there were six millions of Catholics, and now there are only three and a quarter millions. Those who wish to discard the Catholic faith, dare not do so, and they come to Canada and the United States to enjoy religious freedom. Is Rome winning ? We know that it is not, we are on the winning side, because we are on the true side. The growth of science is progressing and people are getting to see the truth. Error must go and Rome must go. We have the Bible as a foundation for our faith, and Romanism is dying. She is losing 55,000 every year, and some say that she is winning, but I need not take time to say that Protestantism is growing. India, China, Japan and Islands of the sea are honey-combed with Protestantism, and now let us take our share.

But it will not be an easy victory to win out. We have proof of this."

In closing, Mr. Northey said: "You have a great part to play in this great country, which is growing greater and greater all the time. You have a heritage, and do not despise it. Let us remember that we have the coming good of the world, and the glory of the Lord Jesus Christ, let us hasten and do our part that the praise of the Lord may come with His Honour and His Glory."

INTERESTING FACTS ABOUT FOUNDING OF THE BIBLE

HISTORICAL REFERENCES

Rev. I. Couch gave a very interesting talk on the history of the English Bible, yesterday morning, in connection with the tercentenary of the English Bible, it being founded 300 years ago. Mr. Couch had a chart prepared to illustrate his points and the information imparted proved very interesting. He spoke of the early days, as far back as 120 years before Christ. At this date, he said there would be found at an early church in Jerusalem, a record chest, containing copies of the ancient Greek and Hebrew testaments, as well as other versions of the early Bibles. If the ancient Bibles, say 250 years before Christ, were compared with the New Testament, there would be found a vast difference. Mr. Couch pointed out how mistakes were made in copying the Bible. The chart showed several Greek and Hebrew letters, and the similarity of these letters was so great that one would wonder that more mistakes were not made. Mr. Couch explained that the similarity of the letters was the cause of the greater number of mistakes, but that some of the words were also much alike, such as the English words "there" and "their". He said that when one person would dictate to another that these mistakes were incurred. Another reason for the difference in the versions, was the mistakes made by missing lines. He explained that the Greeks always write from right to left, and that often several lines would end with the word "and". When these lines were being copied, the writer would often look at the second, or third "and" instead of the first, thus leaving out a line, thereby conveying the wrong meaning. Another cause of making mistakes, was the re-copying of the Bible. One person would copy it and make a mistake or two, the next person would make two or three more mistakes, and so on until a very bad form would be the result. Mr. Couch said that even yet mistakes will be found in old editions of the Bible. He recalled one in the New Testament, the sixth Corinthians, 6th chapter, and the 9th verse. The new printed Bibles have the same mistakes as the manuscripts had. If a man could take the authorized version in 1870, and compare it with the old manuscripts of hundreds of years ago ,these mistakes could be easily pointed out, but now, there are absolutely no copies of the old manuscripts.

He said that these Bibles are what is known as Textrial Criticism. What is higher criticism, asked the speaker. It is the careful scrutiny of the actual phenomena of the Bible. If the Bible were entirely lost; if we had the Scriptures of our Christian Fathers, we would be quite safe in using it. A manuscript is one written in the olden times. There are no less than 1,500 of these in use in Greece. Some of them are written in all capital letters. There were three original manuscripts—the Vatican," the "Siniatic," and the "Alexandrian." The Protestants were refused access to the Vatican for years. It belonged to Rome. The Siniatic is used at St. Petersburg. The Alexandrian is the property of the English. It was founded in 1844 and the authorized version was gotten out in 1864. In the year 1628, however, it was brought to Charles I. in England The pretext Ephriem was the erased, or partially erased works of ancient scholars. They tried to erase their works, but in the year 1834, scholars applied chemicals that brought the writing back, which they had tried to erase. Mr. Couch's talk was based entirely on the old versions of the Bible, and the comparison to that of to-day, also the history of the Bible in general, and was most interesting.

"WHY I AM A PROTESTANT" BY REV. ROBT. POGUE

Rev. Robt. Pogue, pastor of St. Paul's Presbyterian church, last night delivered the second of a series of sermons upon the subject, "Why I am a Protestant." The reverend gentleman took for his text the latter part of the 30th verse of the Book of Jude, "Ye shall earnestly contend for the faith which was one delivered unto the saints."

Before entering upon a full discussion of his subject, Rev. Mr. Pogue disclaimed any intention, or desire, to create distrangement amongst the people of the community. Continuing he pointed out that it is often said that Protestants should deal in a spirit of charity towards their fellow citizens of the Roman Catholic faith. In this respect he desired to point out that it was not against the members of the Roman Catholic church he might have occasion to refer in the course of his remarks, but against the system of religion which they supported. When the Roman Catholic people declared that you must accept their system or be damned, he was obliged to differ with them, and point out the true road to Christ. He claimed to be tolerant, but he denied that the church of Rome was the last church in the world that could claim to shine the slightest degree of toleration. According to the doctrine of the Roman Catholic faith there is only one way in which we can become Christians, and that is by adhering to, and following out, the doctrines of their particular organization. It was quite apparent, then, that the Roman Catholic faith and the Protestant faith cannot be reconciled. One must choose between the two or give up Christianity altogether. If the Roman Catholic faith is right one should accept it, but he proposed to show that it was not right. After these introductory remarks the speaker went on to note that there was much in communion in the two faiths—Protestant and Roman Catholic. The both believe in a God. They both believe in the Apostles' Creed and the other features of the faith of the two religious bodies were recited to show that a great many things that are believed by Protestants are believed by Roman Catholics. Then the preacher launched out into a review of where the differences arose in the beliefs of the two bodies. He recited amongst other things the matter of the forgiveness of sins. He believed that one's sins could be forgiven direct from God, without the intermediary of a priest or anyone else. He claimed that the Roman Catholics church did not hold this view, but said, "No, only through the intermediary of a priest can sins be forgiven."

Taking up the doctrine of salvation, Rev. Mr. Pogue went on to show the difference between the Church of Rome and the Protestant churches. The latter believed that one could receive salvation direct from God, while the other denied direct access of the soul to God. In support of his own contention in this respect he quoted from the Bible numerous instances of where direct appeals had been made to God and had been answered. The matter of confession was then taken up, the speaker pointing out that his church believed in confessing one's sins to God alone, while the church of Rome insisted upon confessing one's sins through a priest, who might ,if he so desired, refuse forgiveness.

Dealing with the matter of baptism Rev. Mr. Pogue did not think it was a necessary saving faith. He contended that the sacrifice of our Saviour was sufficient to blot out our sins if we believed in Him. The speaker's concluding remarks dealt with the belief of the church of Rome in Saints. He claimed that God's works are the result of salvation and not the cause thereof.

MR. BELL ON RECIPROCITY

Dear Editor,—Hon. J. R. Stratton, M.P. for West Peterborough, speaks in an interview of the bearing of the proposed agreement for free exchange upon fruit growing and farm products. The space in your valuable columns are limited, therefore I must pass over many points of the interview and begin at the declaration signed by 189 out of 218 farmers. Mr. Stratton had read the declaration, and says it is a long, loosely-worded affair. The gentleman who circulated it, says that it was signed by 189 out of 218 farmers asked, but it is safe to say that not one of the 189 read it through from beginning to end, and that not half a dozen could, offhand, remember ten words of what he signed. I am a market gardener of North Monaghan who has a deep interest in the city of Peterborough, and I firmly believe that reciprocity will have a tendency to drive the branches of the C. G. Electric and Cereal works out of Peterborough. And I feel the above sentiments of Mr. Stratton are not in the interests of the farmers and market-gardeners of North Monaghan.

Hear what Mr. T. A. Russell says: "For the past ten years our purchases from the United States were $1,-600,000,000; their purchases from us $800,000,000. They are twelve times greater in population. In other words our purchases from the United States were $30 per head; theirs from us $1.10 per head. The United States average tariff on all goods dutiable and free is 24 per cent; ours 16 per cent. Theirs on dutiable goods 42 per cent.; ours 27 per cent. That is their tariff barrier was over 50 per cent. higher than ours.

The North Monaghan famous declaration, which reads as follows: The undersigned farmers of North Monaghan township in the County of Peterborough, believe that no reciprocity treaty should be agreed upon which will allow American farm products or American manufactured goods to come into Canada more freely than they do at present. We believe that the home market for farm products is better than any foreign market for the following reasons: The farther the consumers are from the farmers, the more it costs to carry farm products to them, and the more middlemen there are to share the profits. Many kinds of farm products command the best prices when they are fresh. If they are shipped to distant markets, they lose their freshness before they reach the consumers, and consequently the farmer gets a lower price for them than he would get if he could sell them while fresh in a market at hand. Some kinds of farm products are so perishable that they cannot be profitably shipped to distant markets. A workman employed in a city of the United States, or any other foreign country, consumes only a few cents' worth of Canadian farm products in a year. Workmen employed in British factories consume much more of Canadian farm products than those of any foreign country do, but even British workmen buy a very small proportion of what they eat from Canadian farmers. Workmen employed in Canadian towns and cities will ,under a proper system of tariff protection, buy nearly everything they eat from Canadian farmers. At present owing to the low Canadian tariff on farm products, large quantities of American farm products come into Canada.

The undersigned farmers believe that the Canadian tariff should be raised high enough to shut out such American farm products and preserve the home market for Canadian farmers.

Great quantities of manufactured goods also come into Canada from the United States because Canadian tariff is not high enough to keep them out. The workmen employed in making those goods are fed by American farmers. The undersigned farmers of Peterborough county believe that the Canadian tariff should be so framed as to cause the manufacture of such goods in Canadian towns and cities by workmen who will be fed by Canadian farmers.

We believe that the principle expressed in the following motto is a good one: Keep your money in circulation at home by buying goods made in Canada. When you can't get what you want in Canada, buy within the British Empire. If American manufacturers wish to sell their goods to the Canadian people they should build branch factories in Canada. The Canadian tariff should be high enough to make them do so.

The undersigned farmers favour a policy of thorough protection for the products of Canadian farms, mines and factories, with reciprocal preference arrangements between Canada and the other countries of the British Empire.

Believe me, yours truly,
JOHN BELL.

THE ROUTE IS CHOSEN

Canadian Northern Ontario Line is Finally Located—Runs Through Rich Country

FINE FARM LANDS

Toronto, Feb. 13.—The survey of the main line of the Canadian Northern Ontario Railway, extending from Ottawa to Port Arthur, has been completed, and the exact location of the road, as decided upon by the company, was given the press on Saturday night. It is believed that the work of construction will be commenced this year, and that the road will be open for traffic at the end of three years.

The Canadian Northern Ontario Railway, which name is given to that portion of the C.N.R. transcontinental line running through the Province of Ontario, commences at Rideau Junction on the Toronto-Ottawa branch, now under construction, and crossing the Ottawa River at Fitzroy Harbor, will continue along the Ottawa Valley on the Quebec side, and runs through Pembroke and Petawawa to North Bay. Continuing, it will pass on the Vermillion Valley and great clay belt of the Algoma district to Lake Nipigon, and thence to Port Arthur, where it connects with the C.N.R. proper.

Taking the Ottawa Valley as its route, it will run in close proximity to the proposed Georgian Bay Canal at many points. At first it was believed these two highways would work in opposition to each other, but upon further consideration of the industries and utilities served by each, the C.N.R. decided that far from interfering with one another, they will be complementary, and both necessary to the full development of the district through which they pass.

The Canadian Northern Ontario Railway, although exploiting a new country, will make five crossings of other roads, and in every case overhead.

The new line will leave Rideau Junction some six miles southwest from the point of entry into Ottawa, and will run directly west through the Village of Bells Corners, through the rich and comparatively undeveloped country in March and Torbolton Townships, unserved by any existing road, and cross the Ottawa at Fitzroy Harbor to the Quebec side of the river. By taking this route the company hope to encourage manufacturing establishments at the magnificent water-power at Chats Falls, such as have been promoted by inferior powers on the Mississippi at Carleton Place, Almonte and Galletta, and on the Bonnechere at Renfrew.

At Portage du Fort the railway will again cross the Ottawa at the foot of its greatest individual drop of one hundred feet, which means not less than 150,000 horse-power.

It then enters on the Ontario side the Township of Ross and a little further on, Westmeath. The latter especially has a reputation as one of the best grain producers in Ontario, and its opporium, Beachburg, is prosperous in spite of its nine-mile haul to the C.P.R. at Cobden.

Crossing over to the Valley of Muskat River it enters Pembroke from the rear, the C.P.R. having taken up the whole waterfront. Twelve miles further it will pass Petewawa, and skirting the south edge of the military reserve plunge into the wilderness by the valley of the Petewawa. This is a singular depression lying almost parallel to the Ottawa for many miles. Unlike the valley of the latter, to which the C.P.R. adheres, it is not a rock canyon, except for short distances, but expands into great basins at Grand Lake, Lac a Traverse, Trout Lake, and Cedar Lake, with large areas of arable land.

On the river are several very fine water powers, infinitely larger than those that have built up the thriving towns of Bracebridge and Burk's Falls on the Grand Trunk. To the south and west lies practically all that is left of the pine of older Ontario. The road will pass through one of the most attractive portions of Algonquin Park, accessible at present only by canoe or over an extraordinary rough road of 24 miles from the C.P.R.

At Cedar Lake it leaves the main river and ascends a branch which drains Lake Cauchon, thence over a low divide to the collecting basin of the Amable du Fond, another river with a tremendous fall and great opportunity for power development. The railroad does not follow the river, but cuts across to the Wistiwasing, where it again emerges from the wilderness to settled country, settlement which has pushed its way from Powassan on the Grand Trunk. The land for the next twenty miles is excellent, but most of it too far away from the railway at Powassan to be successfully cultivated.

It here diverges from the line located to Key Inlet and passing Calendar on Lake Nipissing, runs through Nipissing Junction and into North Bay. The C.N.O. propose to pass in the rear of North Bay, and, leaving the C.P.R. station as the topography will allow, ascend the Sturgeon and its tributary, the Rapikotiwia, and crossing the Wahnapitae River, skirt the south side of the lake and join their own constructed line at Capreol.

This last hundred miles is a country of comparatively small streams, with numerous lakes and ponds, but at the Groundhog the C.N.O. will cross the first of the large rivers. Having crossed the great central plateau the road is well over the Hudson Bay slope, and the rivers are strong, swift, and numerous. The next is the Apishkanogama, and the next Kapuskasing, having fine water-powers and a good growth of timber along its banks. This kind of country extends for some two hundred miles, in which distance the C.N.O. will cross the Missinaibi, the Mabinakagami, the Morrison, the Nagagami, the Pugatchewan and the Kenogami, all strong and rapid rivers. It will also pass within thirty or forty miles of the great fall of the Pic, one of the finest water-powers in the country and quite comparable with the Kakabeka.

Rounding the north end of Long Lake it heads southwest for Lake Nipigon, and for thirty miles or more the country is most attractive.

The road along Orient Bay will be the most difficult for construction, and will necessaitate the excavating of a tunnel 1,200 feet in length. The scenery for the next twenty miles is very fine, and the fishing probably the finest in the world on fresh water. The railway will follow a curious gorge extending from the end of Orient Bay, an ancient glacier bed half-filled with gravel and drift, past a number of small lakes and surmounting a low divide come out in the Township of Ledger, sloping towards Nipigon Bay. Ouimet and Dorion show some fine farms and thrifty farmers all clamoring for a means of getting their crops to market.

No Advance In Tourist Rates.

Chicago, Feb. 13.—The Grand Trunk Railway has given definite notice to the other eastern roads of its intention to stand pat on the reduced summer tourist rates, which have been in force during the last two years. In the opinion of many eastern passenger officials, the action effectually puts a stop to the plans of some of the roads to advance the rates this year.

Compact to Die Together.

Oxford, Me., Feb. 13.—In fulfilment of a compact alleged to have been made with her husband during his lingering illness, which death ended Saturday, Mrs. Linwood S. Keene, took her own life yesterday, after fatally shooting her 14-year-old son Gerald. The compact, dated about a month back, was found by the coroner in a sealed envelope in the woman's room.

Keene was formerly a prosperous farmer, but, according to the compact, the family had become impoverished and discouraged during his long sickness.

Husband and wife wished to be buried in a double casket, and asked that their son's coffin and theirs be placed in the same box for final interment. So it has been arranged, and the triple funeral will be held here on Wednesday.

Editor Renews Charge.

Paris, Feb. 13.—The Liberator made its appearance again yesterday. Editor E. H. James gives an eight-column review of the trial of Edward F. Mylius, The Liberator's London agent, for seditious libel. He also publishes anonymous letters averring that a Catholic priest performed the alleged morganatic marriage of King George.

No Abatement of Epidemic.

Ottawa, Feb. 13.—Despite the fact that the Ottawa water supply has been pronounced pure as the result of application of the hypochloride treatment there is no abatement of the typhoid epidemic. The total number of cases as officially reported Saturday had increased to 533.

Municipal Plant Has Record Year.

Ottawa, Feb. 13.—As a result of the cut of 19 per cent. in the rates for light, heat and power by the civic electric plant here the Ottawa Electric Co., a branch of the Ottawa Light, Heat & Power Co., will hold a board meeting early next week to decide whether to meet the reduction.

WELCOME WORDS TO WOMEN

Women who suffer with disorders peculiar to their sex should write to Dr. Pierce and receive free the advice of a physician of over 40 years' experience—a skilled and successful specialist in the diseases of women. Every letter of this sort has the most careful consideration and is regarded as sacredly confidential. Many sensitively modest women write fully to Dr. Pierce what they would shrink from telling to their local physician. The local physician is pretty sure to say that he cannot do anything without "an examination." Dr. Pierce holds that these distasteful examinations are generally needless and that no woman, except in rare cases, should submit to them.

It is the only medicine of its kind that is the product of a regularly graduated physician. The only one good enough that its makers dare to print its every ingredient on its outside wrapper. There's no secrecy. It will bear examination. No alcohol and no habit-forming drugs are found in it. Some unscrupulous medicine dealers may offer you a substitute. Don't take it. Don't trifle with your health. Write to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, President, Buffalo, N. Y.,—take the advice received and be well.

TAFT ON THE TARIFF

President Says the Agreement Will Give Stability and Will Make United States Self-Supporting

WAGES THE SAME

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 13.—President Taft defended the proposed reciprocity agreement with Canada in an address before the Illinois Legislature here Saturday as the "logical conclusion" of the protection plank in the last Republican national platform.

He defined the protection theory as one that should impose a tariff not exceeding the difference in the cost of production in the United States and abroad, and allowing a fair margin of profit for the home producer. He argued, therefore, that inasmuch as the conditions of production from the United States and Canada, "were substantially the same, the widest latitude was given Secretary Knox and the commissioners who represented the United States in offering to Canada a reduction of duties on goods, and products coming into this country from Canada, in consideration of the establishment of the same duty, or freedom from duty, on similar goods going into Canada."

The President explained that it was thought wiser on behalf of both Governments not to make a formal treaty, "but to make an agreement between the executives by which each, exercising his constitutional power in his Government, should submit the agreement in the form of a statute to be enacted and to go into force on condition that a similar statute was passed by the Legislature of the other country."

"It will give the United States much greater control of the wheat market than it has ever had before. It will enable its milling plants to turn Canadian wheat into flour and send abroad the finished product, and it will stimulate the sale of manufactures and other things that we have have to sell to Canada."

The President further asserted that in removing the artificial barriers between the northwestern part of the United States and the Canadian provinces, the agreement would result in the bringing over of live cattle to feed on the corn of the American farmer. He added that the rapid increase of population in the United States required "a source of food supply like Canada, right at our doors."

"We shall be blind indeed," said the President, "if we reject this golden opportunity to add to the strength and virility of our country by thus increasing our self-supporting capacity."

The President asserted that "no step could be taken more in the interest of a reasonable policy of protection than the approval of the treaty" and that insistance on too much protection would rouse an opposition in this country "that will know no moderation." He said that was his reason also for favoring the creation of "an expert tariff commission or board."

He suggested that the tariff board might re-examine and modify other schedules if necessary, "but that a reciprocity agreement with Canada is not a revision of the tariff, and in the nature of things cannot present the balance and the adjustment of all duties against foreign countries which a consideration of the tariff as a whole would involve."

"We have taken up those things that are involved in a Canadian reciprocity treaty because opportunity offered," declared President Taft, in conclusion. "Now is the accepted time. She is at the parting of the ways. Shall she be an isolated country, as much separated from us as if she were across the ocean, or shall her people and our people profit by the proximity that our geography furnishes and stimulate the trade across the border that nothing but a useless, illogical and unnecessary tariff wall creates?"

South Ontario Liberals.

Whitby, Feb. 13.—The Liberals of South Ontario at the annual meeting Saturday afternoon elected officers and turned over to the executive committee the question of holding a convention to bring out a candidate for the Ontario Legislature. At a meeting afterwards the executive decided upon holding a nominating convention in the music hall here on the last Saturday in May.

A resolution supporting the reciprocity agreement with the United States was carried without an opposing vote. Fred L. Fowke, M.P. for this riding, in an extended speech gave an elaborate exposition of the agreement. Organizer Inwood addressed the meeting on provincial prospects.

Found Dead In Bed.

Cayuga, Feb. 13.—Mr. James Kirkland of Mount Healy, a well-known farmer, in the Township of Oneida, was found dead in bed yesterday morning, the cause of death being heart failure. Deceased retired Saturday night apparently in the best of health, being in Cayuga during the day.

No New C.P.R. Stock.

Montreal, Feb. 13.—Although rumors have been floating about St. Francois Xavier street to the effect that a new issue of C.P.R. stock is at hand, it is believed that there will be no new issue in the near future. The rise in the stock is partly due to short interests in London, and also to the splendid outlook generally. In fact, there is no need of an issue just now, as the company has already sixty millions in the bank, or quite enough to provide for any new expenditure that may be contemplated this year.

BISHOP RYAN DEAD

Prelate Passes Away After a Hard Struggle for Life—Was Famous as Leader in His Church—Worked Too Hard

FUNERAL THURSDAY

Philadelphia, Feb. 13.—The gallant struggle of Archbishop P. J. Ryan for life has failed. The venerable prelate of the Roman Catholic diocese of Philadelphia passed away at the archiepiscopal residence at 4.08 o'clock Saturday afternoon, after an illness that became serious nearly two weeks ago.

Weeping relatives and priests surrounded the bed when the famous church leader breathed his last. They had been hastily summoned when the patient's heart began to fail at 11 o'clock. The physicians knew that death was near and the last rites for the dying were administered.

An indefatigable worker, he never had spared himself, and the illness that prostrated him shortly after Christmas was the result of over-exertion. From the first his attendants recognized that the gravest danger lay in the probability of heart failure, and stimulants to keep that organ strong were almost constantly administered.

Had Archbishop Ryan lived until the 20th of this month he would have been 80 years old.

The funeral will be held on Thursday and it is expected to be attended by practically all the prominent clergy in the American hierarchy who can reach Philadelphia in time. The body will lie in state at the cathedral and will be entombed back of the altar of the great church, beside those of Bishop Egan, Bishop Conwell and Archbishop Wood, who were his predecessors in the diocese. This was his wish.

Until Archbishop Ryan's successor is appointed Rev. Prendergast, D.D., V.G., titular bishop of Scilio and auxiliary bishop of Philadelphia becomes administrator of the archdiocese.

Patrick John Ryan was born in Thurles, County Tipperary, Ireland, Feb. 20, 1834. His family was distinguished in Irish history, being descended from the O'Ryans, prince of Irdone. He came to America at the age of 21, and became a professor at Canondelet Seminary.

When the failing health of Archbishop Kenrick demanded a coadjutor's assistance, Ryan was appointed to that position in 1872.

In January, 1884, he was appointed archbishop of Salumis, and on Aug. 18 of the same year archbishop of Philadelphia. He was formally installed Aug. 20, 1884.

Two Burned to Death.

Montreal, Feb. 13.—An overheated stovepipe caused a fire yesterday morning in the boarding-house kept by Joseph Phillips, aged 70, on Prince street, and Phillips, with one of his boarders, Michael McMahon, aged 47, lost their lives. John Quinlan, who had retired to rest fully dressed, was almost suffocated when he awoke to find the house in flames. The heat was so intense and the smoke so thick that Quinlan made a hurried escape through one of the windows on the stairway, and raised an alarm. Quinlan's face and hands were badly burned. When the brigade arrived the fire was quickly extinguished. Groping their way through the house, the firemen discovered the dead bodies of Phillips and McMahon, and also the body of Mrs. Phillips, aged 70, who was lying unconscious on the dining-room floor. She was taken to the General Hospital, where last night her condition was considered serious.

Incendiarism Suspected.

London, Feb. 13.—Fire at midnight destroyed the barn owned by Dr. H. Lang at Granton, together with three horses, cutters and buggies and 300 bushels of oats. Incendiarism is suspected. Some insurance on the building had lapsed, but a little was carried.

Struck by Train.

Blenheim, Feb. 13.—J. R. Muckle, aged 24, was struck by a Pere Marquette train at Blenheim Junction on Saturday night and seriously injured. He was walking on the track.

Had Severe Pains In His Back.

Could Hardly Work.

Mr. Alfred E. Davis, Gorrie, Ont. writes:—"For some years I suffered from severe pains in my back and could hardly work at all, and when I stooped down to pick up anything felt as if my back must break. I was advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills, and after taking two boxes I was entirely cured, and feel that I cannot speak too highly in their favor.

"This was nearly four years ago and I still remain cured."

Those who have never been troubled with kidney trouble do not know the suffering and misery which those afflicted undergo.

Weak, lame or aching back comes from the kidneys, and when the kidneys are out of order the whole system becomes deranged.

They help the kidneys to flush off the acrid and poisonous impurities which have collected, thus clearing out the kidneys, bladder and urinary passages.

KINGSTON SERIES TO BE RE-PLAYED THE GRILLERS HAVE ANOTHER CHANCE

Marchand, Frontenac's Goal-Keeper, Accidentally Discovered Not Eligible and the Easterners Have to Play Peterboro' Again

GAME HERE TO-MORROW

TORONTO, FEB. 13.—Owing to the ineligibility of Wilfred R. Marchand of the Kingston Frontenacs the latter's games in the second round with Peterborough will have to be replayed. Marchand, who is the goal keeper of the champions, has been found to be two months over age.

Peterborough made no complaint, and Kingston were as much astonished as anybody at the announcement by the O.H.A. that the games would have to be replayed. The Frontenac-Oshawa games scheduled for Tuesday and Friday of this week have been cancelled. Marchand was born in a small village in Quebec and the parish priest was appealed to by the Kingston management for proof of the eligibilty of Marchand. The priest forwarded the facts of birth and baptism in French, and it was owing to a mistake in the translation that Marchand was declared ineligible. It was understood that Marchand was born in August, 1891, and baptized in October. Instead he was born in October, 1890, and baptized in the following August. The whole matter is due to the ambiguity of the original records from Quebec.

MADE TREMENDOUS HIT

Some lady fan in Peterborough has made a tremendous hit with the players of the Peterborough Intermediate and Junior O.H.A. teams, by sending every man on both teams a pretty valentine. They arrived on Saturday, and if the young lady who was responsible for sending them could have heard the expressions of delight from the "tickled" players, as the boxes were opened she would have been amply repaid for her kindness. There was no clue to the sender each dainty valentine bearing the legend "From a girl fan". The players have asked the Examiner to forward their thanks to the sender and their only regret is that her identity can not be ascertained in order that they might reciprocate.

Headache seems habitual with many people; indeed, some are seldom, if ever, free from it, suffering continually, and wondering why they can get no relief. The most frequent of all are bilious or sick headaches, and are caused by some derangement of the stomach or bowels, or both.

Burdock Blood Bitters regulates the digestive and biliary organs, removes acidity of the stomach, improves digestion, regulates the constipated bowels, and promotes a perfect circulation of pure blood to all portions of the body.

Mrs. C. Meadows, Clarksburg, Ont., writes: "For years I was troubled with sick headache and dizziness, and was also constipated. I was advised to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I only took three bottles of the medicine, and now feel like a new person as I am completely cured. I can truthfully testify that B.B.B. is the best medicine I have ever used."

Burdock Blood Bitters, has, during the last 35 years, built up an unrivalled reputation as a cure for all troubles arising from a constipated condition of the bowels.

THE GRILLERS MADE A BIG HIT IN KINGSTON

Gamest and Cleanest Team the Frontenacs Have Ever Met---Just as Fast and as Good Stick Handlers as the Easterners But Were Off in Their Shooting.

The Kingston Whig says:

Before a crowd of 1,200 persons at the covered rink, last night, the Junior Frontenacs defeated the Peterborough Grillers in their final game, by a score of 7 to 1, thus winning the round by a lead of thirteen points. To say that the Frontenac team walked over the boys from the cheap power town would not be telling the truth, for the lads of the Limestone City worked and fought hard for every goal obtained. The score would indicate that the local boys had the better of the game all through. This they had, but a great many times the fans were on their feet for fear that McCammon or Williams would fail to check the whirlwind rushes. To successfully check they very seldom failed to do and if by ill-luck they failed the gallant Marchand was right on the job and proved too much for the Griller forwards.

The struggle was, in many respects a repetition of the game in Peterborough Tuesday night.

Be it known to all that the Peterborough Grillers are the cleanest and fairest bunch of sports that the Frontenacs have ever been up against. Also that they are no slouches. Every man on the team worked for all he was worth. Those who were there were confident that it was no walk over for the local boys the way the other games were, and a great deal more interest is taken in a game where the winning team has to work for all they get. The Grillers certainly are a fast and able body of players and are the huskiest bunch of players that the champions have been up against yet. Nearly every man is bigger than the Frontenac men. Their players are all good, but perhaps the most effective man on the team is Reynolds, the man who holds down the position of point. He certainly has more speed and tricks than most players who visit this city in the course of the season. Their goal keeper, Patterson, was a wonder. He seemed to know just where the shots would hit, and was right there to stop them. The shots were rained upon him times without number, and only for his marvelous work the score would have been larger.

Frontenacs, 7; Grillers 1.

By the above score Frontenacs grilled and placed in the class of "has beens" for this season, the fast and plucky Junior O. H. A. septette from Peterborough, known as the Grillers. The game was no walkover and Frontenacs work was cut out for them from the first whistle. The 1,300 fans present were given their money's worth of excitement. The half-time score stood 3 to nil.

Through the absence of Brouse, who watched the game from the gallery, the Frontenacs line was badly disorganized. Although "Scotty" Davidson played a brilliant game at rover, he did not work in with the forwards. Williams, who replaced Davidson on the defence, played a good game. The Peterborough team is just as fast as the locals, just as good stick-handlers, but they are woe fully weak in their shots on goal and in checking back. It was their close checking, coupled with Peterborough's inability to shoot, that won Frontenacs the game.

For the Grillers, Hefferman and Reynolds on the defence, played games equal to those of Davidson and McCammon, with the exception that the visitors had not the wicked shots of the locals. Coughlin, Hall and Matthews played stellar games on the forward line.

The Grillers are the gamest bunch of sports that have played here for some time. After the game last night the visitors wished the locals success and expressed the hope that they would retain their title of junior champs.

Peterborough Juniors Are Confident Of Reversing Score Against Frontenacs

The announcement in another column on this page to the effect that the Kingston Frontenacs-Peterborough Grillers series has been ordered replayed, and that the first game will take place here to-morrow night will be the occasion of much surprise and also much delight as it has been felt that the Grillers are capable of taking the Kingston team into camp. The big reputation of the Easterners was responsible for an attack of stage fright among the local youngsters last week, but the Grillers are no longer afraid of the junior champions and feel that with an even break in the luck they can reverse the result. They will go at the Frontenacs to-morrow night from the drop of the hat and the Sutherland aggregation will have to show more than they have yet if they hope to hold the Petes. The Grillers have received the word with the wildest delight and there is no doubt of their intentions in regard to to-morrow night's game. Every player is prepared to play the game of his life, and it looks like rocks ahead for the Kingston aggregation. At least they will find the local youngsters a different proposition than they were last week. With Marchand, their star goal keeper disqualified and Brouse hurt, the junior champions will not be able to present the same unbroken front that has won so many battles for them, while on the other hand the Grillers will have their best team out and the blue and white team are in better shape right now than they have been all season. Sizing it from all sides the game looks like the most sensational ice battle of the season and with the Grillers still in the running there will be a monster crowd on hand to see the game to-morrow night. The local team will practise to-night at 7 o'clock and every member of the team is expected to be on hand for this workout.

The C. G. E. Office Won Rough Mercantile Game

The Mercantile League game on Saturday night between the Canadian General Electric office staff and the Lock Works seven was marked by some of the most expert slashing, chopping and tripping stunts of the season and there was something doing every minute. The C. G. E. team played the only hockey there was in evidence and as a result won a hollow victory by 8 goals to nothing, their goal-keeper only touching the puck twice and on both occasions the shot was wide. However the Lock Works team made up for their lack of speed by the vigourous nature of their checking and the path to their goal was not the easiest proposition in the world by any means. No one was seriously hurt, but it looks like a safe bet that there will be souvenirs of the battle on the persons of most of the players for the next few days. Clancy and Elliott starred for the C.G.E and Huard was the pick of the losers. Fred Heaslip refereed the game.

SOME HOCKEY HAPPENINGS

There will be a practise of the Grillers at Brock Street Rink to-night, in preparation for to-morrow night's big game with Kingston. Every junior player is expected to be on hand at 7 o'clock sharp, as this will be the last practice before the game.

Owing to the Kingston-Peterborough series having been ordered to be replayed, the first game to be played here to-morrow night, the exhibition game arranged for that date between the Intermediates and the Senior T.A.A.C. of Toronto, has necessarily been cancelled. O. H. A. games always being given precedence over exhibition affairs.

DO YOU NEED OVERALLS?

If You Do, Why Don't You Make Them Yourself?—It's Dead Easy.

Many a man says that he would be glad to do chores about the house, to trim the grass or weed the garden if he had overalls.

The trouble is that when he wishes to wear overalls the stores are closed and he cannot buy them. I wonder that men do not make them for themselves.

To provide a pattern you must have an outline or perspective plan of your contour from the belt line down to the ankles. This may be obtained by sitting in wet clay and, on arising, pouring plaster of Paris in the impression. When this hardens lift the mold, lean it against the wall and obtain measurements with a tapeline. Another way is to dust talcum powder on the carpet until it is thickly coated. Then sit down on the talcum powder and carpet, thus removing the talcum from the floor where you have been. Then cut around the outlines of that impression with a sharp knife, remove the carpet so detached, and you have a pattern for one side of the overalls.

Purchase several yards of denim and cut it into the shape indicated by either pattern you have now obtained. Make two sets of these pieces and sew them edge to edge. Pockets may be made by cutting slits in the material and sewing empty salt sacks.—Wilbur D. Nesbit in Delineator.

ELECTRIC LIGHTS.

Their Use on an Important Scale Dates From 1876.

The first experimental philosopher to discover that electric light could be produced by a dry battery was Sir Humphry Davy, who in 1810 exhibited a light three inches long, between carbor points, before the Royal society of London. But no commercial value was attached to the use of electricity as an illuminant until more than half a century later. The Centennial exhibition, held in Philadelphia in 1876, really marks the era of our present form of electric light, though electric lights had been in use abroad prior to that time. The exhibition of models and practical demonstrations of electric lights at Philadelphia in 1876 attracted the attention of scientists and capitalists in this country, and the first incandescent lamps and the first arc system were put to practical use in a small way in 1878. The Brush arc light gained favor in the beginning as the most adaptable for street lighting, and Cleveland, O., the home of Charles Francis Brush, the inventor, was the initial American city to adopt the arc system for street lighting.

Since 1878 both the Brush arc system and the Edison incandescent system have developed.—Marc M. Reynolds in Moody's Magazine.

Halcyon Days.

"Alcyone, or Halcyone, the daughter of Aeolus, married Ceyx," said the Latin professor. "Ceyx was drowned, and Alcyone on learning of his fate threw herself into the sea. The gods were moved by the tragedy of the young lovers. They brought them back to life in the form of halcyons, or kingfishers, and they decreed that for the seven days from Dec. 22 to Dec. 29 the sea should remain calm while the sea birds built their nests upon it. Those seven days, the last of the year, are therefore called halcyon days—days of tranquility, a kind of very late Indian summer. Here in America we have no real halcyon days, but the myth of Alcyone and Ceyx comes from the Mediterranean, and in that blue and gold region it is a fact that the year is ushered out by a procession of still, mild, splendid days—silent and glittering days of halcyon weather."—Washington Post.

It is easier to enrich ourselves with a thousand virtues than to correct ourselves of a single fault.—Bruyere.

The Donkey's Choice.

The vexed question of the future life of animals has troubled the Mohammedan, as it has other religions. The question, it seems, was considered by Allah a long time ago, and all the animals were asked if they wished to enter paradise. They at once said yes, except the donkeys. These were cautious and asked if little boys went to heaven. The answer being yes, they replied, "In that case we prefer to go to—the other place." S. H. Leader vouches for the fable in "The Desert Gateway."

Friendships.

There are three friendships which are advantageous and three which are injurious. Friendship with the upright, friendship with the sincere and friendship with the man of much information—these are advantageous. Friendship with the man of specious airs, friendship with the insinuatingly soft, friendship with the glib tongued—these are injurious.—Confucius.

Four Hundred Years Before Peary.

The north pole is the place of greatest dignity in the world, and the people who dwell near it "have a wonderful excellency and an exceeding prerogative above all nations of the earth." How blessed we may think this nation to be, for they are in perpetual light and never know what darkness meaneth, by the benefit of twilight and full moons, as the learned in astronomy do very well know, which people, if they have the notice of their eternity by the comfortable light of the gospel, then are they blessed and all of nations most blessed. Why then do we neglect the search of this excellent discovery, against which there can be nothing said to hinder the same?—From Hakluyt's Voyage (Sixteenth Century).

An Ill Fated City.

The ill fated Sicilian city of Messina was almost entirely destroyed by an earthquake in 1693 and greatly damaged by another in 1783. In 1743 the plague carried off nearly half of its inhabitants. In 1784 the city was visited by a terrible quake and tidal wave, which finished its destruction. In fact, it would be difficult to find anywhere a city with a more mournful history than Messina, which has been practically destroyed twenty-one times during the past 3,000 years.

PETERBORO' INVITED TO TAKE PART IN THE COMPETITION

A most cordial invitation to compete in the Earl Grey competition is to band from the local officials at Winnipeg. Presenting as it does, almost insuperable obstacles owing to expense, the project is receiving attention from musical and business circles, and it may yet be that this city will be on the list. To send a company to Winnipeg would be a most expensive proposition, and nothing will be done unless a representative combination can undertake it.

ST. JOHN'S SUNDAY SCHOOL IS MAKING GREAT PROGRESS

St. John's Sunday school has up to date exceeded last year's average. Mr. Warren Dean has thrown himself into the work of secretary-treasurer in a thorough manner and with the superintendent, Mr. R. J. Devey, the equipment is steadily improving. Marking the 300th anniversary of the English Bible, a splendid cash gift from the A.Y.P.A. has placed the supply of Bibles for Sunday school work so as to leave nothing wanting. On Sunday, next the prizes to scholars will be presented by the Rev. Canon Davidson, consisting of Bibles and Books of Common Prayer.

The library, under the care of Mr. George Evans, has been overhauled, and a large number of suitable books been added.

On Sunday next the scholars contribute to the Chimes Fund, the subscription to read "From St. John's Sunday School Teachers, Scholars and Friends. It is hoped to realize a goodly sum to help forward the "People's Chimes," so dear to the heart of the rector and of all the citizens and children of Peterborough.

ONE WEEK FROM TO-NIGHT

The 300th Anniversary of the Coming of English Bible Will be Celebrated

The gathering of St. Paul's church one week from to-night for the celebration of the 300th anniversary of the coming of the English Bible promises to be one of the greatest meetings ever held in Peterborough. The people of all of the churches pledged themselves yesterday to waive all social and other engagements to keep the evening free. The choir will consist of four voices from each of the city choirs, supported by the complete choir of St. Paul's church. Mr. John Crane is training the choir this week.

Rev. J. L. Gilmour, D.D. is to be the only speaker, and is a native of this city, and now holds a most responsible position on the faculty of McMaster University, Toronto.

His name would command a large audience in any city in Canada. Arrangements will be made to increase the seating capacity of St. Paul's church if necessary.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

THE FINAL SETTLEMENT.

"The Final Settlement," a strong well-written drama of modern life, was capably presented by a splendid company at the Grand on Saturday, and created a most favorable impression upon the audience. The action is impressive and marked by stirring situations and the characters are sharply delineated. The cast throughout demonstrated its ability to get the most out of their lines, and the production was much enjoyed.

Dr. A. S. Kelsy of Calgary gives the following as the origin of the name Kennebecasis:

A man whose name was Casis settled in St. John, N.B., many years ago, and a while later there came out a Scotchman who knew him. Having made inquiries about his friend, the Scotchman was piloted by a St. John man to where Casis lived. Something about the man he had known while on the other side of the Atlantic seemed strange to the Scotchman, and he said, "Mon, man, this canna be Casis."

A Combined Treatment That Really Cures Catarrh.

Canadian weather, with its extreme cold and sudden changes, gives almost every one Catarrh, and makes it hard to cure. Some recommend internal remedies—some external applications.

Father Morriscy used both—tablets to be taken three or four times a day to invigorate the system, purify the blood, and help it throw off the disease, and a soothing, healing, antiseptic salve to be applied inside the nostrils. This combined treatment known as attacking the disease from within and without, soon cures.

"Father Morriscy's No. 26"

Mr. A. C. Thibodeau, General Merchant in Rogersville, N.B., writes on Jan. 23rd last:

"A few words as to the merits of your Catarrh Cure. For the last 10 years I have been troubled with Catarrh of the head and stomach and during that time have tried all kinds of other Remedies with no results, until I tried your Catarrh Cure which I am glad to say has cured me. I highly recommend it to those who are suffering with this disease."

YESTERDAY IN HOUSE

Dr. Schaffner's Haste is Deprecated in the House of Commons—Wireless for Vessels

EIGHT HOUR LAW

Ottawa, Feb. 14.—The Minister of Marine introduced in the House of Commons yesterday a bill to compel all passenger vessels to be equipped with a wireless telegraph system. The bill applies to all vessels carrying more than fifty passengers, except vessels plying between ports less than 200 miles apart. It is evident this would exempt vessels on the great lakes.

The bill was read a first time, as was also a bill by J. Stanfield (Colchester), to amend the Inspection and Sale Act so as to oblige millers and packers to mark the weight on each bag containing flour or meal.

During consideration of the amended bill respecting the Canadian Northern Ontario Railway Co., N. Nesbitt (North Oxford) moved the introduction of a clause providing that the company shall not enter upon or cross highways except with the consent of the municipalities affected.

Mr. Guthrie opposed the amendments, arguing that while such a clause was included in recent railway charters it was not necessary in the case of branch line charters of the C.P.R., G.T.R. and C.N.R., which were all under the jurisdiction of the Railway Commission, and the latter might be depended upon to see justice done to the municipalities.

Mr. Nesbitt withdrew his objection, and the bill went through.

The amended bills to incorporate the Security Trusts Corporation, and respecting the Algoma Central and Hudson Bay Railway Co. were also passed.

Mr. Macdonnel of Toronto was informed that last year the Government paid $1,909,533 in bounties on iron and steel, and $382,912 in drawbacks to manufacturers upon dutiable materials entering into manufactured goods exported.

The timely, if much discussed, topic of grain elevators was again debated at some length, on a resolution proposed by Dr. Schaffner (Souris, Man.), as follows: "The present system of operating terminal and transfer elevators is detrimental to the interests of the western grain producers, and that the Government should take immediate steps to operate terminal elevators at Fort William and Port Arthur and the transfer elevators between those terminals and the Atlantic seaboard."

Mr. Neely replied that the Government had already introduced in the Senate a measure dealing with the grain elevator business, placing its management in the hands of a commission.

He moved in amendment that the House take no action on Dr. Schaffner's resolution, pending consideration of the Government's bill.

Then the majority of the western members, as well as a number from the east, were heard from the Conservatives, supporting the motion, and the Liberals the amendment.

Hon. Frank Oliver thought the Government would not be justified in taking full responsibility for terminal and transfer elevators. It behooved any sane Government to move cautiously, and this Government could not undertake this huge responsibility without thorough enquiry into the matter.

Dr. Schaffner's resolution was voted down by 98 to 54.

Mr. Verville's eight-hour bill was given its third reading. Dr. Sproule, Dr. Edwards and Mr. Hodgins spoke against it.

THEIR FORTUNE A DREAM.

Toronto Heirs-Expectant Get a Cruel Shock.

Philadelphia, Feb. 14.—To feel pretty well assured of an heirship to a considerable slice of over one hundred million dollars' worth of property in the heart of Philadelphia, and to be informed that all their fees for searches and trips to and from this place and Toronto, had gone for naught, is the disappointment that two residents of Toronto, Canada, carried home with them last week.

George Heise, 270 Huron street, and his son Clarence W., a clerk for the C.P.R., living in 23 Bellevue place, Toronto, are the victims. They claimed a portion of the estate of the late Col. Jacob Baker, who died over 100 years ago. Three daughters located in Ontario, and the Heises are descendants of one of these.

The Department of Internal Affairs informed young Heise and his lawyer that very many had come to Harrisburg on a similar quest, and the hint was dropped that he would be money in pocket should he decide to return to his desk and dismiss all thoughts of profiting by the demise of the late colonel.

At the City Hall, Heise and his lawyer were told that the Baker estate is non-existent. They were informed that about 1,500 letters covering the years that have intervened between 1676 and this time, requesting information as to the estate, are on file or heaped in a box. Some are said to be from other Ontario parties.

The trail of blighted hopes may be traced by means of the letters, many of them yellowed with age, from the rockbound coast of New England to the great lakes, to the Gulf and clear out to the Pacific slope, where it is summer all the year round.

Alderman Threatened.

Toronto, Feb. 14.—A woman answering to the name of Appeline Belland appeared in the police court yesterday on a normal charge of vagrancy. She is being held, however, pending a medical examination as to her sanity for she is thought to have sent the following threatening letter to Ald. N. Boyd:

"Burn, you blood-sucker, you have murdered all my flesh and blood. Remember, brute, you shall not get out of my hands. You cannot do anything for me after your cutting the flesh of my bones; you have no heart anyhow. So come to a point of business with me. But I shall do my duty, and get a brute like you out of sight. Any time will suit me. I am your

"Murderer."

(Signed) "Miss Appeline Belland."

Ald. Boyd received but one letter, and this he turned over to the police. Miss Belland was arrested Saturday. She is thought to be mentally deranged.

Manitoba to Debate Tariff.

Winnipeg, Feb. 14.—The Manitoba Legislature will pronounce this week on the question of reciprocity. At the session last night T. C. Norris, leader of the Opposition, gave notice of a resolution which he will move on Thursday, approving of the reciprocity agreement, and asking the Dominion Government to give its immediate sanction. He also suggests that the Dominion Government give further consideration to the question of lower duties on agricultural implements. It is understood that the Government is likely to introduce an amendment regretting the tendency to break away from Imperial ties, and suggesting that at the next Imperial Conference preferential tariff be taken up, and also the question of free trade within the Empire.

Milkman Dies on Rounds.

Barrie, Feb. 14.—R. Reynolds, a man 67 years of age, died on the seat of his milk sleigh while on his rounds, just before noon yesterday. His nephew, who was with him, had left him only about five minutes previous to his death, to deliver milk about a block away. On returning he met the horse traveling the street at its leisure with the occupant dead on the seat of the rig.

The body was hurried to the office of Dr. Arnall, but nothing could be done, as life had become extinct. Coroner Wells was called in, and announced death as being due to heart failure. Deceased was a leading member of the local corps of the Salvation Army. A widow and five children survive.

WIDE IN ITS SCOPE

Bill Introduced to Protect Workmen's Scaffold—W. H. Hoyle Withdraws Line Fence Measure

PUBLIC SCHOOL BILL

Toronto, Feb. 14.—Two Opposition, 23 Government private members and eight Cabinet Ministers worked like beavers at the Ontario Legislature yesterday afternoon. The ladies' gallery was empty, while the Speaker's gallery was graced by one lady visitor and an usher. Twenty-five attentive male auditors in the visitors' gallery essayed the task of following the proceedings. This was one of perplexity and difficulty, as the House largely worked in committee on statutory revision.

Sir James Whitney's bill for the protection of persons employed in the construction of buildings empowers the Government to appoint as many inspectors of scaffolding as may be necessary in cases where the municipality does not appoint a sufficient number of inspectors.

A clause is printed strictly prohibiting the erection of scaffolding which is "unsafe, unsuitable or improper," in not affording "proper protection to the life and limb."

Swinging scaffolding more than 20 feet from the ground, must have a safety rail.

A number of regulations in seven additional clauses prescribe the regulations to govern different classes of buildings.

An interim report was presented to the House from two commissioners Chief Justice Sir Charles Moss and Mr. Justice Garrow, on the Windsor Cemetery incorporation bill.

The commissioners reported that the bill should not be allowed to pass, as it in effect was a forfeiture of the property of the Windsor Improvement Co. The report said that "the mere lack of organization for many years does not cause a extinction of corporate existence." The commissioners did not return the bill, and after those having interests in the Windsor Improvement Co. have been heard from, may present the bill in a changed form with additions.

W. H. Hoyle, Conservative, North Ontario, brought up his bill respecting line fences. The object of the bill was to make the restrictions in regard to line fences more rigid.

Sir Jame Whitney asked for the bill's withdrawal on the ground that it curtailed to too great an extent the liberty of the farmers. "This bill," he said, "is an interference with a man's control of his own property."

The bill was withdrawn.

P. H. Bowyer's (East Kent) bill to amend the Public Schools Act was given a second reading.

Another contest to abolish exemptions in lands used in connection with churches, schools, and cemeteries was inaugurated by C. R. McKeown, Dufferin, Conservative, who moved his bill to amend the assessment act by repealing a series of exemption clauses, including three new exemptions.

The buildings and grounds of and attached to or otherwise bona fide used in connection with and for the purpose of every university, high school, public or separate school. The buildings and grounds of every seminary of learning, maintained for philanthropic, religious or educational purposes.

Considerable progress was made in committee with the statutory revision.

Loses a Fortune.

Macon, Ga., Feb. 14.—Executors of the estate of the late H. J. Lamar of Macon are defending the suit of Lamar Washington for an eighth interest in a half million dollars on the ground that when young Washington wedded Miss Lucille Grave Osborne of New York several years ago, he did not obtain the consent of his aunt, as stipulated in the Lamar will. When a youth, he was adopted by his uncle, the late H. J. Lamar, and in consideration of the lad's "transfer," the uncle paid Lamar's father, Col. W. H. Washington of Nashville, $10,000.

Will Sue the Doctor.

Montreal, Feb. 14.—The fact that a man, named R. Hutt, was sent to the city on Friday by a doctor in Valleyfield, suffering from smallpox, is causing no little concern in the health department at the City Hall. The medical health officer stated yesterday that he would take legal proceedings against the Valleyfield physician for his action.

PURIFIED HIS BLOOD

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills Healed Mr. Wilson's Sores

When the sewers of the body—bowels, kidneys and skin ducts—get clogged up, the blood quickly becomes impure and frequently sores break out over the body. The way to heal them, as Mr. Richard Wilson, who lives near London, Ont., found, is to purify the blood. He writes:

"For some time I had been in a low, depressed condition. My appetite left me and I soon began to suffer from indigestion. Quite a number of small sores and blotches formed all over my skin. I tried medicine for the blood and used many kinds of ointments, but without satisfactory results. What was wanted was a thorough cleansing of the blood, and I looked about in vain for some medicine that would accomplish this.

At last Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills were brought to my notice, and they are one of the most wonderful medicines I have ever known. My blood was purified in a very short time, sores healed up, my indigestion vanished. They always have a place in my home and are looked upon as the family remedy."

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cleanse the system thoroughly. Sold by all dealers at 25c a box. 6

Challenged Him to Duel.

Atlantic City, N.J., Feb. 14.—When J. W. Arnold, eldest brother of missing Dorothy Arnold, visited Geo. S. Griscom, jr., in Florence, Italy, he challenged the lawyer's son to a duel, according to reports here to-day. When Griscom refused to accept the challenge, young Arnold used his fists on Griscom. It was also stated that the fight was based on visit made by the missing girl to Griscom several summers ago, while the latter was in Boston, and when Miss Arnold was staying with a young married girl friend there.

Cargo of Opium Destroyed.

San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 14.—Details of a fire which destroyed the British steamer Kumsang, of the India-China line, and a cargo of $50,000 worth of opium, which smugglers expected to sneak in here, were brought by passengers on the steamers. The fire, they say, broke out in the opium chests in the forward hold of the steamer three days out from Singapore. All efforts to stop it were ineffective and the officers sealed up the hold and ran for the coast.

Vagrant Swindled Ministers.

Rochester, N.Y., Feb. 14.—Eugene P. McPherson, aged 23 years, of Connecticut avenue, Buffalo, was sent to the penitentiary yesterday for six months on a charge of vagrancy. He managed to elude the officer, taking him from the detention room, and made his escape. McPherson was arrested on the complaint of a score of ministers, who said he swindled them out of money with a hard luck story.

Nerves Are Exhausted

And Nervous Prostration or Paralysis Are Creeping Steadily Upon You

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

You hear of people suddenly falling victims of nervous prostration or some forms of paralysis. But when you get all the facts of the case you find that they have had months or years of warning.

They haven't slept well. There has been frequent attacks of nervous headache. Digestion has failed. They have been irritable, easily worried and excited and have found memory and concentration failing.

Had they but known that these symptoms tell of exhausted nerves or had they realized their danger they would have restored the feeble, wasted nerve by use of such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

This great restorative treatment cures by forming new, rich blood and by rebuilding the wasted nerve cells. No medicine is more certain to prove beneficial, for each dose adds to the system a certain amount of rich, red blood.

Nervous diseases come on slowly and can only be overcome by patient and persistent treatment. Prevention is always better than cure, and for this reason you should endeavour to keep the system at high water mark by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food at the first sign of trouble. 50 cents a box, 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Union Stock Yards.

TORONTO, Feb. 13.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 86 carloads, consisting of 1583 cattle, 331 hogs, 1120 sheep and lambs and 2 calves.

Exporters.

Geo B. Campbell bought for Morris & Co., 50 steers, 1350 lbs. each, at $6 25; 100 steers for Liverpool, 1250 lbs. each, at $6.10.

Butchers.

Prime picked lots sold at $6 to $6.25; loads of good, $5.75 to $6; medium, $5.50 to $5.75; common, $5 to $5.40; cows, $3.50 to $5.25; bulls, $4 to $5; canners, $2.75 to $3.

Milkers and Springers.

Veal Calves.

Trade was strong for veal calves, at $8.50 to $8.75, and two choice, new, milk-fed brought $9.25 and $9.50 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Wesley Dunn, who handled nearly all the sheep and lambs, reported prices as follows: Sheep, ewes, $4.25 to $4.75; rams, $3.50 to $4; lambs, $6 to $6.60, and one choice bunch of 15 selects, $6.80 per cwt.

Hogs.

We asked three dealers the price of hogs, and each gave a different price. The first one gave $6.50, the second one gave $7, the third one gave $7.10 to $7.15, as the f.o.b. price of hogs, with 25c on top of these quotations for fed and watered.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Feb. 13.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market the receipts of live stock for the week ending Feb. 11 were 1,700 cattle, 1,175 sheep and lambs, 2,250 hogs and 400 calves. The supply for sale on the market this morning consisted of 900 cattle, 125 sheep and lambs, 1,200 hogs and 100 calves.

There was no important change in the condition of the market for cattle, prices being firmly maintained on the advance noted a week ago, owing to the fact that supplies were no larger, and, as the quality of the stock was generally good, the demand was active, and a brisk trade was done, as butchers in most cases were pretty well cleaned out of beef. Choice steers sold at 6¼c, good at 6¼c, fairly good at 6c to 6¼c, fair at 5½c to 5¾c, and the lower grades at 4½c to 5¼c per lb. Extra choice bulls brought 6c to 5¾c, and from that down to 5c per lb. was paid for the lower grades.

Supplies of hogs were fair, for which the demand from packers was good, and in consequence the tone of the market was steady, with no change in prices to note. Selected lots sold at $8 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars.

The trade in sheep and lambs was quiet on account of the small offerings, and prices were unchanged. The demand was good for what stock was on the market, and sales of sheep were made at 4½c to 4¾c, and lambs at 6½c to 6¾c per lb. Calves were very scarce, and prices have advanced with sales of choice stock as high as 7½c to 8c per lb., and the commoner ones at 5c to 7c per lb.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, Feb. 13.—Cattle—Receipts, 2,200 head; market active and steady; prime steers, $6.10 to $6.25; outside grades, $5.75 to $6.05; cows, $4.25 to $5.25.

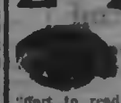
Toronto, Feb. 14.—Not yet has the famous Michael Fraser case come to an end. Yesterday, Catherine McCormack, one of those who brought action to set aside the marriage, and who sought to show that Michael, the octogenarian, was not competent to manage his own business, gave notice of appeal to the Divisional Court, the argument of which will be heard to-day. Justice Britton tried the case, and, after visiting the old man, declared he was quite capable of marrying Miss Robertson or doing anything else without the direction his relatives.

The Care Of The E--Y--E--S



A person in good health, at the age of 45 years, will ordinarily notice a change in the sight, requiring more effort to read fine print, or to see small objects.

It would then be advisable to have the eyes examined by a Competent Eyesight Specialist and fitted with "Preserving or Rest Glasses".

This would give great comfort and prevent eye-strain, which is the cause of much trouble in after years.

Glasses should be changed usually once in two years.

Headaches are often warnings that the eyes need help and they should not be neglected.

The Eyes are the most important organs of the five senses, and generally the most abused.

Many Eyes Are Ruined by wearing cheap and imperfect glasses.

"THE INNOCENT MURDERERS"

By Wm. Johnston and Paul West

"You positively insist, then?" It was Gordon speaking.

"I do, positively," said the girl. "You have trusted me thus far; why not a little further? Rather than tell you now my purpose in coming to New York, the reason I had to have the money and who gave it to me in the first place, I would take the train back to Graydon, even though that would certainly cause the death of—of somebody who trusts me. Do not think me cruel; don't misunderstand me in any way. I love you, George, and would tell you anything else you might ask. But in this I have given my word and must keep it."

There was silence for a little, before Gordon spoke. He said:

"Very well, Ernesta. I have nothing to do but to trust you. Inasmuch as you told me from the beginning that I would get no explanation of your strange actions until the proper time, it would be illogical for me to insist on it at this late hour. I must continue to trust you. But—but I wish I knew."

"You must wait!"

"Until—until—when we are married?"

"Yes, when we are married I will tell you all. And it will be nothing that you will regret hearing."

"I will wait."

For some time there was nothing more said. The detective was glad, for he was very busy eating. But when he again heard the voice of Gordon he laid down his knife and fork and strained his ears to catch the words. Gordon said:

"I don't know what you mean?" Evidently, thought Sullivan, a reply to some question of the girl's.

"I believe you do," she said. "There is something on your mind, on your conscience. Several times when I have watched you I have seen you jump as though you saw something. You act like a man afraid of—of course I don't know what; but I am sure there is something. Won't you tell me?"

"Ridiculous!" exclaimed Gordon. "There is nothing on my conscience—nothing." He made a brave effort to laugh, but the attempt was a failure.

"He don't fool me," thought the detective. "He's in bad, somehow."

Ernesta hesitated.

"I am not deceived, George," she said. "I know you are keeping something from me. Tell me, is it—is it anything about the gossip concerning my leaving Graydon so hurriedly?"

"Nothing that concerns you," said he. His reply convinced her all the more fully that there was something. If she could only have guessed the truth! If she could only have seen the pictures that continually haunted Gordon; pictures of Hopkins! In some of them he was lying as they had left him, headed over with sawdust and boards. In others he was rising from the pile and coming toward the group of cowering professors, with accused finger and mocking smile. Indeed, there was something on Gordon's mind!

"Very well," said Ernesta, after a pause, "if you won't tell me I can't help you. Whatever it is, will you promise to let me know what it is when—when we are married?"

"I promise," said he. He added, as though to change the subject: "By the way, where have you decided to stay to-night?"

Ernesta named a hotel well-known to New England folk from rural districts, adding:

"And you?"

"I had not thought," said Gordon. "I will find an hotel, somewhere. I must write to Dean Quimby before it is too late to get the letter in the last mail. He must hear from me in the morning. If you are willing, I will now see you to your hotel, and make arrangements for meeting you to-morrow."

"I don't know how to plan for to-morrow exactly," said the girl. "I shall go to see — to the necessary place as early as possible. About 9 o'clock, I guess. My business will not take long. After that—"

"After that, suppose I meet you," said Gordon. "If you will suggest a place. How about right at the place you are going to?"

She dissented so quickly that Gordon was suspicious.

"No! No," she said. "Not right there; but—in Madison Square, at 10 o'clock. Will you be there?"

"Anywhere you wish," said Gordon, coolly. "Now, shall we go?"

They had paid their check, so that there was no delay. Sullivan had not counted on how they would go out from the cafe, and when they turned his side of the post it was too late for him to get out of the way. Gordon did not appear to notice him, but Ernesta did, and though Sullivan knew that she could not have recognised him, never having seen him, he could not account for the startled look she gave him as she passed.

"I wonder if I imagined it," said he to himself, "or if she really did look at me as though she had seen me before."

He did not rise to follow them at once. In short, he had no intention of trying to keep on their track to-night, for he knew where to find Ernesta, and was sure that as long as she was in New York, Gordon would not try to get away. In the course of a quarter of an hour the detective left the cafe and strolled over to Broadway. Leisurely he walked down that thoroughfare until he reached the hotel at which Ernesta had signified her intention of staying. He went in and looked at the register. Her name was on it in a feminine hand. He smiled.

"Well," said he, "I guess I might as well go to bed now. And here's as good a place as any."

He signed his name to the book—"John McConnell, Pittsburg, Penn.," and was assigned to a room.

"Leave a call for me at 7 o'clock," he said. He did not notice the number of the room given him, but went to bed.

He slept well and awakened in the morning with a clear head and a body full of energy. As he left his room a young woman came out of the one next to his, and went rapidly down the hall. As she passed the detective's door he was standing inside, fixing the spring lock. She gave a fleeting glance in his direction, and uttered a frightened little cry. Before he could see her face she had passed, but one glance at the back of the fleeting figure made him recede into his room with an exclamation of surprise.

"By all the gods!" he said to himself, "if I haven't had the next room to her!"

He was afraid she had recognized him. Surely the careful glance she had given him the night previous would be enough to make her remember him if she had never seen him before that occasion. Now, the fact of finding him here, in such a place that she must know he was shadowing her, would arouse all sorts of suspicions in her breast.

"I'll keep out of her sight from now on," he thought. He realized that he must not give up his intention of following her to Madison Square. He might stay around the park and try to see her when she met Gordon at ten o'clock, however. So he had breakfast and strolled down in the direction of Twenty-third street.

He watched Madison Square from half past nine to nearly 11 o'clock. No signs of either Ernesta or Gordon. As the minutes sped by and they did not come, the detective's confidence in their ultimate appearance began to wane. At last he was convinced that he had been hoodwinked. Either they had known that he had been listening during their meal at the hotel, the night before, and led him on a false scent, or else the girl's view of him this morning had made her suspicious and altered her plans.

At last, Sullivan, utterly crushed and ashamed of himself, left the Square. He went back to the hotel and looked around. There was no Ernesta, no Gordon. He asked the clerk if Miss Frost had given up her room, and found that, as she had arrived with no baggage, the night before, she had paid in advance for one day only.

"Tricked!" said Sullivan to himself in extreme anger at his idiocy. "Tricked! My trip for nothing and further than ever from the Hopkins case solution! I'll never dare go back to Boston or Graydon!"

The day brought forth nothing to him. He roamed the streets in the one chance that in all the millions of people he might be able to find either Gordon or Ernesta Frost. Such encounters only occur when least desired, in New York, however, and wearily, sadly, shamefacedly, Sullivan reentered the hotel at dinner time and took a seat in the men's cafe, whence he could watch the lobby of the hotel. There was only one hope remaining—perhaps something had come up to delay the girl another night. It was a faint hope, but the only one he had to fall back on.

Sullivan ate his dinner moodily, with a paper before him. He was just about to rise, when he saw Ernesta enter the front door of the hotel. He could have shouted with delight. The girl was followed by Gordon, who carried a valise, a new one, which he handed to her, and she went to the desk to register. Then she spoke a few words to Gordon, and went into the elevator. Sullivan saw Gordon, a smile of happiness on his face, cross to the news stand, and buy an evening paper. Then, selecting a seat in the lobby, fortunately so situated that Sullivan could watch his every movement without being seen, he sat down and began to read.

"She's gone upstairs to change her clothes," thought the detective. "She bought that hat to-day, that's sure, and probably some finery—a waist or something. He's waiting for her to come down again. I'll just keep an eye on him."

Gordon read the headlines on the first page carelessly, looking up at the clock every few minutes, as though impatient at the slow passing of the time. Suddenly Sullivan saw him start, clutch the page which he held so tightly that he tore the paper and made those sitting near him look at him in surprise. His eyes were fastened on a paragraph at the bottom of the first page. He read it searchingly, and then, with his mouth forming an exclamation, and his face wearing an expression which denoted that he had seen something which caused him fear or pain, he leaped to his feet and began to walk up and down the lobby in extreme nervousness.

"What in the dickens has he just read?" thought Sullivan. "Let's see what paper was that?" He could read the heading as Gordon still held the paper clutched in one hand. Sullivan hurried out to the news stand on the sidewalk, through the cafe door, and bought a paper like Gordon's. Then, standing where he could still see the man in the lobby, he read the headlines on the flaring page. Near the bottom of a column he saw this:

"Prof. Albert Rassignol Arrives."

"Albert Rassignol" thought Sullivan. "Where have I heard that name before? By George, I know! The young Frenchman that used to be at Graydon—that Ernesta was in love with! So! He's back in America, and Gordon didn't know it till he saw it in the paper! No wonder he was shocked! Look at him—he's like a crazy man! What's he asking the clerk? To find out if Miss Frost isn't ready, I'll bet. He can't wait to call her for what she's done. I don't blame him, either! By George, but that girl's a wonder! Elopes with old Hopkins, shakes him—gets Gordon to join her so she can cash old Hopkin's check for five thousand dollars—and now she's making ready to give Gordon the go by and run away with the Frenchman, her first love! Here she comes!"

A sudden move of Gordon's toward the elevator in the hotel caught his attention. The elevator opened, and from it emerged Ernesta. She had changed her waist and hat, and looked extremely pretty—prettier even than she had yet appeared to the detective. Her face wore a happy smile as she stepped toward Gordon, but as she caught his expression the smile gave way first to a look of surprise, then of horror. He caught her by the arm, before she could speak, and, before the lobby full of people, he held the crumpled paper up so that she could read. Sullivan, in the meanwhile, had hurried into the cafe, and stood at the door, so that he could hear what was being said.

"Pneumonia"

Pneumonia is nothing more or less than "Lung Fever," or as it used to be called, "Inflammation of the Lungs" and the results come entirely from a local source, such as taking a violent cold.

There is more or less difficulty in breathing: a cough, at first dry, but soon accompanied by raising a thick, sticky, rusty-colored matter, composed of a mixture of phlegm and blood.

There is only one way to prevent Pneumonia, and that is to cure the cold just as soon as it appears. Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup will do this quickly and effectively.

Mrs. G. W. Bowman, Pattullo, Ont., writes: "Three years ago I caught a cold which ended in a severe attack of Pneumonia. Since that time, at the beginning of each winter, I seem to catch cold very easily. I have been so hoarse that I was unable to speak loud enough to be heard across the room. Last winter, however, a friend advised me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, saying it had helped her. I bought a bottle and before it was half used I was completely cured. I also find it a good medicine for the children when they have colds."

THAT AWFUL BACKACHE

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Morton's Gap, Kentucky.—"I suffered two years with female disorders, my health was very bad and I had a continual backache which was simply awful. I could not stand on my feet long enough to cook a meal's victuals without my back nearly killing me, and I would have such dragging sensations I could hardly bear it. I had soreness in each side, could not stand tight clothing, and was irregular. I was completely run down. On advice I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills and am enjoying good health. It is now more than two years and I have not had an ache or pain since I do all my own work, washing and everything, and never have the backache any more. I think your medicine is grand and I praise it to all my neighbors. If you think my testimony will help others you may publish it."—Mrs. OLLIE WOODALL, Morton's Gap, Kentucky.

Backache is a symptom of organic weakness or derangement. If you have backache don't neglect it. To get permanent relief you must reach the root of the trouble. Nothing we know of will do this so surely as Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound.

SENSITIVE CELLS

Did Not Work as Prisoners Suspected a Trap was Set

A reminder of the Pearl Bryan murder case, in which the headless body of the girl was found near Ft. Thomas years ago, has been removed from the city hall. T he two sensitive cells that were built expressly on the order of the late Chief Deitsch, in order to hear what Jackson and Walling might have to say when placed together, were torn out and sold to a neighboring town. After Jackson and Walling had been arrested, efforts were made to have them tell where the head of Pearl Bryan was. They both declared they did not know. Chief Deitsch heard of the sensitive cells and had two of them built. They had sounding boards and a canopy of sensitized steel that was guaranteed to carry sound a long way. The cells were built in the basement of the city hall, next to the storage room of the police department. The two men were placed in the cells and Chief Deitsch and a corps of detectives stationed themselves in the House of Detention, where the sound pipe ended. They heard something like this: "This is a scheme, Walling. Be careful what you say. Deitsch has kept us apart for some time and now he suddenly places us in the same cell. There is a scheme of some kind."

"I believe you are right," replied Walling.

"I know I am right. Look at this ceiling. It is different from anything else. We will just pay our compliments to Col. Deitsch and if he is listening he will hear what we think of him."

The prisoners then said some things that caused the chief to turn red. Turning to Detective Billy Jackson, now chief of police, he said: "Here, Billy, you listen a while."

Jackson listened for a time and then turned away.

"What are they saying?" asked the chief.

"They are talking about minor matters."

"Yes, they are calling the chief of police names, eh?"

"Yes, sir; that is it."

Jackson and Walling were in the cell about 24 hours, but during all that time they did not say a single incriminating word. The fact that the cells were in existence soon became noised about and no one would be trapped in them. As they had outlived their usefulness Inspector Callahan recommended that they be sold.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

OVERHEARD BY CLUB WAITER

"Look here, old man, I want your advice. I've been thinking seriously of marrying lately, and—I may as well make a clean breast of it; there are two girls simply chucking themselves at my head, and I can't make up my mind. The one I prefer, really, hasn't a penny of her own; the other is simply rolling in money, but I don't seem to care a button for her somehow. What would you do in the circumstances?"

"Good heavens, man! Do you mean to say you hesitate for a moment? What is life without love? It embellishes one's whole existence. It—it—why, I could go on for hours about it."

"You mean you'd give the shekels the go-by?"

"Give them the go-by! I should just think I would unless you want to be miserable for the rest of your life." (After a pause.) "I say, though, you might give me the name and address of that girl you don't care about."

SIGN POSTS FOR AVIATORS

A German aeronaut has devised a system of orientation which will help the German aviator, at least, in finding his way through the air. Each German province is provided with a number, and every community is provided with a letter. A guide book to be carried by the aviator contains a list of provinces and towns similarly designated. Thus, if an aviator sees the character "40 A 1" painted upon the roof of a house in Rhineau he knows immediately where he is by referring to his book. At night these signs are to be illuminated. The system is now actually being installed in Germany.

When a fellow is slippery it is sometimes necessary to walk over him rough shod.

"THE INNOCENT MURDERERS"

By Wm. Johnston and Paul West

"You positively insist, then?" It was Gordon speaking.

"I do, positively," said the girl. "You have trusted me thus far; why not a little further? Rather than tell you now my purpose in coming to New York, the reason I had to have the money and who gave it to me in the first place, I would take the train back to Graydon, even though that would certainly cause the death of—of somebody who trusts me. Do not think me cruel; don't misunderstand me in any way. I love you, George, and would tell you anything else you might ask. But in this I have given my word and must keep it."

There was silence for a little, before Gordon spoke. He said:

"Very well, Ernesta. I have nothing to do but to trust you. Inasmuch as you told me from the beginning that I would get no explanation of your strange actions until the proper time, it would be illogical for me to insist on it at this late hour. I must continue to trust you. But—but I wish I knew."

"You must wait!"

"Until—until—when we are married?"

"Yes, when we are married I will tell you all. And it will be nothing that you will regret hearing."

"I will wait."

For some time there was nothing more said. The detective was glad, for he was very busy eating. But when he again heard the voice of Gordon he laid down his knife and fork and strained his ears to catch the words. Gordon said:

"I don't know what you mean?" Evidently, thought Sullivan, a reply to some question of the girl's.

"I believe you do," she said. "There is something on your mind, on your conscience. Several times when I have watched you I have seen you jump as though you saw something. You act like a man afraid of—of course I don't know what; but I am sure there is something. Won't you tell me?"

"Ridiculous!" exclaimed Gordon. "There is nothing on my conscience—nothing." He made a brave effort to laugh, but the attempt was a failure.

"He don't fool me," thought the detective. "He's in bad, somehow."

Ernesta hesitated.

"I am not deceived, George," she said. "I know you are keeping something from me. Tell me, is it—is it anything about the gossip concerning my leaving Graydon so hurriedly?"

"Nothing that concerns you," said he. His reply convinced her all the more fully that there was something. If she could only have guessed the truth! "Very well," said Ernesta, after a pause, "if you won't tell me I can't help you. Whatever it is, will you promise to let me know what it is when—when we are married?"

"I promise," said he. He added, as though to change the subject: "By the way, where have you decided to stay to-night?"

Ernesta named a hotel well-known to New England folk from rural districts, adding:

Such encounters only occur when least desired, in New York, however, and wearily, sadly, shamefacedly, Sullivan reentered the hotel at dinner time and took a seat in the men's cafe, whence he could watch the lobby of the hotel. There was only one hope remaining—perhaps something had come up to delay the girl another night. It was a faint hope, but the only one he had to fall back on.

Sullivan ate his dinner moodily, with a paper before him. He was just about to rise, when he saw Ernesta enter the front door of the hotel. He could have shouted with delight. The girl was followed by Gordon, who carried a valise, a new one, which he handed to her, and she went to the desk to register. Then she spoke a few words to Gordon and went into the elevator. Sullivan saw Gordon, a smile of happiness on his face, cross to the news stand, and buy an evening paper. Then, selecting a seat in the lobby, fortunately so situated that Sullivan could watch his every movement without being seen, he sat down and began to read.

"She's gone upstairs to change her clothes," thought the detective. "She bought that bag to-day, that's sure, and probably some finery—a waist or something. He's waiting for her to come down again. I'll just keep watch on him."

Gordon read the headlines on the first page carelessly, looking up at the clock every few minutes, as though impatient at the slow passing of the time. Suddenly Sullivan saw him start, clutch the page which he held so tightly that he tore the paper and made those sitting near him look at him in surprise. His eyes were fastened on a paragraph at the bottom of the first page. He read it searchingly, and then, with his mouth forming an exclamation, and his face wearing an expression which denoted that he had seen something which caused him fear or pain, he leaped to his feet and began to walk up and down the lobby in extreme nervousness.

"What in the dickens has he just read?" thought Sullivan. "Let's see what paper was that?" He could read the heading as Gordon still held the paper clutched in one hand. Sullivan hurried out to the news stand on the sidewalk, through the cafe door, and bought a paper like Gordon's. Then, standing where he could still see the man in the lobby, he read the headlines on the flaring page. Near the bottom of a column he saw this:

"Prof. Albert Rassignol Arrives."

"Albert Rassignol" thought Sullivan. "Where have I heard that name before? By George, I know! The young Frenchman that used to be at Graydon—that Ernesta was in love with! So! He's back in America, and Gordon didn't know it till he saw it in the paper! No wonder he was shocked! Look at him—he's like a crazy man! What's he asking the clerk? To find out if Miss Frost isn't ready, I'll bet. He can't wait to call her for what she's done. I don't blame him, either! By George, but that girl's a wonder! Elopes with old Hopkins, shakes him—gets Gordon to join her so she can cash old Hopkin's check for five thousand dollars—and now she's making ready to give Gordon the go by and run away with the Frenchman, her first love! Here she comes!"

A sudden move of Gordon's, toward the elevator in the hotel caught his attention. The elevator opened, and from it emerged Ernesta. She had changed her waist and hat, and looked extremely pretty—prettier even than she had yet appeared to the detective. Her face wore a happy smile as she stepped toward Gordon, but as she caught his expression the smile gave way first to a look of surprise, then of horror. He caught her by the arm, before she could speak, and, before the lobby full of people, he held the crumpled paper up so that she could read. Sullivan, in the meanwhile, had hurried into the cafe, and stood at the door, so that he could hear what was being said

Pneumonia is nothing more or less than "Lung Fever," or as it used to be called, "Inflammation of the Lungs" and the results come entirely from a local source, such as taking a violent cold.

There is more or less difficulty in breathing: a cough, at first dry, but soon accompanied by raising a thick, sticky, rusty-colored matter, composed of a mixture of phlegm and blood.

There is only one way to prevent Pneumonia, and that is to cure the cold just as soon as it appears. Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup will do this quickly and effectively.

Mrs. G. W. Bowman, Pattulo, Ont., writes: "Three years ago I caught a cold which ended in a severe attack of Pneumonia. Since that time, at the beginning of each winter, I seem to catch cold very easily. I have been so hoarse that I was unable to speak loud enough to be heard across the room. Last winter, however, a friend advised me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, saying it had helped her. I bought a bottle and before it was half used I was completely cured. I also find it a good medicine for the children when they have colds."

THAT AWFUL BACKACHE

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Morton's Gap, Kentucky.—"I suffered two years with female disorders, my health was very bad and I had a continual backache which was simply awful. I could not stand on my feet long enough to cook a meal's victuals without my back nearly killing me, and I would have such dragging sensations I could hardly bear it. I had soreness in each side, could not stand tight clothing, and was irregular. I was completely run down. On advice I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills and am enjoying good health. It is now more than two years and I have not had an ache or pain since. I do all my own work, washing and everything, and never have the backache any more. I think your medicine is grand and I praise it to all my neighbors. If you think my testimony will help others you may publish it."—Mrs. OLLIE WOODALL, Morton's Gap, Kentucky.

Backache is a symptom of organic weakness or derangement. If you have backache don't neglect it. To get permanent relief you must reach the root of the trouble. Nothing we know of will do this so surely as Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound.

Write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., for special advice. Your letter will be absolutely confidential, and the advice free

SENSITIVE CELLS

Did Not Work as Prisoners Suspected a Trap was Set

A reminder of the Pearl Bryan murder case, in which the headless body of the girl was found near Ft. Thomas years ago, has been removed from the city hall. The two sensitive cells that were built expressly on the order of the late Chief Deitsch, in order to hear what Jackson and Walling might have to say when placed together, were torn out and sold to a neighboring town. After Jackson and Walling had been arrested, efforts were made to have them tell where the head of Pearl Bryan was. They both declared they did not know. Chief Deitsch heard of the sensitive cells and had two of them built. They had sounding boards and a canopy of sensitized steel that was guaranteed to carry sound a long way. The cells were built in the basement of the city hall, next to the storage room of the police department. The two men were placed in the cells and Chief Deitsch and a corps of detectives stationed themselves in the House of Detention, where the sound pipe ended. They heard something like this: "This is a scheme, Walling. Be careful what you say. Deitsch has kept us apart for some time and now he suddenly places us in the same cell. There is a scheme of some kind."

"I believe you are right," replied Walling.

"I know I am right. Look at this ceiling. It is different from anything else. We will just pay our compliments to Col. Deitsch and if he is listening he will hear what we think of him."

The prisoners then said some things that caused the chief to turn red. Turning to Detective Billy Jackson, now chief of police, he said: "Here, Billy, you listen a while."

Jackson listened for a time and then turned away.

"What are they saying?" asked the chief.

"They are talking about minor matters."

"Yes, they are calling the chief of police names, eh?"

"Yes, sir; that is it."

Jackson and Walling were in the cell about 24 hours, but during all that time they did not say a single incriminating word. The fact that the cells were in existence soon became noised about and no one would be trapped in them. As they had outlived their usefulness Inspector Callahan recommended that they be sold.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

OVERHEARD BY CLUB WAITER

"Look here, old man, I want your advice. I've been thinking seriously of marrying lately, and—I may as well make a clean breast of it; there are two girls simply chucking themselves at my head, and I can't make up my mind. The one I prefer, really, hasn't a penny of her own; the other is simply rolling in money, but I don't seem to care a button for her somehow. What would you do in the circumstances?"

"Good heavens, man! Do you mean to say you hesitate for a moment? What is life without love? It embellishes one's whole existence. It—it—why, I could go on for hours about it."

"You mean you'd give the shekels the go-by?"

"Give them the go-by! I should just think I would unless you want to be miserable for the rest of your life." (After a pause.) "I say, though, you might give me the name and address of that girl you don't care about."

SIGN POSTS FOR AVIATORS

A German aeronaut has devised a system of orientation which will help the German aviator, at least, in finding his way through the air. Each German province is provided with a number, and every community is provided with a letter. A guide book to be carried by the aviator contains a list of provinces and towns similarly designated. Thus, if an aviator sees the character "40 A 1" painted upon the roof of a house in Rhineau he knows immediately where he is by referring to his book. At night these signs are to be illuminated. The system is now actually being installed in Germany.

Canadian Doctors Prescribe and Recommend Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

The good results derived from the use of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, the great tonic stimulant, among leading doctors have been so marvelous that they feel it their duty to express themselves publicly for the benefit of the profession as well as the public health.

Known it Twenty Years

"I might say that I have known Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey for twenty years, and am happy to tell you that I consider it the purest and very best product on the market." Dr. J. J. A. Asselin, Ste. Rose, Quebec.

I Often Prescribe It

"I do not advocate indiscriminate use of alcohol, but I often prescribe it in moderate doses, especially for elderly people suffering from senile changes and debility. I order it to be taken during the principal meal of the day and well diluted. An important matter is to find a safe and reliable liquor. While I practised my profession in Boston, Mass., which I did for twenty-five years, I had frequent occasion to order Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey among my elderly patients, and I must say the result was to their advantage." Prosper Bender, M. D., Quebec, Que.

Beneficial Results

"I have employed Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey where indicated for a great many years with great success. I would not be without it, as it is a pure and palatable beverage. Have had the best results after lingering illness and in children and the old. Its low proof and delicate flavor make it most acceptable and beneficial, hastening convalescence." J. P. Sivewright, M. D., Chatham, Ont.

These are a few of the letters received from practising physicians throughout Canada, who, like their brothers in the United States, realize that Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is the greatest remedial agent and the most nutritious tonic stimulant for building up the weak, aiding digestion and prolonging life.

All grocers and liquor dealers or direct $1.25 a large bottle. Refuse substitutes and imitations; they are injurious. Send for free medical booklet and doctor's advice.

FORTY WINKS OF STATESMEN

Great Men Who Have Been Able to Fall Asleep Just When They Wanted To

Lord Morley, in his interesting Life of Richard Cobden, shows that one of the famous Free Traders greatest gifts was his ability to fall fast asleep whenever he wanted to do so. Mr. Gladstone also possessed this wonderful gift. He could sleep anywhere and often enjoyed "forty winks" on the Treasury Bench when his political opponents were hurling charges at him of which he was perfectly oblivious.

Lord Westbury could sleep almost at will. When in Parliament, and not wanted in the House, he would sit in the Library reading his briefs with an attention wholly absorbed. While so occupied he occasionally dropped off to sleep, and, awakening after a short interval, resumed his work without apparent effort. In the same way Lord Brougham found relief amidst his work, sleeping whenever he had the chance. Many anecdotes have been related of Pitt's habit of sleeping at odd moments. One day, when an attack was made by an antagonist on Lord North, who had a similar knack of sleeping, a member, thinking he was dozing, exclaimed, "The Premier is asleep."

"Not so," said the First Lord; "but I wish to Heaven I were."

On one occasion, when Burke was wearying his hearers by one of those long speeches which obtained for him the name of the "Dinner Bell," a nobleman happened to enter the House just as Selwyn was leaving it.

"Is the House up?" he inquired.

"No," replied Selwyn; "but Burke is"

The Duke of Wellington could sleep when he chose; and, according to his biographer, "It was one unbroken slumber with him, when in health, from the time he laid his head on the pillow until he rose again." Napoleon, also, could sleep at all odd moments.

Fischweiler asserted in his will that his own great age, 109, was entirely to be ascribed to his constant habit of sleeping with his head towards the north. We are told how, at a military hospital in Russia, some years ago, there were some sick patients of highly sensitive natures, who were rapidly recovering. But when removed to another wing of the building, they made no progress, so that it was found advisable to get them back to their former wards as quickly as possible, where the heads of the beds were to the north.

Lord Hartington never enjoyed sounder naps than his "forty winks" on the Treasury Bench.

Mr. Lloyd George has the happy gift of being able to sleep at any time. T. P. O'Connor tells the following story about the Chancellor's power of falling asleep at will.

"In the House of Commons," says T. P., "during one of the all-night sittings over the Budget, Mr. Haldane was left in charge. A critical moment arose, during which most other Ministers would have called for the immediate attendance of the official in charge of the Budget. Mr. Haldane sent to Mr. Lloyd George's room, and was brought back word that Lloyd George was lying fast asleep in a chair 'Leave him alone,' said Mr. Haldane, and cheerfully went on without him. A little sleep does some men and women immediate good, and Lloyd George is one of them. After half an hour's rest on a sofa or a couple of chairs he can return to work as fresh as if he had had a whole night's rest."

Swinburne, the poet, required very little sleep, and according to Mr. Edmund Gosse, was able to fall asleep anywhere. Mr. Gosse says that when he has parted from him in the evening "he has simply sat back in the deep sofa in his sitting-room, his little feet close together, his arms against his sides, folded in his frock-coat like a grasshopper in its wing-covers, and fallen asleep, apparently for the night, before I could blow out the candles and steal forth from the door."

GOOD BOY!

Stern Parent:—"Tommy, you are not to play with that Smith boy any more; he looks a bad little boy."

Young Hopeful:—"Oh, daddy, he isn't: he's a good little boy. He's been in a reformatory school twice, and each time he's got out for his good conduct."—Weekly Times, Melbourne.

Palpitation of The Heart.

When the heart begins to beat irregularly or intermittently, palpitate and throb, skip beats, beats fast for a time, then go slow as to seem almost to stop, it causes great anxiety and alarm.

The least excitement or exertion seems to affect it.

Many people are kept in a state of morbid fear of death, become weak, worn and miserable, through this unnatural action of the heart.

To all such sufferers Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills can give prompt and permanent relief.

Mrs. John Thompson, Mill Cove, N.B., writes:—"Just a few lines to let you know what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me. I have been troubled with weakness and palpitation of the heart, would have severe choking spells, and could scarcely lie down at all. I tried many remedies but got none to answer my case like your pills did. I can recommend them highly to all suffering with heart and nerve trouble."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. per box or 3 boxes for $1.25 at all dealers or will be mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

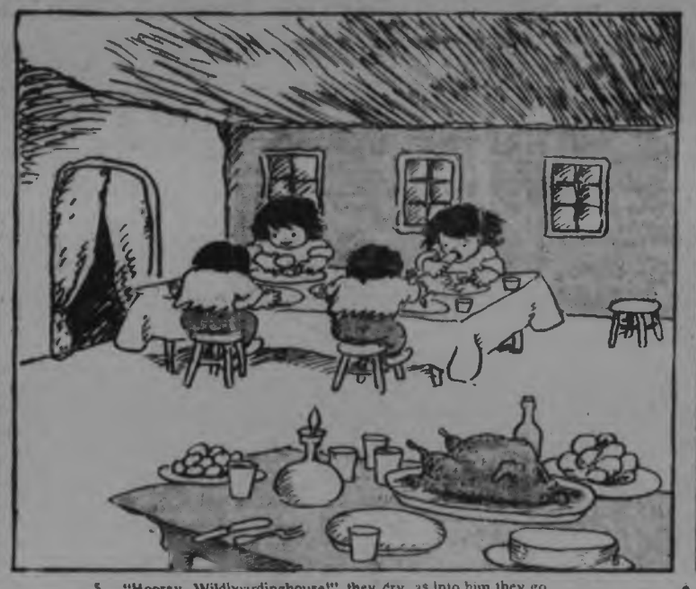
THE TERRORS OF THE TINY TADS

1.—The Tiny Tads are hungry and they're planning how—the sinners—
To make a raid on somebody to get some New Year dinners.

2.—"We'll go to the Hotelephant!" declare the little chaps,
"He ought to give us turkey and some mince pie too, perhaps."

3.—But all at once they see a thing that looms before them big;
He seems to be a building, yet he seems to be a pig.

4.—They ask a Policemanimal, "What is that funny thing?"
"Wildboardinghouse," the beast replies. "Hooray!" the Tinies sing



5.—"Hooray, Wildboardinghouse!" they cry, as into him they go
And eat the lovely dishes set for New Year's Day, you know.

6.—And when they've eaten all they can they go to take their ease

JACK and JILL in FAIRYLAND

1.—When Jack and Jill came down the hill, whom do you think they saw? Why, the sparrow that killed Cock Robin, you know. Then Jill spoke up:—
"Say, sparrow,
Won't you lend me your bow and arrow?"
"Why, cert'nly," said the sparrow, handing 'em over. He was a good sort.

2.—Then who should come by but the Piper's Son!

3.—Then didn't Tommy get mad? Whee! He didn't run away this time. He ran after——
Yes, after the kiddies he started to run,
Did Terrible Tommy; the Piper's Son.

4.—Well, Jack and Jill were in a terrible plight—as usual—till a tree showed up in front.
Hurrah! said Jack, and climbed that tree;
And Jack was just as tickled as Jack could be

5.—So Tom the Piper's Son was left standing on the ground, raving like anything. "Grooch-ooch!" said he, which was his way of swearing. Jack and Jill simply chortled.

6.—But, alas! a friend of Tommy's came by just then. He was the giant that Jack and Jill played a trick on a week or two ago. He had it in for them. He picked 'em off the tree like a couple of plums.
And Tommy laughed in most delightful glee,
"Now I'll play my airs on the back, back, back,
"To the tune of a whack, whack, whack, whack, whack,
"Upon Jacky and Jill," said he.

ALL DRUGGISTS

The Woman Hater

And How He Was Suddenly Cured of His Prejudice

BY CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright, 1911, by American Press Association.

Jim Hudson laughed uproariously when Ramsey told him about it. "My dear Peter," exclaimed the light hearted youth when he had caught his breath, "you of all men to be appointed guardian pro tem. of a young and lovely girl! She is young and lovely, I suppose? Why didn't they pick out some woman to send her to, eh?"

"They did," said Ramsey, reddening. "They wrote to my cousin, Mrs. Ferris, whom they knew for years before they went to China, that they were sending the girl to her for a year's visit. It seems she needed a change of air, and Cousin Mary had invited her. Then after the girl sailed my cousin, as you know, died suddenly, and it was only while I was looking into her papers that I learned the girl was coming—in fact, was on the way. There are no other women in my family to send her to, and I have no friends to call upon in such an emergency."

"That comes of being an arrant woman hater," said Hudson heartlessly. "What are you going to do about the matter?"

"Wait till she comes and send her to the Young Women's Christian association, I guess. I've cabled to her parents telling them of the situation and asking for instructions."

Mr. Hudson howled joyfully. "Did you tell them you were young and handsome and a rich bachelor to boot?" he chuckled.

"Scarcely room for all that in a cable, you know," returned Ramsey modestly. "Joking aside, Jim, I don't know what to do. You see, the girl was to wire Cousin Mary when she reached San Francisco saying what train she would take for New York. I've got to meet that train."

"Lucky you," murmured Mr. Hudson enviously. "Nobody ever intrusted me with a young and lovely daughter, and if her people had seen you first they would recall her at once. Heard from them yet?"

"No. Expect a cable most any moment. They're missionaries, you know. After the heathen Chinee and all that."

"Which accounts for their childlike trust in"— Mr. Hudson never finished the sentence, for at that instant a servant brought a cablegram to his friend. Ramsey tore it open and read rapidly aloud:

Hold Gussie for letter. SIMPSON.

Ramsey never understood why this brief message should send Jim Hudson into another roar of laughter. He stared at his friend with rising indignation. "I say, old man," he protested, "there's no need to make quite a fool of yourself, you know. The young lady is in something of a fix, and she will be all broken up over Cousin Mary's death. Just advise me, Jim; there's a good fellow. It will be all right to send her to the Y. W. C. A. pending her father's letter of instructions, won't it?"

Hudson's face sobered. "Just the place, Peter. Why don't you go and engage a suit for her? Then you can take her directly there as soon as she arrives."

"I'll do that now," said Ramsey, relieved. "I'm watching out for Miss Simpson's message to my cousin. It will be sent down to me here from the house."

The message came next day. It was addressed to Mrs. Ferris, and, according to Peter's instructions, it had been sent down to his office. It was naturally brief:

Will arrive New York Thursday on Shore limited, due at 6 p. m. GUSSIE.

Peter Ramsey, bereft of all his own womankind and very shy where others were concerned, felt a pleasant little tingle in the intimacy of the signature even if it had not been intended for him.

He was surprised at his own impatience as the hour drew near for the arrival of the strange girl who had come so oddly into his care. From the few letters bearing on the subject that he had found among his cousin's effects he had gathered that Gussie Simpson was a very attractive girl and that she was inclined to impulsiveness, and from that he concluded she must be young.

It was 5 o'clock on Thursday when Peter Ramsey reached the Central station. He had dressed himself with unusual care and had blushed to detect himself hesitating over the choice of a necktie. Now that he was ready and waiting he was exceedingly nervous and wished heartily that he had impressed Jim Hudson into his service. Jim's ready wit and natural tact where women were concerned would be of inestimable benefit to his more diffident friend.

In this case to think was to act, and 5:30 found Peter in a telephone booth frantically calling for Jim Hudson to meet him at the station at once.

"Get down here before 6, for heaven's sake!" pleaded the woman hater.

Just as the Shore limited came hissing to a standstill Jim Hudson burst into view. His eyes met Ramsey's, and then together they walked silently down the platform toward the crowd that was pouring from the gate.

It was Ramsey who saw her first, stepping like a young goddess, her lovely eyes seeking vainly for a familiar face and finally meeting his in troubled inquiry. From the crown of her blue velvet toque to the tip of her patent leather boot she was the most exquisite creature Peter Ramsey had ever seen. He drew a sharp breath and instantly forgot his diffidence. He was guardian of this wonderfully beautiful girl!

"Here she is, Jim," he said, elbowing his way toward the girl. He whipped off his hat and took her bag from an unresisting hand. "Miss Simpson, I am sure," he said cordially. "I am Peter Ramsey, a cousin of Mrs. Ferris. As we go downtown I will explain why Cousin Mary could not be here." He said all this rapidly, not wishing to startle the girl with a sudden announcement of Mrs. Ferris' death. She looked at him in some bewilderment for an instant, and then a lovely smile broke over her face.

"I am sure there is some mistake," she was beginning when there was a rushing whirlwind of skirts and Peter Ramsey was swept aside to make room for half a dozen girls who flung themselves on his divinity with little shrieks of delighted welcome.

"You dear old Polly!" they were saying when Peter awoke to the horror of the situation. He had approached a strange girl and taken her bag and—made an ass of himself altogether.

Jim Hudson's strong grip on his arm dragged him aside. "Oh, I say, Peter," chortled his friend, "you've made a mistake, don't you know. Here is Miss Simpson. I guessed her at once, saw her name on a bag and introduced myself. She read of your cousin's death in an old newspaper en route and wishes to go immediately to a hotel. Come on and meet your ward."

"A hotel! I won't permit it. A girl"— Peter Ramsey turned pale under his bronze as Jim Hudson led him up to a tall, rawboned young woman, unmistakably in her middle thirties, painfully plain as to feature, scanty and colorless as to hair, unfashionable as to gowning and undoubtedly wearing Peter's especial abhorrence—heelless shoes.

This was the tender, delicate girl Peter Ramsey had expected to meet! This was his fair young ward whom he had begun to take exceeding interest in!

"This is very good of you, Mr. Ramsey," his charge was saying in a deep voice. "I've just been telling your friend Mr. Hudson that I would like to go to a hotel immediately."

"Certainly, Miss Simpson," said Peter faintly. "I had—er—engaged a room for you at the Y. W. C. A., you know. I will countermand that order if you prefer to go to a hotel."

"I'll go to the association tonight since you have been so kind as to make arrangements. Now, if you'll just put me in a cab I shall do very well if you'll direct the man. Oh, no! I'm accustomed to traveling about alone. I was so shocked to hear about dear Mrs. Ferris. I was quite devoted to her, you know. Come and see me tomorrow, do! Good night."

Miss Gussie Simpson was gone, and when the last flicker of the brown wing in her hat had disappeared Peter Ramsey turned and looked Jim Hudson in the eye.

"Jim," he said, with cold and deadly emphasis, "if you ever mention this incident to me or any one else I'll cut you dead—understand?"

"Yes," grinned Jim. "I say, Peter, if I may ask, how did you attach yourself to that bag? Does it—it doesn't belong to the—the first Miss Simpson, does it?" he burst out.

Peter nodded solemnly. "It does," he said.

"What are you going to do about it? I saw her go off with a whole seminary gang of girls."

"I'm going to find her," said Peter slowly, "and after I find her I'm going to marry her—see?" He glared defiantly at his astonished friend.

"Peter!" gasped the other. "That's going some for a woman hater, isn't it? All is not gold that glitters."

But Peter had left him and was striking toward a taxicab within which he studied the silver tag hanging from the bag he carried and learned that its owner was Mary Dreyton and, wonder of wonders, she lived at the same address as his roommate at college, old Tudor Dreyton.

There were more wonders to follow this, for the lovely Polly was Tudor's sister, and Peter Ramsey found an unexpected welcome when he did return the little bag to its amused owner.

Some time afterward Miss Gussie Simpson returned to China, and her adoring relatives, Peter and Polly, were married. The strong minded Gussie never dreamed that her visit to America had made her the instrument of the little god of love and that she was indirectly responsible for Peter Ramsey's conversion from a misogynist to the most ardent women worshiper.

Specialist Could Not Remove Stone In The Bladder

GIN PILLS PASSED IT

JOLIETTE, P.Q.

"During August last, I went to Montreal to consult a specialist as I had been suffering terribly with Stone in the Bladder.

He decided to operate but said the stone was too large to remove and too hard to crush. I returned home and was recommended by a friend to try GIN PILLS.

They relieved the pain. I took two boxes and went back to the specialist. He said the stone was smaller but he could not remove it although he tried for two hours and a half. I returned home and continued to take GIN PILLS, and to my great surprise and joy, I passed the stone.

GIN PILLS are the best medicine in the world and because they did me so much good, I will recommend them all the rest of my life". 4c

THE USE OF ARSENIC.

"You no doubt have observed the lily white complexion of some women. These women are sacrificing years of their lives for that beautiful skin by the use of arsenic," said a chemist of Manchester, England.

"It is a well known fact that thousands of women in all countries of the world use the poison in small quantities to bleach their skin. It is an effective means of whitening and clearing the complexion, but the complexion given by its use has no permanency unless the absorption of the drug be continued.

"Arsenic, as science has long told us, is an accumulative poison. When one takes it either by prescription for the upbuilding of an appetite or for the bleaching of the skin he does not feel any ill effects for several years. The effect of the drug is bracing and makes a person feel like eating. It also aids the digestion. The average user of the poison takes it in such small quantities that he does not realize how much of it will accumulate in his system in the course of four or five years.

"Being an accumulative poison, it often takes that length of time to see the results of the drug. Then the user may complain of not being able to control his fingers or toes. Subsequently he loses control of his hands and arms. Paralysis, superinduced by arsenical poisoning, is the fearful result.—Washington Post.

That Was Enough.

They were talking about the nosey women who knew everybody in the middle of the block.

"Apparently she's got it in for those people who moved away from 35 last week," said he. "What did they do to her?"

"Nothing," said she, "except to borrow her opera glasses the day before they moved and keep them till the day after, so she couldn't get a chance to train them on their back room furniture."—New York Times.

What Damp Means.

Learn to know what damp means, especially when used upon polished woodwork. Think it means wet and you will be reviling valuable information as "newspaper rubbish." Dip a cloth in hot water, wring it as hard as you can, then shake it in the air and it should have about the right amount of moisture.—Exchange.

The Silver Lining.

"Oh, John," exclaimed Mrs. Shortcash, who was reading a letter, "our son has been expelled from college. Isn't it awful?"

"Oh, I don't know," answered Mr. Shortcash. "Perhaps I can pull through without making an assignment now."—Chicago News.

Getting On.

"Splendidly, splendidly! She's got so now that she can say 'I can't sing witthout my music' just beautifully."—Detroit Free Press.

Made It Lean.

Teacher—Now, Harold, can you tell me what made the tower of Pisa lean? Harold—I guess there must have been a famine in the land.—Exchange.

Out or In.

"What's that noise?" asked the visitor in the apartment house.

"Probably some one in the dentist's apartments on the floor below getting a tooth out."

"Ah, then it's probably the Popkins' baby getting a tooth in!"—Catholic Standard and Times.

LONDON'S HISTORIC TOWER.

And the Egg From Which Was Hatched the Great Charter.

King John, it would seem, though legally married to Isabella of Angouleme, fell desperately in love in 1214 with "Matilda" or "Maud," "the Fair," the beautiful daughter of Robert, Lord Fitzwalter. This lady, remaining deaf to his entreaties, was treacherously abducted from her father's seat at Dunmow by the king's order and shut up in the round turret of the White tower. On this Fitzwalter made a vain attempt to rouse the people to revolt, but was forced to fly to France with his wife and remaining children. Maud once safe in the tower, King John renewed his suit, but only succeeded in driving her to utter silence, which so infuriated him that he sent her a poisoned egg for her breakfast, and she died early in 1215. A year later her remains were translated to the family vault at Dunmow.

When the news of this crafty murder came to the ears of Fitzwalter he forthwith returned to England and discovered to his joy that the barons were on the point of declaring war against John. He at once placed himself at their head, hoping, it is said, to combine his personal revenge with his duty as an English peer and is indeed supposed to have forced the king to sign the great charter for the express purpose of humiliating his daughter's murderer. Thus from an egg was hatched the great charter. Whether the story be true or false, it is a certified historical fact that the barons held the tower in pledge till John consented to accept the charter and affixed his reluctant signature to the deed.

About a year later, when the war with the barons was at its height and John once more a power, the tower again fell into his hands, and, though the barons laid siege to it, they were repulsed by the king's men. To complete its strange vicissitudes during this strenuous reign the tower became on Nov. 1, 1215, the temporary court of King Louis of France, whom the rebellious barons had summoned to assist in the adjustment of their grievances. Appearing before the gates with a large body of men, he so completely awed the officials that they handed over the keys without striking a blow for their rightful monarch.

FREAKS OF A RIVER.

A Stream So Crooked That It Double Crosses Itself.

There is a stream in Massachusetts called the North river. It starts in a pond near Hanson and runs to the sea at Scituate. It is ten miles by air line from Hanson to Scituate, and the river is forty miles long.

This river is probably the most remarkable body of water, barring the Dead sea, on this footstool and has stood more abuse and bad language than the Chicago river. When the tide is coming in the river runs upstream, and not only that, but the upper part of it, which is fresh water, also runs up, and the spectacle of a fresh water river beating it uphill is alone enough to call attention to itself. But there is much more to it than that.

The North river is noted for being the scene of the last Indian raid on the coast settlements. It is notable for having given birth to the ship Columbia, whose captain discovered and named the Columbia river, and was the first American vessel to circumnavigate the world. It is notorious for having suddenly changed its mind on its course on the night of Nov. 27, 1898, when it moved its mouth three miles to the northward, presented the town of Marshfield with a deep harbor, killed three men and converted about 200,000 acres of prime meadow land into a salt marsh.

But the chief thing about this river is its crookedness. This river is so crooked that it double crosses itself. If you don't believe it go and see. There is one place in Hanover where by making three loops the river moves toward the sea for a distance of almost fifty feet and meanders about for fifteen miles in doing it.—Boston Traveler.

RECIPROCITY SCORES ONE

Treaty Bill Gets Immediate Consideration in the House of Representatives—The Republicans Are Divided

THE FIRST POINT

Washington, Feb. 14.—The McCall bill, carrying into effect the reciprocity agreement, reached the floor of the House yesterday, and probably will be passed by that body before adjournment to-night. Even the opponents of the measure admitted yesterday that there was no stopping it in the House.

A test vote came yesterday soon after the House was called to order by Speaker Cannon. Mr. McCall moved the immediate consideration of his bill. As finally corrected, the vote to take up the bill was 197 to 180. The bill will be passed, it is expected, by even a larger majority. Yesterday 101 Republicans voted against immediate consideration. This number will show a decided diminuation on the final roll-call. Sixty-three Republicans voted for immediate consideration.

The Democrats vote was divided, 134 in favor of immediate consideration and 10 against. As in the case of some of the opposing Republicans, a few of the Democrats voted against immediate consideration, because they are members of the District of Columbia committee. Democratic leaders say there will be but six or seven votes against the passage of the bill from their side.

The test vote taken yesterday and the general debate that followed, clearly demonstrated the serious split that exists among the Republicans of the House on reciprocity. It now appears that a majority of the Republicans will vote against the measure, although the President is likely to get more support from that side of the chamber than he at first anticipated. Like the "regulars" the "insurgent" ranks are torn wide open, and a majority of them will vote against the measure.

The Republican split is accentuated by the fact that one member of that party, Mr. McCall, of Massachusetts, is directing the debate in favor of the measure, and another Republican, Mr. Dalzell of Pennsylvania is directing the fight against it.

Pantchenko's Fate in Balance.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 14.—Arguments in the cases of Dr. Ivan Pantchenko and Count Patrick O'Brien de Lassy, charged with the murder of Count Vassili Bouturlin, were begun yesterday. A speedy verdict is expected.

Pantchenko, who is more than seventy years of age, is awaiting his fate cheerfully, but De Lassy is under the constant care of the prison physicians to prevent a collapse.

Legal opinion generally considers that the prosecution has not proved that Bouturlin, De Lassy's brother-in-law, was murdered.

The disreputable character of both prisoners was so thoroughly shown, however, that a verdict of guilty will not be surprising.

The Federals Retreat.

Marfa, Texas, Feb. 14.—Delayed advices received here yesterday clear up suspense over results of the fighting between Insurrectos and Federals around Mulato. The last word received during the middle of last week, told of Federal reverses in an assault on rebel lines at Mulato. News received here yesterday says the tide of battle remained the same with the result that the Federals retreated to Ojinaga, their base of supplies. The insurrectos were unable to check Luque's retreat. Their supply of ammunition was exhausted. The Federal loss was forty killed and wounded.

List of Peers to Pass Veto.

London, Feb. 14.—Premier Asquith announced in the House of Commons yesterday that he would introduce the Government's veto bill next Monday.

As evidence of the Government's intention to force this measure through, John W. Gelland, the Scottish Liberal whip, stated in a speech at Edinburgh yesterday that he was busy just now compiling a list of men who would accept peerages with the object of passing the veto bill in the Upper Chamber, in the event that the Conservative peers proved recalcitrant.

A New System.

Ottawa, Feb. 14.—Mr. A. A. Dean, general superintendent of the Ottawa Electric Co., is out with a new suggestion for the revision of the electric light rates in the city.

It is to base a flat charge for light on the rent or assessment of a house or business premises. It has, he says, been used to advantage extensively in England, and found to work satisfactorily. Thus, if a man is a tenant, he would pay for his light on the basis of his rent, or if he is an owner he would pay on the assessment value.

Let It Come Soon.

New York, Feb. 14.—A Times' special from Baltimore says: Dr. Jacob H. Hollander, professor of economics of the Johns Hopkins University, predicted that a day would come when poverty would be as obsolete as slavery, in an address yesterday at the annual meeting of the Hebrew Benevolent Society. This opinion, he said, he based upon his historical studies and his personal investigations of charitable methods in vogue to-day.

Free Speech Will Live.

New York, Feb. 14.—"Free speech in America will live even if the United States Supreme Court does declare the boycott case against us," declared Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, as he left for Washington yesterday.

"The freedom of the press also shall continue," added the labor leader.

"Should the court declare against us, of course we shall have to go to jail and the battle will be fought out all over again, and the voices of myself and my associates, John Mitchell and Frank Morrison will not be stilled, even if we are behind iron bars."

TWO THRILLING FEATS OF HEROISM MARKED BAD BLAZE IN NEW YORK TENEMENT BUILDING TO-DAY

Policeman Climbed Up to Second Storey of Burning Building and Rescued Ten Small Children by Dropping Them to Fellow Officer

A NEWSBOY'S PLUCK

Special Wire to The Examiner.

NEW YORK, N.Y., FEB. 14.—There were several instances of heroism today in a fire which destroyed a big tenement in Brooklyn this morning. Before the firemen arrived, Policeman Newsharfer clambered up to the burning second story and dropped ten small children to a fellow officer on the ground below, escaping himself with his coat ails burning. On the other side an unknown newsboy climbed up and cut the icy ropes which held the fire escapes, permitting many more to escape. The firemen rescued many with scaling ladders. In all sixty persons were rescued largely through the efforts of others. 'Tis thought that all are safe.

PETERBORO' CITIZENS ARE ASKED TO CONTRIBUTE TO RELIEF FUND FOR THE SUFFERERS IN CHINA

That 2,000,000 people will de dependent on outside relief, or die of star vation, is the message to United States and Canada, sent by Mr. Wilder, the American Consul General, at Shanghai. Floods have destroyed the crops in large areas, and no permanent relief from the soil can be looked for before June. Half a million dollars is needed immediately. The immense population of the affected districts must be given food, or left to die. The refugees from the famine-stricken areas, and especially the children, suffer extremely this cold weather. They are provided with only a couple of mats and their clothing is insufficient. The little crying tots stringing down the trail behind their mothers, with their little legs trembling as they walk, is enough to melt the heart of the most hardened. To make matters worse, plague is sweeping through the north, and the death rate has reached 1,000 a day. Already nearly 6,000 bodies of victims of plague have been burned or buried in the outskirts of Harbin. Doctors and nurses are succumbing to the disease. The happenings in Europe in the 17th Century, when the "Black Death" swept through the country, are being repeated in China. The Chinese are in a panic. The stricken ones are forced into the streets and left there to die. There is grave danger of the plague spreading into Europe. Relief is, therefore, an immediate necessity. A large, representative committee has just been organized in Toronto, and over $4,000.00 has already been donated. The officers of this Central Committee are as follows:

Hon. President, The Hon. J. M. Gibson, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario; Hon. Vice-Presidents, Sir James Whitney and Mayor Geary; Chairman, The Hon. W. A. Charlton; Treasurer, Mr. I. J. Moor; Secretary, Mr. J. H. Gundy.

The citizens of Peterborough are asked to help, and Mr. John Crane, Manager of the Dominion Bank, has been requested to receive donations for this purpose. The matter is urgent and the response should be immediate and generous.

THE FIRE, WATER AND LIGHT COMMITTEE DECIDE TO REFUSE SALARY INCREASE

Matter Was Under Discussion at Meeting of the Committee Last Night---Ald. Kerneghan Makes Some Complaints About Driving and Other Things.

The Fire, Water and Light Committee met last night, all the members being present. Col. Stevenson was present on business in connection with the Hardware Convention to be held in the Armouries. He said that when they asked for permission to use the Armouries for the Hardware Convention, they asked for only three days, from the 21st to the 24th, and he complained that now the carpenters were busy and that lumber was piled up in the way, so that the boys who played basebell there, were unable to do so now on account of the place being blocked up by lumber. He refused to allow them to proceed further, unless they received permission from Kingston. It was decided to communicate with the Military authorities at Kingston and try and get permission to go ahead with the work.

A communication was then read from Hon. J. R. Stratton regarding the insurance, etc. There is no insurance on the building at all, and they considered the advisability of putting on insurance for the time they used the building. However, as they are putting on extra Police Officers for the occasion, it was deemed unnecessary to put on insurance.

The Peterborough Light and Power Co., asked permission to put two lamp posts up in front of their building, with five lights, the lights being duplicates of those used on King street, Toronto.

Ald. Graham moved, seconded by Ald. Metheral, that they be allowed to do so.—Carried.

A communication was received from Chief Howard, containing two accounts, one for $21.20, and the other for $8.00. He had given the committee to understand that he understood that they would pay his expenses, on his trip of Montreal last September and put through the deal with the Bell Telephone Co. He stated to the Committee that by putting through this deal, and by making improvements, which he would gain insight into at the Convention, there would be a saving of at least $300.00. Ald. Kerneghan asked if that amount had been saved, according to the statement of the Chief. Ald. Morgan, chairman, answered that the amount had not been saved. Ald. Morgan stated that he gave the Chief no permission to go; that if he got any he got it from the Board. The minutes were looked up and no motion to this effect could be found, except that the Chief was given holidays in August.

Ald. Morgan said that if he had given the Chief permission to go, and had said that he would pay his expenses, he would do so.

Moved by Ald. Kerneghan, seconded by Ald. Graham, that no action be taken and that the account be left over.—Carried.

Then Fireman McBride's claim for full wages was considered. Chief Howard sent in an explanation to the effect that he had cause to reprimand McBride, and that when he did so, some ill-willed person, told McBride that he, (Chief Howard), had intended that as his dismissal. McBride, believing this to be a fact, left, and later was told that he could come back, by the Chief. When he came back, the Chief was away and there was no person there but the

A FIERCE FIRE

Special Wire to The Examiner.

HENSALL, ONT., FEB. 14—A fierce fire, accompanied by a bombardment of exploding cartridges and gunpowder, practically wiped out all the business places on the north side of the main street this morning at five o'clock, including the Commercial Hotel, where guests had a lot of time to escape fortunately. The explosions came from the hardware store, where ammunition was stored. At least one hundred thousand dollars' damage was done, which is covered by insurance. Business is demoralized.

GROWING CHILDREN

play hard and work hard at school and rapid growth uses up an enormous amount of energy and vitality that needs replacing.

This accounts for the many delicate, sickly and ailing children we see on our streets.

We wish the mother of every such child would come to our store for a bottle of Vinol, as it is a delicious cod liver and iron tonic, which children love to take, and it is easily assimilated.

A grateful mother in Durand, Mich., says her little girl was weak, pale, and had no appetite. She gave her Vinol and she began to thrive at once — and she gained rapidly in weight, colour and strength. (Name furnished on request.

Vinol builds up good healthy flesh and muscle tissue and makes thin little limbs round and plump.

Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that if it does not benefit your child your money will be returned. McDermid and Jury, corner George and Charlotte streets; also Payne's drug store, corner George and Simcoe streets.

OFFICER'S STATEMENT

Special Wire to the Examiner.

C. G. E. MAY MAKE ANOTHER BIG ADDITION

Propose to Construct a New Lamp Building 60 ft. by 250 at a Cost of $250,000--New Office Building is Also to Be Built---Board of Works to Repair Townsend Street

The Board of Works met this afternoon. All the members were present, and Mayor Morrow was in the chair. Mr. Frederic Nicholls, General Manager of the C. G. E. Works, was present to discuss the conditions on which the Board would allow them to build a new building. The building is the lamp department, and will be 60 x 250 feet. The cost will be $250,000.00. He said that htey contemplated putting the building here but were considering the poor accommodation. Mr. Nicholls said that the building would be put on Townsend street, on the vacant lot west of Park street, and he wanted the Board to put a sidewalk along that street for the benefit of the employees; also to have the street graded and a sewer put in. The floor of the new building will be higher than the old buildings, and there will be a basement. The building will be five stories high, counting the basement.

The Mayor told Mr. Nicholls that they were glad that the Company contemplated putting their new building in Peterborough. Mr. Nicholls stated that if they were to go ahead with the building, they wanted to have some understanding with the Board. He said that they were only considering putting the building here and that they must have some agreement if they were to proceed.

Mr. Nicholls also asked that they macadamize the street.

Moved by Ald. Brown, seconded by Ald. Buller, that the sewer be put in on Townsend street and that the sidewalk be built, and the street graded, and that the work be proceeded with as early as possible.—Carried.

Mr. Nicholls stated that they would decide where they were going to build within the next two weeks, and they wanted to have the agreement. He said htat they were going to build a new office here under any consideration, and that if they put the new lamp building here that they would have all together.

The City Clerk stated that they had a letter from the Railway Commission to the effect that they wanted to close Stewart and Park streets, and other streets at the south end, and make a subway. The C.P.R. made the same proposition to the city last year, and the city decided not to let the streets be closed, and evidently the C.P.R. turned it over to the Railway Commission. They, however, deny this. The matter was left over.

The City Solicitor received a communication regarding the closing of the streets, and the Mayor would like any citizens who have any information or any suggestions to make to communicate with him.

MAN CAUGHT HERE GETS TWO MONTHS IN GAOL

Milton Thompson, the Port Hope Man Apprehended by Detective Newhall, is Sentenced.

STORY OF THE CASE

(Port Hope Guide.)

Milton Thompson was in the police court this morning charged with stealing three rings, one bracelet and a chain with a locket attached, the property of Miss Ella Boyd. Thompson pleaded guilty.

Thompson and Miss Boyd were employed at the Royal Hotel and one day last week he visited Miss Boyd's room and stole the jewellery mentioned above. He at once left town and Miss Boyd reported the matter to Chief Bond. The Chief learned that he had gone north and sent a letter to the Peterborough Police giving a description of Thompson and asking them to be on the lookout for him. The Peterborough police located him at 525 Cedar street, living at the home of Miss Lumb, who by the way had spent several months in Port Hope. Chief Bond went to Peterborough yesterday morning and found Thompson. He only had one ring of the missing jewellery and he told the Chief that he had given the others to his fiancee, Miss Evelyn Jarrell. Evelyn was located at the White House and was relieved of her diamonds and bracelet.

Thompson was brought in on the 10.40 train last night and the only explanation he could offer was that he intended to return the jewellry and had given them to Evelyn for safe keeping.

The magistrate stated that there was no excuse whatever for Thompson's actions. He visited this young lady's room deliberately stole her jewellery and then went to Peterborough and gave it away. He would commit him to the Counties' jail for two months at hard labour.

When the Peterborough police visited the Lumb residence they found Wesley Thompson, a brother of the defendant, in bed and placed him under arrest. Upon his explanation of the affair he was released.

Mr. W. F. Kerr, Crown Attorney, conducted the prosecution.

MR. DAVID BOYLE PASSES AWAY

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, ONT. FEB. 14. — David Boyle, aged 69 years, the Provincial archeologist, died this morning after a long illness. His works on scientific questions were greatly consulted.

The late Mr. Boyle was well known in Peterborough, and had many friends here and in this district who will regret to learn of his death. His connection with the exploration of the famous Serpent Indian mounds at Rice Lake brought him into contact with many people in this part of Ontario and he was highly esteemed by everyone.

ZAM-BUK CURES PILES

The agony of piles is as excruciating as the disease itself is weakening, and every sufferer should lose no time in giving Zam-Buk a trial.

Mr. E. Boxall, of 97 Scott street, St. Thomas, writes "I consider it my duty to write of the benefit derived from using Zam-Buk. For some months I was a constant sufferer from bleeding piles. I had used a great many ointments, but got no relief until I tried Zam-Buk. It cured me and I have had no return of the trouble. Since my cure I have advised others suffering from piles to use Zam-Buk, and in each instance with satisfactory results."

Zam-Buk is equally effective as a cure for inflamed sores, cuts, burns, bruises, chapped hands, cold sores, ulcers, blood-poison, children's eruptions, eczema and all skin diseases and injuries.

SUPPLIES FOR THE FIRE DEPARTMENT FOR YEAR

Fire, Water and Light Committee Visited the Hall Last Night and Went Over the List With Chief Howard---The Articles That Are to Be Purchased.

The Fire, Water and Light Committee made an official inspection of the fire hall last night and found everything spick and span as usual. They went over, with Chief Howard, a list of supplies he is asking for, and granted the following:

Four Pole Axes.
Two Steel Cross Bars.
Six Rubber Coats (when wanted.)
One White Rubber Coat for Chief.
Four Black Leather Helmets.
Two 5-gallon Chemical Tanks.
One 20-foot Extension Ladder.
One 12foot Folding Ladder for Rubber Tires for Chief's Waggon.
500 Feet of Hose.
Three Belts and Three Wrenches.
One or Two Rubber or Woollen Rugs.
Eight Pump Valves.
100 Feet of Small Hose for Washing Rigs.
Two Mop Wringers.
Lumber with which to build 8 or 9 clothes closets.
Fly Wheel for Alarm Boxes.
Billiard Table Cloth and Cushions.
Six Pairs Rubber Boots (if wanted.)

The Committee will purchase a hose tester if their appropriation will permit.

Five additional alarm boxes will also probably be furnished. There is not a fire alarm box west of Park street, and others are needed on George street, urged Chief Howard.

There is 4100 feet of hose in the Hall, some of which is full of pinholes. The department is usually allowed 500 feet each time a renewal is made. Hose has gone up from 90c. and 95c. to $1.10 a foot.

The committee agreed that it would be good policy to purchase a quantity of hose each year, to keep the fire hall well equipped in this respect. It was generally conceded that 1911 will be an easy year in regard to supplies for this department.

In the midst of the committee's deliberations a genuine alarm was rung from the corner of Concession and Hazlett streets, East City, and the hall was immediately a scene of well-disciplined activity—every man and horse to his place without any confusion, and away in commendable time. In fact it took the brigade just 17 seconds to get out of the hall.

The question of reporting street lights not burning arose incidentally and it was agreed that if people will report to Ald. Morgan, chairman of the F. W. and L. committee, or the Fire Chief, any street lights not burning during scheduled hours, the matter will be immediately looked into.

Fire Chief Howard offered that the Grand Trunk tracks on Charlotte street should be illuminated by incadescent lamps on scheduled moonlight nights when the moon is obscured by clouds. The arc lamps are not burning on such occasions, which renders this crossing a dangerous point to pedestrians. The committee will go into the matter.

BRAVE POLICEMAN SAVES LIVES OF FIVE PEOPLE

Special Wire to the Examiner.

MONTREAL, FEB. 14—Police Constable Demeules saved the lives of five people whom he, unaided, carried out half unconscious from smoke when fire broke out in a tenement building on St. Catharine street this morning.

The head of the family, a blind man named Lussier, was groping about trying to awaken the others when the policeman broke in and found the most of the family sound asleep. The City Council will take up the matter of rewarding Demeules.

WEDDING BELLS

BARR-BEST

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Best, 124 Tenth Avenue, West, Vancouver, B.C., (formerly of Bethune street, north, of this city) on Saturday, February 4th, when their only daughter, Elva L. Maud, was united in marriage to Mr. Henry Barr, of Vancouver. The ceremony was performed by Rev. E. A. Henry of Chalmers Presbyterian Church.

The many friends of the bride in Peterborough will extend their warmest congratulations and best wishes for future happiness.

THE FIREMEN'S SALARIES.

The Fire, Water and Light committee of the City Council last night decided to refuse any increase in salaries to the members of the Peterborough Fire Department. Why? The answer is not easily apparent. Looking at the situation, however, from every standpoint, it would seem that the committee has made a mistake. At present the first year men are paid $1.37 a day; the second year men $1.48. There are no third year men; they do not remain members of the department long enough. Consider what $1.37 a day means at this time of high prices in everything. It is almost an impossibility to maintain a family on such wages. The man working on the sewer or on sidewalk construction for the city gets a much higher wage than that paid the firemen. And he only works nine hours a day. The fireman has to be on duty twenty-four hours a day all year with the exception of twenty-four hours off every twelve days. Sunday is practically the same as any other day and he is tied to his post, locked up as closely almost as if he were in jail. He is on duty day and night, risks his life in dangerous places and receives for all this the miserable pittance of $1.37 a day. Is it any wonder that the personnel of the brigade is constantly changing? Is it any wonder that men will take the first opportunity to get out of the service? The men of the department have asked for an increase of 10c. per day per man. Ten men would be affected by the change asked for. It would mean a dollar more paid each day to the whole department or $365 a year. It is not much, perhaps not enough, but $36.50 a year to each man would be a considerable help. Peterborough is away below the scale of other cities. Think it over, members of the Fire, Water and Light committee. If you can't grant the increase from a humane motive you should at least be able to see the wisdom of giving it for a selfish reason.

LIQUOR IN MINING CAMPS.

Frozen dynamite and blind-pig whiskey cannot both have a place in the northern Ontario camps, says the Toronto Globe; the danger to life and limb is too great. The high explosives are necessary, the whiskey is merely a nuisance. Ontario has in Cobalt one of the greatest silver mining camps in the world. Competent authorities firmly believe that in the Porcupine district to the north of Cobalt there will soon be one of the greatest of gold mining camps also. The region in which these extensive operations are prosecuted is over three hundred miles north of Toronto, and the climate is such that for a considerable part of the year the use of dynamite in blasting is attended with great risk. If it is advisable to keep whiskey out of railway construction camps in the north it is not less advisable that it be kept away from the mines in the interest of all concerned in their operation.

It is doubtful whether Mr. Hanna is getting from the officers of the law, and especially from the Attorney-General's staff, the co-operation required to stamp out illegal sale in the north. Inspector Rogers' recent campaign was a good deal more spectacular than effective. The methods used to trap dealers in liquor were distinctly objectionable, and the people of the district resented them very strongly. The boot-leg whiskey peddler may be fair game, but there are evidently much bigger people in the business. The seizure three days ago of a whole carload of liquor shipped in under seal, indicates operations on a huge scale, and suggests that the illicit whiskey trade of the north should be crushed out at the Toronto and Montreal end. Were Mr. Hanna to intimate that the wholesale dealer who shipped the carload of liquor seized the other day would, if domiciled in Ontario, lose his license at the end of the license year there would be a large falling off in supplies.

It is possible, of course, that the liquor was shipped from some point in Quebec Province. If so, there is an excellent opportunity for co-operation between the License Departments of Ontario and Quebec. We do not believe that Sir Lomer Gouin would knowingly permit the Province of Quebec to be used as a base of operations for the debauching of northern Ontario by blind-pig operators. Mr. Hanna should cast his net more widely. The supply can be stopped at the source by vigorous Governmental action. The returns of authorized liquor shipments into the north country must give the Provincial Secretary a very good idea as to the identity of the shippers who are wilfully aiding in setting the law at naught. He should talk very plainly to them and if argument is of no avail he should cut off their licenses.

GROUNDLESS ALARMS.

(Toronto Star)

Much stress is laid upon the objection that reciprocity will turn the stream of our food exports from the west-east lines that carry it to the British market, and send it along north-south lines to the American market, or, rather, the American middleman. The Montreal Star says that the "costly steel framework of this nation will be broken. The Dominion will become a string of subject Provinces, serving the convenience of the nearest American centres. Thus Quebec will become the backyard and lumber camp of New England."

All these dreadful results are to follow, not from a reduction in the tariff of Canada, but from a reduction in the American tariff and increased American purchases of Canadian products. Thus the craft and guile of Taft and Knox consist simply in agreeing to do something which the American Congress could do at any time without agreement. The fabric of our nationality rests upon the Dingley and McKinley tariffs. We have built our national mansion up against the American tariff wall, and the moment they pull down the wall, down goes our Canadian home.

The man who holds this belief can have no faith in the future of Canada. Agreement or no agreement, it is absolutely certain that our trade with the United States will increase from year to year. To build our hopes upon the expectation of exclusion is to build upon a pile of snow. Exclusion is as sure to disappear as the snow that lies upon the ground to melt in the sun of April and May.

Will that disappearance mean the loss of our nationality, the destruction of our means of transportation, the distinctive fabric of our industry and commerce? Such an opinion bears upon it the stamp of exaggeration and of pessimism. Our farmers will sell more of their products in the United States. They will not cease to sell in the markets of Great Britain, nor in the home market, which is most important of all. The whole stream of commerce will not be swung around to the United States. The rails of the Canadian Pacific Railway, the Canadian Northern, and the Grand Trunk Pacific will not rust. The farmer will have a greater choice of routes, a greater choice of markets. Being more prosperous, the farmer will buy more manufactured goods, and continue to build up the prosperity of Canadian cities and towns.

Trade with Great Britain will not cease, trade between Province and Province will not cease, if Canadian farmers sell a larger portion of their products in the United States. And Canadian nationality is not of so poor a quality that it will be undermined by increased prosperity.

The policy which inspired the building of our transcontinental railways was wise and courageous. They have served the purpose of developing the West and of carrying on inter-Provincial trade. They will continue to serve that purpose. Their traffic will not disappear when Canadian farm products are admitted more freely into the markets of the United States. On the contrary, if they display the same enterprise which has characterized them in the past, they will share in the increased prosperity which reciprocity will bring to the farmers of Canada.

THE LONDON PAGEANT TO BE A SPLENDID AFFAIR

LONDON, FEB. 13.—Elaborate preparations are now being made for the pageant of London, which is to be one of the principal features of the forthcoming Festival of the Empire, to be held at the Crystal Palace from May to October next, under the patronage and with the support of his Majesty's Government—a distinction rarely accorded to events of this kind.

The pageant promises to be one of the greatest historical spectacles ever witnessed, for neither money nor pains is being spared in the effort to make the twenty-four scenes, which are to be enacted, accurate representations of events of the various periods selected. The costumes and dresses for this huge undertaking are in themselves a very big item, and some idea of the work that is being done in the way of dressing the pageant in the exact mode of the respective periods may be gathered from the fact that there are no fewer than 15,000 performers taking part in the various scenes.

In order that every little detail of the costumes may be absolutely accurate, a research committee was formed, whose duty it was to trace in the various museums and private houses old masterpieces and tapestries portraying characters and scenes in stirring times long gone by. Then a large staff of artists, all specialists in this kind of work, was engaged to make copies from the paintings, and from these coloured drawings the designs for the dresses were executed.

Two Hundred at Work.

Of the ten thousand or more costumes required for the pageant there are nearly seven thousand already completed, work which necessitated a staff of over 200 workers being engaged, practically night and day during the past twelve months. All the material employed in the manufacture is of the finest quality, and all the principals, and there are many hundreds of them, will be clad in the finest satins, silks, and richest velvets, compatible with the dignity of the characters they are impersonating.

It will thus be seen that the cost of dressing the pageant alone is a very big item of expenditure, for the dresses range in price from two pounds to thirty guineas, the latter price having been paid for the outfit for the lady who will play the part of Queen Elizabeth.

Armour of Knights.

Another important item is the armour of the knights. It is doubtful whether there is sufficient available armour in the country for the hundreds of characters that will be thus clad in the pageant, so it was decided to manufacture special suits for the occasion. In order to do this a special armoury has been established at the Crystal Palace, where no fewer than 80 workmen are busily engaged in turning out the mail armour. The chain armour, another big item in itself, has been contracted out.

These are only a few of the facts and figures connected with the staging and dressing of the Pageant of London. There are a thousand and one other minor details, all more or less important in themselves.

Assistant Chief, and he put McBride on, on the first year man's pay.

Ald. Metheral thought that Chief Howard should come out and give an explanation of things. He said that the Chief's letter was misleading, and that the facts set forth were incorrect.

Moved by Ald. Kerneghan, seconded by Ald. Graham, that McBride be put on the advanced wage on the first of March.—Carried.

The Chief asked for a raise of all the men's wages. Ald. Graham moved, seconded by Ald. Metheral, that the men be given the raise, and the amount be deducted from the Chief's and the Assistant Chief's wages.

Ald. Edgar moved an amendment, seconded by Ald. Kerneghan that no action be taken.—Carried.

Ald. Kerneghan complained that the driving was not as good as it should be, and that the drivers did not know the streets well enough. The question of where to get the horses shod also came up, but it was decided that they get them shod wherever they get the best work done. Ald. Kerneghan complained that the hose were left lying on the street for a day after a fire, and the vehicles running over them. He mentioned certain fires where this had taken place. He also thought that the hose waggon should go first, and that drivers be put on that knew the nearest way to go in the event of an alarm.

At the end of the discussion at the Committee rooms, it was decided that they go over and inspect the Fire Station. They accordingly went over and held a conference with the Chief.

The firemen's wages per year are scheduled as follows:

Chief	$1250
Assistant Chief	700
Engineer	650
First year men	500
Second year men	550
Third year men	575

Earlier in the evening at the fire hall the men submitted to the Chief the cost of living each week for the average married fireman. One man has six children, and another five. There are eleven married men on the brigade. The men's weekly estimate of living expenses was as follows:

Rent	$2.50
Groceries	4.00
Butcher	2.00
Bread	.70
Vegetables	.50
Coal	1.25
Clothes	1.00
Milk	.21
Light	.50
Total	$12.66

At a meeting of the Fire, Water and Light Committee held last week, Fire Chief Howard asked for his men an increase of 10 cents per day. This question was again considered last night with the following results:

Ald. Graham moved, seconded by Ald. Metheral, that the men get an increase of 10 cents a day, providing the same is deducted from the Chief's salary.

Ald. Edgar moved, seconded by Ald. Kerneghan, in amendment, that no action be taken.—Carried.

Consequently the men will get no increase on the Committee's recommendation.

The men's weekly wage the first year is $9.59; with an increase of $50 the second year, and another $25 the third year.

At the fire hall when the committee were officially inspecting the same, Chief Howard submitted the above figures and earnestly pressed for an increase of 10c per day for the brigade, excepting himself. The matter was not re-opened by the committee.

Without going deeply into the question, it is quite evident that a fire man living up to the foregoing estimate, cannot out of the salary allotted the rank and file men, indulge in much tobacco or five cent shows, to say nothing of paying insurance. The question arises can he live cheaper these days. One thing is quite certain the position under the present schedule, is far from desirable for a man with a family.

Hose Question Again.

Subsequently the hose question alluded to above was brought up in the fire hall in Chief Howard's presence, by the Mayor, who wanted the charge enquired into above board.

Chief Howard flatly denied ever leaving any hose out twenty-four hours. At Murphy's fire, at two in the afternoon, the hose was brought in at five; they had been all uncoupled and laid at the side of the road. After a fire it is customary to leave the hose while the rigs return to the hall and load up again in readiness for another call. The hose is then sent after. This is a protective measure in the city's interest. Then no hose is left lying around the fire hall unless the tower is full of wet hose drying.

Ald. Kerneghan said he could bring witnesses that on three occasions hose had been left uncoupled on the streets for rigs to drive over.

The Chief begged to differ and the matter dropped.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

TO-NIGHT'S GAME WILL BE CLASS OF SEASON

Kingston Frontenacs and Peterborough Grillers Meet at Brock Street Rink in a Junior O. H. A. Semi-Final Game Which Should be Well Worth Seeing.

For the second time this season the Frontenacs and Grillers will meet at Brock street rink in a junior O. H. A. game, the third occasion upon which the teams have come together. Kingston won the other two times out. Can they repeat? That is the question of the hour. The Frontenacs answer in the affirmative; the Grillers response is an emphatic "No." Anyway, to-night will settle the question, and from here it looks as if it will be some game before the result is definitely known. The Grillers are determined not to throw away the chance they have been given by the discovery that the Kingston team had played a man over age and they will work their heads off to-night to turn the trick on the Sutherland combination. The latter on the other hand, are equally resolved upon proving their superiority by again beating the Peterborough youngsters. Anyway you look at it the game should be a corker and by long odds the best junior argument seen here in many moons. A good deal of the glamour has worn off the Frontenac team in the minds of the Grillers as a result of the last two games, and the local team say that Kingston will have to extend themselves more than they did in the other two games here to stop them to-night. The Grillers had a grand work-out last night against the intermediates and are right on edge for to night's battle. The ice will be smooth and hard ,the same conditions under which the two teams met both times before.

There will be no change in the Peterborough line-up from the last two games. Kingston will of course, be without Marchand, their goal-keeper whose certificate has been cancelled and who will be replaced by Leo Williams, brother of the famous Jack and Ken Williams, of rugby fame. It is not definitely known whether Brouse, their rover, who was hurt here a week ago, will be able to play or not. If so the teams will line-up as follows:

FIRST PROFESSIONAL GAME HERE ON THURSDAY NIGHT

Peterborough fans will have their first experience with professional hockey on Thursday night when Manager Nolan's seven will clash with the fast Port Hope team in a game at Brock street rink. The Nolan aggregation will present the strongest team they have had this season, as Ray Murphy the former Ottawa player and Fred Doherty will be on the team and the Port Hope seven will have to travel all the way. Doherty needs no introduction to Peterborough followers of the game. The sturdy forward used to flit around Brock street arena in a Norwood uniform in the City League a few years ago and has since made good in fast company, coming along so well indeed, that Renfrew made a grab for his services. Ben Dusty, the former Strathcona player, will be on the team and he is sure of a good reception in his home town. The team worked out yesterday morning at Brock street rink and made a favourable impression with the railbirds. The men out were Baker, the former Wanderer goal keeper, Bill Lane, of last year's Parkdale seniors, Carmichael, formerly of Barrie, Chip chase the ex-Wanderer, Charlie Lightfoot, who hails from Stratford, Crosset from Tilsonburg and Ben Dusty. There are several familiar faces on the Port Hope team, including Bobby Mercer, who guarded the nets for Peterborough the year Eddie Howell was so much in the limelight on the local team and Randall, the former Lindsay Midget. The game should be well worth seeing and will likely draw a crowd of fans anxious to get a line on the style of hockey the 'pros' hand out. Th game will be played in three twenty minute periods, an innovation in Peterborough.

TROUBLE OVER THE ALLAN CUP

Special Wire to the Examiner.

TORONTO, FEB. 14.—The receipt here this morning of a permemptory order to the Ontario Hockey Association that St. Michael's are to return the Allan Cup forthwith as defaulted to the Victorias of Winnipeg and accusing them of unsportsmanlike conduct, will be resisted here, and it is likely a serious cleavage in Dominion hockey will result.

TRENTON ON SHELF

WHITBY, FEB. 13.—The most brilliant game of hockey played here in years, and many think, the most brilliant game ever played on Whitby ice was witnessed by a big crowd here to-night, when Whitby intermediates added one more to their unbroken series of victories, defeating the Trenton team by a score of 13 to 5.

The first ten minutes of play and the whole of the second half was simply whirlwind hockey. The home team far outclassed the much bigger Trenton team in speed, stick-handling, combination and shooting. The only thing that saved the visitors from a worse beating was the brilliant work in goal of McGiffen who was superb. Waugh for the home team won the unstinted admiration and praise of the crowd by his rushes, while McCanus and Blanchard were as invincible as ever. The half time score was 6 to 5, but in the second half the visitors were shut out entirely, while Whitby added seven more goals to their string. The victory gives Whitby the round by fourteen goals. The lineup

FRONTENACS NOT SO COCKY

KINGSTON, FEB. 13.—The Frontenac players are sore over the demands of the O.H.A. Executive who were to blame for cancelling their certificates. Williams of Napanee Marchand in the nets and the champions do not feel that they will be weakened by this change. It is hoped that Brouse will be in condition to allow him to play at Peterborough tomorrow. The Frontenacs have secured Alex Davidson, captain of the R.C.H.A. team, and Ken Mossington of the R.C.H.A. team, to play here. Both these men will

SOME HOCKEY HAPPENINGS

That dull thud you heard last night, Annabelle, was the Trenton team dropping out of the O.H.A. race. Whitby put the rollers beneath them to the tune of 13 to 5, winning the round by 22 to 8.

The Kingston Frontenacs were to have played Ottawa to-night and had arranged for a special train by which to bring a big crowd of fans to the Automobile town. Perhaps they won't go now that the season

Quebec's defeat of the Varsity juniors practically cinches the question that the only championship Toronto can capture is the senior title. And there was only one outside team in that competition.

The big event of the year in the Mercantile League will be played at Brock street rink on Saturday night when the Canadian General office staff and the postroom teams will meet in a League fixture. The game has a direct effect upon the championship race and will be a battle royal from the drop of the hat. The tool room won the last game between the two teams by one goal, but the Pen Pushers say they can reverse the decision at this time. In any event the game will be well worth seeing. Excitement over the coming game is at fever heat among the employees of the big plant and there will be a record Mercantile League attendance on Saturday night.

Sacred Heart Separate school proved their superiority over the St. Peter's Separate school team in a well-played game at the Sacred Heart rink yesterday afternoon, the South End team winning handily by eight goals to one. They made a runaway of it in the first half, netting six goals, while St. Peter's scored but once. The play was more even in the second and the Sacred Heart team scored twice while St. Peter's failed to find the nets. Mr. W. Grady refereed the game most satisfactorily. The teams were:

St. Peter's—Goal, C. Wolfe; point, G. O'Brien; cover, E. Galvin; rover, H. Wolfe; centre, G. May; right wing W. Hayes; left wing, G. Conroy.

SHE SNUBBED MONROE.

Incident In the Later Life of Mrs. Alexander Hamilton.

A striking incident in the later life of Mrs. Alexander Hamilton, who survived her husband fifty years, is told in the words of an eyewitness in Allan McLane Hamilton's "Intimate Life of Alexander Hamilton."

Mrs. Hamilton could never forget the behavior of Monroe when he, with Muhlenberg and Venables, accused Hamilton of financial irregularities at the time of the Reynolds incident. Many years afterward when they were both aged people Monroe visited her, and an interview occurred which was witnessed by a nephew, who was then a lad of fifteen. "I had," he says, "been sent to call upon my Aunt Hamilton one afternoon. I found her in her garden and was there with her talking when a maidservant came from the house with a card. It was the card of James Monroe. She read the name and stood holding the card, much perturbed. Her voice sank, and she spoke very low as she always did when she was angry. 'What has that man come to see me for?' escaped from her. 'Why, Aunt Hamilton,' said I, 'don't you know it's Mr. Monroe, and he's been president, and he is visiting here now in the neighborhood and has been very much made of and invited everywhere, and so—I suppose he has come to call and pay his respects to you?' After a moment's hesitation 'I will see him,' she said.

"The maid went back to the house. My aunt followed, walking rapidly, I after her. As she entered the parlor Monroe rose. She stood in the middle of the room facing him. She did not ask him to sit down. He bowed and, addressing her formally, made her rather a set speech—that it was many years since they had met, that the lapse of time brought its softening influences, that they both were nearing the grave, when past differences could be forgiven and forgotten—in short, from his point of view a very nice, conciliatory, well turned little speech. She answered, still standing and looking at him: 'Mr. Monroe, if you have come to tell me that you repent, that you are sorry, very sorry, for the misrepresentations and the slanders and the stories you circulated against my dear husband—if you have come to say this, I understand it. But otherwise no lapse of time, no nearness to the grave, makes any difference.' She stopped speaking; Monroe turned, took up his hat and left the room."

In this connection it may be said that the oft repeated story of the meeting of Mrs. Hamilton and Aaron Burr many years later on an Albany steamboat is a fiction, but it was probably suggested by the Monroe incident.

Hanged For Stealing Golf Balls.

Some sharp punishment has lately been meted out to men convicted of golf ball stealing, and one boy was sentenced to six strokes with the birch. The offenders, however, may congratulate themselves that they live in a merciful age.

In 1637 at an assize in Banff a lad of the town, having confessed to stealing a few trifles, including some golf balls, was actually hanged for the offense. The indictment ran that he was "ane lewd liver and boy of ane evill lyff, and conversation, and ane daylie remainer fro the kirk in tyme of dywne worschip." The humane judges "ordanit the said Francis to be presentlie tackit and carlet to the Gallows hill of this burgh and hangit on the gallows thereof to the death."—London Graphic.

Illusions of Life.

Life is like a beautiful and winding lane—on either side bright flowers and beautiful butterflies and tempting fruits, which we scarcely pause to admire and to taste, so eager are we to hasten to an opening which we imagine will be more beautiful still. But by degrees as we advance the trees grow bleak, the flowers and butterflies fall, the fruits disappear, and we find we have arrived—to reach a desert waste.—G. A. Sala.

"The Lottery Man"

BY RIDA JOHNSON-YOUNG

"Into this drug store. I forgot to call up Maguire, as I promised, about his trust busting scheme. I'll only be a moment."

"This is Mr. Peyton," began Foxhall as the wires were connected, "I wanted to tell you about—"

He paused. The man at the other end was talking excitedly. The indistinct buzz of his voice reached Jack at the door of the booth. Peyton whistled lon gand low. Then he turned to Jack, professional delight and personal sympathy struggling for expression on his face.

"It'll all off, old man!" said he "Maguire tells me that since 9 o'clock this morning, no less than 20,000 coupons and dollars have been sent by hand to the office. And they're comin gat the rate of a thousand an hour. The scheme's the biggest success we ever—"

"and my life's the biggest failure!" growled Jack Wright. "I'm the original born loser."

CHAPTER V.
An Explosion.

More than a month had gone by. The Lottery Man scheme was the talk of New York and of the whole country. Its fame had crossed the Atlantic, and English and French papers were quoting it as the arch-instance of Yankee enterprise.

At the Examiner office an entire staff of accountants had to be hired to handle the daily avalanche of dollar bills and to tabulate the coupons. Letters poured in from every quarter of the continent. From New York to Seattle, from Ottawa to Palm Beach hordes of spinsters were buying up Sunday editions of the Examiner, cutting out coupons and impoverishing themselves by the output of dollar bills. The Examiner's circulation soared to dizzy heights. Its owner began to growl at the terms of the agreement, which gave all the lottery dollars to Jack and none to the paper.

"There are an ungodly number of women in this country," observed Jack, who are either horribly anxious to get married or who are still more anxious to possess the hard-earned cash their sisters have poured into this lottery. I don't know which is the answer. But, in either case, I'm the goat."

And he kept on writing lurid weekly stories of his travel adventures to go on the Lottery Feature page of the Sunday paper. Incidentally he begun to go without lunches, without rides in "L" or subway, and to shave himself. Every cent he could raise went to buy coupons. And every coupon bore the name "Helene Heyer." Weekly, according to arrangement, an extra letter of his name appeared in the Examiner, along with an added section of his photograph.

During the weeks that followed the first appearance of the Lottery Man scheme Jack managed to spend more time at Peyton's home than before in as many years. He developed a most amazing fondness of his chum's society, even to the extent of calling on him often when Foxey was pretty certain not to be at home. On such occasions Jack, oddly enough, managed to see more of Helene than of any other member of the household.

And, apart from his usual charming self-confidence, it soon became apparent to him as to every one else that the girl looked forward eagerly to those calls of his. Jack Wright was unlike any other man she had met. His wealth of experience, his boyishness, his open admiration for herself—all these alike puzzled and strangely attracted her. Little by little a subtle yet powerful bond seemed drawing the two more and more closely together.

Mrs. Wright and Mrs. Peyton alike beheld with secret joy the turn affairs were taking.

And the lovers—as has ever been the way of lovers since the days of Cain's courtship—remained blissfully ignorant that any one on earth suspected their unspoken secret.

Affairs had reached this delightfully uncertain stage, when late one Saturday afternoon Helene dropped in for a few minutes to see Mrs. Wright, on her way home from a matinee. The little woman in black warmly greeted Helene.

"Jack isn't home yet," said she "and I was getting so lonely, sitting here in the twilight waiting for him. You must wait till he comes and let him take you home. It grows dark so early."

"I'm always especially anxious for Jack to get home early on Saturdays," she went on, "because he always brings me a proof of the Examiner's Sunday 'Lottery Man' page. Foxey gives it to him every week for me."

"And you are actually interested in that vulgar scheme?" queried Helene.

"Of course I am! I think it is one of the funniest things I ever heard of. I read every word of it. Don't you?"

"I don't read one syllable of it," denied Helene. "It seems to me horrible that a man should debase so wonderful a thing as love by offering himself as a husband to some unknown woman."

"But think how rich he'll be," suggested Mrs. Wright. "Foxey tells me nearly $200,000 has been received already in dollar bills from spinsters. He says it will go up to almost $800,000 before the contest closes. Do you wonder there are plenty of poor women so eager to marry a man who will have all that money?"

"I wasn't thinking of the women. I was thinking of the man himself. To coin matrimony into a matter of money! It is the vilest device I ever heard of. Suppose it were some man you knew. Wouldn't you feel differently then?"

"Perhaps I should," admitted Mrs. Wright, "but the men we know couldn't do that sort of thing, thank goodness. So I can laugh at it without having any personal feeling."

"You are right," asserted Helene; "the sort of men whom one knows don't stoop to such tricks."

"I wonder who the Lottery Man can be?" mused Mrs. Wright. "There are all sorts of criticisms, of course. But outside the Examiner office no one really knows. Not even Jack. I asked him and he said Foxey hadn't told him. Foxey wouldn't tell me, either. Some people say the Lottery Man is a City Hall Park loafer. Some say he is a famous actor. A hundred different men in public and private life, this past month, have been identified as the Lottery Man."

"I don't wonder he tries to remain anonymous as long as he can."

"But he can't do it much longer. Five letters of his name and half of his face have already been published. The face looks somehow familiar to me, the half of it that has appeared in the paper. I suppose it's some actor I've seen. No one can recognize just half of a face in little sections of course. But to-morrow's paper will print another section of it. And then I may be able to tell better. The letters of the name so far are 'J-O-H-N-W.' The first name is John. And 'W' is probably the initial. John W.—"

"Hello, people!" cried Jack from the doorway. "Why, Helene! It's like getting money in a letter to find you here. Is all the tea gone, mother? Or—"

"I was just going to the kitchen to fill the teapot,' 'answered Mrs. Wright promptly.

She left the room in most palpable haste, stopping only to pull from the side pocket of Jack's overcoat a rolled up proof-sheet.

"The proof of the 'Lottery Man' story, isn't it?" she asked as she hurried out. "Thanks for remembering."

"Oh, hold on!" called Jack, in sudden embarrassment. "I didn't mean to give you that this week. It has something that—"

But the kitchen door had closed behind Mrs. Wright. Jack, with a shrug of his shoulders, resigned himself to the inevitable.

"You looked tired," said Helene peering up at him through the twilight, "is anything worrying you?"

He laughed. But his laughter held a forced note that she was quick to detect.

"Nothing's worrying me," he answered. "Why should it?"

"That isn't true," she answered, quietly. "Why do you always feel bound to be jolly when you're with me? I'm not a child. Something is worrying you. Won't you tell me what it is? Perhaps I might help."

"And perhaps, on the other hand," he said lightly, "you might give me the frozen face. Girls are that way."

"This girl isn't," she contradicted.

"Not if the worry was all my own fault?" he queried.

"That would only make it the harder for you bear. Won't youp lease tell me all about it?"

"I can't! I haven't the nerve. You'll know all about it by to-morrow. And then good-by to the gorgeous times I've had with you this past month."

"Jack I don't understand you at all" protested the girl. "Do you mean you've gotten into some sort of trouble that will become known to-morrow and that it will end our friendship? Some trouble that—"

"Trouble!" echoed Jack. Why Helene, trouble is a Labour Day Outing and aGmes compared to what I'm up against."

"Whatever it is," she said, softly, "you are wrong in thinking it will turn me against you. It is when one is in trouble that he most needs his friends. And we are friends, aren't we?"

"Friends?" he repeated, hoarsely, "I—Helene!—I—oh, why in blue blazes didn't I meet you one hour earlier?"

"An hour ago?" she asked, perplexed.

"No. I mean, why didn't Mrs. Peyton's automobile smash into our front wall, that night, one hour earlier than it did?"

"If it's a conundrum—"

"It is!" he replied, in grim irony. "And I'm the answer."

"You aren't one bit like yourself to-night, Jack," began Helene, in despair.

The sudden opening of the kitchen door broke in upon the words. A flood of light from across the threshold illuminated the little living-room In the doorway stood Mrs. Wright. Every line of her slim little figure was tense. She seemed fairly to bristle with uncontrollable excitement. In one outstretched hand she clutched the page-proof.

"It means," began Jack, miserably, taking in the situation at a glance and squaring his broad shoulders to face the music. "It—it means, mother—that—"

"As soon as I saw this extra section of the photograph," sputtered Mrs. Wright, too excited to be silent, "I recognized that little triangular scar on the nose—the one from the fragment of a shell at San Juan Hill. Then the extra letter of the name. It spells now, 'JOHN WR—' Oh, there can't be any mistake! You're the Lottery Man! You'"

There was an instant of utter stillness. Then the spell was broken by a stifled, sobbing gasp from Helene. And Jack answered slowly,

"Yes, I am—the Lottery Man."

Mrs. Wright burst into a fit of uncontrollable weeping. Full of contrition, Jack sprang to her side, catching her close in his arms and murmuring over and over:

"Oh, mother, darling, I'm so sorry. So sorry! Don't take it like that! You'll break me all up. Don't I—"

"I'm afraid I must go," said Helene rising and moving toward theouter door. "Good evening, Mrs. Wright."

"No, no," sobbed Mrs. Wright, "you mustn't go. I didn't mean to behave so foolishly about it. Don't go, Helene."

"I must, I'm afraid," repeated Helene. "It is growing dark and I don't like to be out of doors so late—alone."

"But Jack is going to take you home," protested Mrs. Wright. "He always does."

"He always did," gently corrected Helene. "I shall not trouble him again."

"Helene!" cried Jack, in utter desperation, "you dont' mean that! I—"

"I am sorry if I did not make my meaning perfectly clear,' she retorted, her sweet voice cold and hard as ice, "I intended to. Good-night."

ST. JOHN'S A. Y. P. A. HAVE ENJOYABLE SLEIGH DRIVE

The Young People's Association of St. John's church had a most enjoyable sleigh drive last night. Leaving the post office about 8.15, the party drove through Ashburnham, up Concession street, across Smith street to Jackson Park, and then proceeded to Mr. and Mrs. John Bell's, of Cedar Park, who most warmly entertained them. An oyster supper was followed by games, amusements and songs, and an enjoyable evening was spent by all.

In spite of the large number who were present, expressions of regret were heard on the part of the host and hostess that there were not more. They certainly were missed. At the conclusion of the evening the company joined in singing "Auld Lang Syne," "The Peace Maker," (Mr. Bell's composition), and the National Anthem, thus bringing to a close a most enjoyable evening. Every one present voted it a great success, and the thanks of the company to Mr. and Mrs. Bell were warm and genuine.

LOVE COURTSHIP AND MARRIAGE IN IRELAND

Interesting Address Given by Rev. Jas. Northy in Knox Church Last Evening, to a Very Appreciative Audience.

A TELLING SPEAKER

Quite a large and appreciative audience turned out last night to hear an excellent lecture, illustrated by limelight views, given by the Rev. James Northey in Knox Church. While the subject for the evening was entitled "Love, courtship, and marriage," the principal portion of the discourse was devoted to a lucid description of Ireland and its characteristics. Rev. James Northey is a man of well-known repute, as a lecturer in his native land and abroad. He possesses an excellent delivery, coupled with an unlimited vocabulary that enables him to at once engage the attention of the audience. The first series of views thrown on the screen last night were coast scenes and views of inland waters, one picture strikingly represented a huge Atlantic wave coming in contact with a large rock projecting out from the coast of Ireland. The speaker said that the inconceivable force of that vast mountain of water striking the rock would be sufficient to make it tremble. Another picture showed a young couple out in a boat safely ensconced under an umbrella, which, the speaker remarked, looked rather suspicious. He said that love was no trivial matter, but was a serious proposition, which affected both poor and rich alike.

An Irishman, who was once asked what love was, replied that it was a "softening of the heart, which made you soft on a wee girl."

In Ireland, a boy's a boy, regardless of age, until he enters the matrimonial field. Another interesting feature in connection with the love and courtship affairs, was the matchmaker, who is a recognized authority on matrimonial affairs in some parts of Ireland. This position is generally occupied by some old grandmother. One woman that the speaker referred to, had forty matches to her credit, with only two failures to report. He thought that this method might be adopted in Canada and even in Peterborough, with the same success.

The culmination of the courtship, which was followed by marriage, was always celebrated both in the home and the market square. A keg of whiskey was an important factor during these festivities, which lasted for an indefinite period.

Several views were shown of the illicit manufacture of whiskey in the mountainous regions of Ireland, which were followed by a series of views showing some of Ireland's largest industries.

(ORMOND & WALSH OLD STAND)

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

I WONDER if there ever was a correspondent

"With soul so dead
He never to himself hath said,
With doubtful pen and perplexed head—
How shall I sign this letter?"

A confiding young person writes me a careful analysis of the relationship between "himself" and her—apparently they are somewhere in that misty but delightful land that lies between "just friends" and an engagement—and tells me of his departure on the first journey that makes letters necessary, and asks me how she shall sign her letters to him.

How will "Sincerely your friend" do, young person?

Or "Very sincerely yours?"

Or "Cordially yours?"

Or what's the matter with ending some of them in some individual little way that will obviate the necessity of a formal signature, as

"When you geent might take the word "your" too much traveled person to come to see your old friend.

Or why not try a favourite of mine which is most convenient in that it can carry as much or as little as you wish it to, and never tell,

"As ever,

These are signatures into which he may read enough warmth to keep his love alive in case he is longing to cross the boundary into the land of pledged troth, and for which you need never feel any regret in case you drift back in the land of "just friends."

I think the whole subject of letter signing is a distinctly interesting one, and always notice signatures with a view to reading the character of their writers.

I have no use for the woman who always signs her letters to even her casual friends, "Lovingly yours," or "Yours with love." It seems a degradation of that word which ought to be kept precious. It's like wearing one's best frock all the time and getting it soiled and crumpled and having nothing left to wear "when the prince comes."

Another letter signer who is decidedly amusing is the person who seems afraid of the word "your," and signs "Very sincerely," or "Very truly," as if he feared his correspondent might take the work "your" too literally.

As a matter of fact, "Very truly yours" is nothing more than a form—the most business-like and impersonal signature possible.

"Very sincerely yours" has a little more warmth in it.

"Very cordially yours" or "Faithfully yours," I think are excellent ways to sign letters to friends somewhat above the acquaintance class.

"Affectionately yours" is the next step. "Lovingly yours," I cannot see how anyone could sign to more than half a dozen correspondents—outside her own home circle—at most.

"Hastily yours" or "Yours in haste" are rude and should never be used.

Original and unhackeneyed ways of ending letters are to me the best of all.

I have a very bright little friend who sometimes signs her letters

"I like you, Ruth,

_____."

And it always gives me a little jolt of pleasure when she does.

I also know a grown up son who ends his letters to his mother

"I love you, mother,

_____."

And how much that signature means to her, I wouldn't attempt to tell you.

"A Wonderful Library" Was Subject Discussed By Goodfellowship League

The usual meeting of the St. John's Guild of Good Fellowship was held in the Princess Theatre Sunday afternoon, when a large number of men were present. The subject announced was "A Wonderful Library."

The Rev. C. Carpenter, in his opening remarks, reminded his hearers that this week was being kept as the commemoration of the issue of the authorized version of the Bible of 1611 that is, the Bible as we know it to-day. The address was a historical review of the progress of revision, and the circumstances which made them necessary.

The earliest known title for the whole Bible, he said, was "The Divine Library," which occurs in the writing of Jerome. The Greeks spoke of "The Books," and by the 12th century the word became singular, "The Book," whilst the title "Bible" did not come into use until the 14th century. The first Bible contained only "The Law"; that is the five books of Moses. Hezekiah added to this certain other books, without altering the name, and Ezra and Nehemiah, after the captivity, collected all the books as we have them to-day, and arranged them into three, The Law, the Prophets and the Holy Writings. This was about 400 years before Christ. About a century later the Hebrew scriptures were translated into Greek, and in this version the Apocrypha first appeared—Apocrypha meaning hidden, or of unknown authority. In due time were added the Books of the New Testament, thus completing, in about 1,600 years, the standard size of the Bible.

Thus the Bible was truly a library, composed of many books, by many writers, written in varying times and under varying conditions. The unity of the Bible as a whole made it wonderful, and showed its divine inspiration, to say nothing of the hold which it has made on the affections of all peoples in all places. After referring to the old manuscripts, the course of the Bible in England was traced from the 7th to the 17th centuries and the most important versions mentioned. The Latin Bible was almost the only one used until holy men were moved to translate it into the mother tongue. But the mother tongue itself was undergoing great changes during these centuries, hence the need of continual revision. Before the age of printing Wickliffe's Bible was the most important one, although it was never widely used, as the expense of it was so great. After the invention of printing came, Wm. Tyndale's Bible about 1525 which was condemned and ordered to be destroyed for unorthodox opinions. About the same time Miles Coverdale, Matthew, and Taverner brought out their revisions, and in 1540 was published the Great Bible under the authority of Cranmer. From this Bible are taken the Psalms, the Ten Commandments and other selections, of the Anglican Prayer Book. In 1568 came the Bishop's Bible which was the first to divided into verses.

Then followed the so-called authorized version of 1611 put forth in the reign of James I. This was translated direct from the original languages by a body of 47 divines, who sought to make the revision as perfect as possible. It was "appointed to be read in churches," but the only real "authority" it had was the loving consent of the public. This is the Bible we use to-day, and which has won its way solely by its merits. Its language is simple but dignified and can be understood and appreciated by the ignorant, whilst the most learned can find in it fullest satisfaction. Well may it be called a wonderful library, not only because of its antiquity, not only for its survival through persecution and fire, but above all because it can speak to every heart with a voice of living authority.

Many interesting comments were made about the different versions and their fate, and it was decided to continue the subject on Sunday next.

"The Holy City" was acceptably rendered by Mr. Green during the interval, after which a short discussion was held, and the meeting brought to a close in the usual way.

MR. JOHN HULL'S VIEWS ON RECIPROCITY

Lakefield, Feb. 7th, 1911.

To Hon. J. R. Stratton, M.P., Ottawa.

Dear Sir,—I am pleased at the prospects of our having a renewal of a reciprocity treaty with the United States. I think it will be a good thing for us Canadians. I have been in the milling business since 1857, and remember during reciprocity time fall wheat was from 70c. to 40c. a a bush. above spring, and barley sold for from 70c. to 85c. a bushel, barley going to the United States.

In the fall of 1859 and the spring of 1860 I was working in Norwood when T. Buck had a quantity of fall wheat in the mill, when he drew it with teams to Cobourg and shipped it to Rochester and bought spring wheat to mill into flour. In 1860-1861 I was working in Sterling where we bought barley very largely, and from 20 to 30 teams left the mill every day with 75 to 90 bushels of barley for Belleville. We paid for the barley from 70 to 85 cents a bushel. In 1863 I was working in Cobourg in the old Perry mill and we had 10,000 bushels of fall wheat in the mill in the month of June and shipped it to Rochester and brought spring wheat from Peterborough to keep mill running. And I have known since I came to Lakefield of Nicholls & Hall shipping fall wheat out of Martin's old mill to Rochester, all because there was more money in shipping fall wheat than grinding it at that time. And I have been in Port Hope and have seen schooner load after schooner load of spring wheat come into the harbour for the Port Hope mills in June and July when Port Hope had five mills running right along, but since 1866 they have been all closed down but one now. Since the abrogation of the treaty, barley is grown but very little. Fall wheat is only worth, or little better, than spring about 5 cents for the best, but ordinary the same price, and from what I have personally known, I believe it will be a good thing for the country as a whole, and after a year's working, it will be a great feather in the government's cap after all. Anything that Sir Wilfrid's government does will suit me, as you know. I think they cannot do wrong.

I am, yours,

JOHN HULL.

EFFICIENCY OF MILLER BILL IS QUESTIONED

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, FEB. 14.—The efficiency of the Miller anti-betting bill was questioned seriously this morning, when the Court of Appeal gave judgment in favour of Horgart, of the Greath Northwestern Telegraph Co., on a charge of violating the Miller bill by transmitting reports of racing. In giving judgment of the court Chief Justice Meredith said it was absurd to accuse the Telegraph Co. or a newspaper publishing reports of races with an intent to guide readers betting, when nobody could tell but that the effect would be exactly the reverse. The decision is regarded by the anti-Millerites as quite a victory, but the supporters of the bill may carry the question further.

In order to convince out-of-town persons that our claims are genuine we will pay Fare up to $10 to the first person enrolling from any municipality. This is because we fully realize how vigorously we are opposed by those interested in the older six-months' systems. Toronto, Montreal, Ottawa, and other cities where our system is being taught need no further evidence. They have living testimonials on every hand. 30-day Stenography is genuine. POST CARD COLUMN

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—There exists at the present time in the City of Peterborough more or less of a bitter feeling between religious denominations. This is to be regretted and is not conducive to the prosperity of our city and it is the duty of all respectable people to discourage it, and, if possible, to remove the cause. There is no doubt that the two great forces that are stirring up this strife, are publicity in the newspapers and the clergymen.

As a remedy, I would suggest that in future, the press cease publishing the sermons of every religious adventurer, and, if possible, our Industrial Commissioner should secure some useful occupation for our clergymen on week days, and they would have less time to stir up strife between next door neighbours.

Yours truly,

PEACE

The first event will be called at 8.00 p.m.

The First Aid to the Injured Class will hold their examination next Monday night, Feb. 20th. Those who have taken up this work and intend writing for their certificates are requested to keep this date open.

In the Championship Bowling competition the Mivvies last night defeated the Millards in a close and exciting game, A. H. FORESEES DISASTER

Mr. Foster Discusses the Reciprocity Treaty in a Three Hours' Speech in the House Yesterday

DR. NEELY REPLIES

Ottawa, Feb. 15.—For three long hours in the Commons yesterday Hon George E. Foster conjured up and bedecked the Opposition scarecrow to frighten the country away from the productive fields of expanding trade and prosperity opened by the Government proposals for freer intercourse with Canada's nearest market. He saw in the agreement the death blow to the Imperial preference, and the even more tragic "dishing" of the tariff reform movement in Great Britain.

Mr. Foster's arraignment of the Government was bitter. His chief argument was that acceptance of the reciprocity proposals means abandonment of the confederation ideal, developed since 1867. The object of the United States was political, not economical, in short, it spelt continental union. The United States, he declared, coveted Canadian natural resources, and in five years the trusts would have gobbled everything that was lying loose. It involved a breach of faith with British investors, and the instability of the arrangement would deter the incoming of both capital and labor.

He charged Sir Wilfrid Laurier with breaking his pledge not to revise the tariff until a commission had been appointed, and charged the Government with helplessness in the face of the fruit growers' demands, replying that it was "too late." This was all the more remarkable in view of the fact that a telegram expressing satisfaction with prevailing conditions had been received from the Fruit Growers' Convention on Dec. 15. He challenged the statement that the preference had been scrupulously maintained, and argued that profitable reciprocity would have been with the West Indies and Great Britain. He asked if Canada was through with responsible government, and said that Messrs. Fielding and Paterson had crept into Washington with fear and trembling and had brought back a mortgage. If Canada had abandoned reciprocity 25 years before she did, the country would have been that much farther ahead to-day.

In a dramatic peroration he exclaimed: "This land of ours, we have made it, we and our fathers, we have wrought so in order to bestow a great gift upon a rich nation." The United States was engaged in a conquest of Canada, to unify the continent, where the power of the republic would be supreme. "This proposal cuts square across the national ideal, challenges it at every point, will endanger it undoubtedly, may destroy it entirely."

Dr. Neely (Humbolt, Sask.), who followed, said the proposal had the endorsement of every farmer in the west. It would bring prosperity as Canada never had it before, and those who opposed it would have to answer to the people.

Hon. Clifford Sifton was in the House during the entire debate and was a silent but interested spectator from his seat in the front row.

Said Good-Bye.

Kingston, Feb. 15.—St. Mary's Cathedral was filled to the doors last night when the congregation said farewell to Archbishop Gauthier, who leaves for Ottawa this afternoon. The congregation presented him with an address and a purse of gold of $2,000 and the laity presented a golden pectoral cross and an address. After the ceremonies at the church the archbishop gave a banquet to the clergy at the palace. At 8 a.m. this morning his grace said his last mass in the cathedral for the children

You Can Cure Chest Colds

And Bronchitis by Using Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine If You Get the Genuine

The mere mention of pneumonia and consumption causes a person to shudder, but a cold is such a common thing that it is too often left alone until these other ailments develop from it.

You can readily cure throat and chest colds, croup and bronchitis, by using Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. This medicine is both thorough and far-reaching in its influence on the system. For this reason its merits are well-known and its sales enormous.

But there are at least four imitations of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. And imitations are always a little cheaper, how else would they sell. They are never sold on their own merit, but on the merit of the article they imitate.

Their likeness is in name only, and when you are in need of medicine you don't want to depend on a name or imitation. Every bottle of the genuine bears the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., the famous Receipt Book author. 25 cents a bottle, family size 60 cents; all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

COL. M'GILLIVRAY DEAD.

Noted Orangeman, Mason and Forester Passes Away.

Guelph, Feb. 15.—The death occurred here yesterday, after an illness of several years, of Lieut.-Col. John Alexander McGillivray, eldest son of the late George McGillivray of Whitby.

The deceased was born in Whitby on July 19, 1852, and was prepared for matriculation to the Toronto University at the collegiate institute of that town.

He studied law in Oshawa, and on being called to the Bar started practice in Port Perry. He subsequently removed to Uxbridge, where he soon enjoyed an extensive and lucrative practice. He early became prominent in political circles, and unsuccessfully contested North Ontario against Isaac J. Gould for a seat in the local House. Nothing daunted, he turned his attention to Dominion affairs, and was returned in a bye-election to support the administration of Sir John Thompson.

In fraternal societies, the late Col. McGillivray was quite prominent. In the Masonic craft he rose to the rank of D.D.G.M. of Toronto district. In the Foresters he occupied the position of supreme secretary for many years and until failing health compelled him to resign. Although busily engaged in the practice of law while at Uxbridge, he found time to administer at least two farms and to encourage agriculture in its various branches. He was among the first, if not the first, to import the horned Dorset sheep into Canada, and for many years his services were sought after by the Industrial Exhibition Board as a director. He was elected president in 1906, but in a short time he was overtaken by illness that rendered his discharge of his important duties more than he could bear, and his resignation followed. He early sought to serve his country through the medium of the Canadian militia by joining Uxbridge company of the 34th Regiment as a lieutenant. He remained with the regiment until he became its commanding officer in 1902. He leaves a widow and one son, Gordon. The funeral will be held at Uxbridge on Thursday at 2.30 p.m.

Fire Swept Main Street.

Several business places were wiped out, including the Commercial Hotel.

The stores on the north side of the main thoroughfare of the village were not damaged except that windows were broken in several instances by the force of the explosions of cartridges and powder in the two hardware establishments, which fell a prey to the flames.

A portion of the contents of the hotel was saved and the inmates had ample time to escape.

The blaze destroyed the following places, the loss in most cases being fairly well covered by insurance: J. and C. McDonell, hardware and furniture; E. Rannie, dry goods and groceries; R. J. Drysdale, shoe merchant; T. W. Palmer, restaurant; F. Manns, barber; J. B. McArthur, hardware; the Commercial Hotel.

Dix Escaped Them.

New York, Feb. 15.—A valiant band of suffragettes made an attempt to hold up and extort a promise of aid from Governor Dix yesterday, as the executive was leaving for Albany, but were foiled. The governor was surprised that the women were waiting at the Grand Central Depot to meet him, so he went through a side entrance to the station, screening himself behind his companions until he got aboard his train.

Wm. F. Sheehan, the Tammany candidate for United States Senator, also avoided the women.

"I have troubles enough now," declared he, and he dodged through a side entrance at the depot, preparatory to going to Buffalo to address his neighbors last evening. Mr. Sheehan said: "I am going to win. That is all I can say now."

The suffragettes, disappointed at not seeing the governor, tackled several States Senators who were going to Albany.

After Man Higher Up.

Danville, Ill., Feb. 15.—The Vermilion County grand jury, which is investigation the vote-selling scandal in the recent elections, yesterday dropped the direct probe into the frauds in an effort to get grands on a powerful politician—one of Cannon's lieutenants—who is accused of "fixing" witnesses.

This man, whose name has not been divulged, is said to have forced almost a dozen important witnesses to keep away from the grand jury. Some of these witnesses are even said to have been spirited out of town. It was predicted that an indictment charging contempt, and probably one charging subordination of perjury, would be returned against him.

Seventy-six new trials have been made, ordered by the grand jury, and their preparation was begun to-day.

A Case of Hold-Up.

Kingston, Feb. 15.—Magistrate Farrell committed Patrick Burns for trial on a charge of holding up and assaulting John Hickey last Tuesday night. James Rigney, who shadowed two men from the scene identified Burns as the man who was implicated.

Millions Of Lives

An Awful Toll Collected by Consumption. Many Unnecessary Deaths

If people could only understand that systemic catarrh is an internal disease that external applications cannot cure, they would not need to be warned so often about this malady, which, when neglected, paves the way oftentimes for consumption, at the cost of millions of lives every year. Yet catarrh may be cured, if the right treatment is employed.

The only way to successfully treat catarrh is by employing a medicine which is absorbed and carried by the blood to all parts of the system, so that the mucous membrane or internal lining of the body is toned up and made capable of resisting the infection of consumption and other diseases.

We have a remedy prepared from the prescription of a physician who for thirty years studied and made catarrh a specialty, and whose record was a patient restored to health in every case where his treatment was followed as prescribed. That remedy is Rexall Mucu-Tone. We are so positive that it will completely overcome catarrh in all its various forms, whether acute or chronic, that we promise to return every penny paid us for the medicine in every case where it fails or for any reason does not satisfy the user.

We want you to try Rexall Mucu-Tone on our recommendation and guarantee. We are right here where you live, and you do not contract any obligation or risk when you try Rexall Mucu-Tone on our guarantee. We have Rexall Mucu-Tone in two sizes, 50 cents and $1.00. Very often the taking of one 50-cent bottle is sufficient to make a marked impression upon the case. Of course in chronic cases a longer treatment is necessary. The average in such instances is three $1.00 bottles. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in Peterborough only at our store,—The Rexall Store, McDermid and Jury, druggists, corner George and Charlotte streets.

THE TREATY WAS PASSED

Reciprocity Bill Was Carried by the United States House of Representatives and Will Now Go to the Senate

A BITTER DEBATE

Washington, Feb. 15.—President Taft's reciprocity agreement with Canada was ratified in the House of Representatives last night, through the support of an almost solid Democratic vote. The McCall bill, carrying the agreement into effect, was passed by 221 to 93. A majority of the Republicans present voted against the measure, the division being 78 ayes and 87 noes. The Democratic vote was 143 ayes and only 5 noes. A majority of the Republican insurgents voted for the bill.

The McCall bill now goes to the Senate. What its fate will be in that body is problematical at this time. President Taft believes that if a filibuster can be avoided and a vote taken, the bill will pass.

The passage of the bill in the House came at the end of a long debate, which at times was as bitter as has been heard on the floor of that chamber in years. The fight was confined almost wholly to the Republican side. Democratic members joined in from time to time, and taunted the majority members for their lack of unity. The Democratic leaders also put in the claim that the reciprocity agreement was good Democratic doctrine, and declared that they were glad to welcome President Taft and many of the House Republicans into the Democratic fold. The suggestion came from the Republican side that Mr. Taft and Champ Clark might be rivals for the next Democratic Presidential nomination. Mr. Clark claimed that in case of a contest of that sort, he would win "hands down."

A final vote was reached last night only through the application of a closure rule, which shut off all amendments, and even dispensed with the reading of the bill. The procedure was decided upon only after Mr. McCall had failed to get unanimous consent to do away with the calendar of Wednesday. If that had been secure, he said he would have been glad to let the debate continue for another legislative day.

The Republicans opposed to the bill fought till the very last, denouncing it in caustic language. They directed their fire especially against the Democrats, and accused them, on the eve of going into power in the House of enforcing a "gag" rule as drastic as anything against which they had so eloquently inveighed in the past.

It has been apparent for several days that the reciprocity measure would have an overwhelming majority in the House. This seemed to make its opponents all the more bitter. Some of the old guard Republican leaders, like Dalzell of Pennsylvania and Fordney of Michigan, gave it as their predictions that the Republican party would be defeated by reason of what they characterized a departure from the principal of protection and the espousal of free trade. Mr. Dalzell proposed to stand where he had stood for forty years, and to "go down" with his party. Mr. Fordney said he feared that Democratic times were coming, and that made him "sweat blood" to contemplate the melancholy fact.

Speaker Cannon took no part in the debate either Monday or yesterday. He was in the chamber constantly, however, and followed the arguments on both sides with the keenest interest. There was loud applause and cheering in the House last night when on the first record vote that was ordered the Speaker called Representative Ollie James of Kentucky, one of the leaders of the Democratic side, to the chair. Mr. James sat there all through the roll call, and when he announced the vote the cheering was renewed. This said to be the only time a Democrat has been called to preside over the House since the Republicans gained control.

Spectacular Suicide.

New York, Feb. 15.—The most spectacular suicide that New York has ever known took place at Washington avenue and Montgomery street, Brooklyn, yesterday, when a well-dressed man coolly climbed twenty feet above the pavement, drove a nail to a sign which hung over the street, placed one end of a rope about his neck and tied the other about the nail and then dropped. He was found dead shortly afterward by a policeman.

The man had climbed up one of the poles supporting the sign. The dead man was about sixty years old, and there was nothing in his possession by which he could be identified.

No Change In Policy.

Montreal, Feb. 15. L. J. Tarte of La Patrie, gave out last evening a statement that there is absolutely no truth in the report that Mr. Thomas Cote will join the staff of La Patrie in order to conduct a pro-reciprocity campaign. He has accepted a position on the staff like any other writer, and will be subject to the policy of the paper.

Sir A. P. Pelletier Resigns.

Montreal, Feb. 15.—It is understood here that the resignation of Sir A. P. Pelletier as Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Quebec has been received and that Sir Francis Langlier, acting chief justice of the Superior Court of the province, will be appointed in his stead.

BILINGUAL SCHOOLS

Mr. Racine Raises the Question in the Legislature but is Checked —The Budget Debate is Continued

AGRICULTURAL SCHOOLS

Toronto, Feb. 15.—Bilingual schools, reciprocity and the presentation for the Opposition's acceptance or rejection of a big progressive new platform, featured an animated, strenuous and somewhat prolonged sitting of the Ontario Legislature yesterday afternoon.

W. H. Hoyle, chairman of the standing orders committee, gave emphatic notice that Friday would be the last day for the reception of petitions. (Hear, hear, from Sir James Whitney). Under no circumstances did the committee intend to ask for any further extension of time. Feb. 24 would be the last day for the introduction of private bills.

Valentine Stock, South Perth, resumed the budget debate, speaking chiefly in relation to education. The chief inspector of Toronto reported, he said, a great scarcity of teachers. It was evident that what was troubling the country was beginning also to trouble the cities. This could have been avoided if the Government had not changed the model school policy of the Department.

The projected industrial schools for city boys would be a further temptation to rural population to draw them away from the land. This should be offset by an extensive system of agricultural education in rural schools.

J. Thompson, East Peterboro (Con.), declared that in North Peterboro, owing to the niggardly policy of the Liberal Government there were scarcely any schools at all six years ago, but the generous grants of the present administration had provided plenty of schools.

Reciprocity would be a blow to the farmers in more ways than one. Taking eggs, for instance, the average price per dozen was higher in Canada than in the United States, and an equalization would mean millions of dollars' loss to the farmers here. Last year there were 130,000,000 dozens of eggs marketed in Ontario, at an average of 20 cents a dozen. The farmers' revenue was, therefore, $24,000,000.

D. Racine, French Liberal member from Russell, said his people wanted to learn the English language, and have their children learn it in the schools; "but," he added, "we want to keep our mother tongue."

It was a hard thing for the French children to pass examination that were printed and required to be answered in English. If this must maintain, they should be tried both ways.

"We are not getting our share of the grant for our separate schools," he continued. "The old Government gave us more, and the present Minister of Education is not treating us fairly. The public schools of the east, with all their assistance, are not being properly looked after. The results are not as good in them as in our separate schools."

Mr. Racine would be glad to see Ontario and Quebec get closer together—"get mixed," is the way he put it. He was glad to see the vote of $100,000 towards the tercentenary fund last year. It would go a long way in this direction. But, he prophesied, that his honorable friend, G. H. Ferguson from Grenville, would live to regret the motion he had introduced regarding bi-lingual schools.

Sir James Whitney rose to protest that it was clearly contrary to the elementary rules of procedure to refer to a subject which was already on the order paper. It should not be discussed till that order of business was reached.

A. A. Aubin, French Conservative member from Sturgeon Falls, contrasted the treatment accorded to the north country under Liberal and Conservative rule.

The present Government was getting as much revenue from small areas of timber to-day as the old Government did for immensely large areas. The present Government had kept its word to the people in every particular—free grants to settlers, colonization carried on, no timber given away, license law enforced, and education advanced.

Allan Studholme, Hamilton East (Labor), said that from the speeches one would think there was nobody in this province but farmers. Their one cry had been "More for the poor farmer." While the farmers were admittedly prosperous, the conditions of labor called for amelioration. The prosperous Ontario farmer was aided by the Government last year to the extent of $700,000. He regarded the immigration grants as worse than wasted.

Hon. A. G. MacKay moved the adjournment of the debate.

At the instance of Toronto Council, W. D. Macpherson gave notice that he would introduce a bill giving recognition to engines and vehicles of fire departments the right of way over streets and highways while proceeding to a fire or answering a fire alarm call.

Wishart Goes to Ireland.

Toronto, Feb. 15.—The warrant of surrender of Abraham Wishart, a former sergeant in the Royal Irish Constabulary, has been signed by the Governor-General, and he will start back to-day with Sergt. MacNeice, who came across the sea after him. Wishart is only charged with theft of about $15 from a fellow constable which illustrates the strictness of discipline in the organization. Wishart was arrested three months ago, and has been kept in jail on remand since. He pleads innocence.

Why the Optical Institute Succeeds

There are Optometrists in Canada who do a larger business than ourselves. There are Optometrists and Opticians who do a smaller, but the Optometrist who does better work or gives better value has not pushed his head above the Optical Horizon. A strong statement to be sure, but when we point to twenty years of the best training and experience in both United States and Canada and over 17000 persons helped to the best possible Eyesight are we not justly proud of our work? We are even adding to our facilities and studying the latest methods. This is why we succeed.

"The Flaneur" Is Dead.

Toronto, Feb. 15.—Mr. H. H. Wiltshire, who was one of the oldest newspapermen in the city, died at the General Hospital last night. He had been ailing for about two months through a gradual breaking down of his constitution. He remained at his residence, 359 Givens street, till about a week ago, when he was removed to the hospital.

Mr. Henry Horace Wiltshire was born in London, England, about 75 years ago. When a lad he was apprenticed to the printing trade, which, in those days, was the first step to reporting, and later he was for over twenty years connected with The London Times. He came to Canada about twenty-seven years ago and took a position with The Mail, where he started editing of the page which is widely known as that of "The Flaneur."

Exclude Dynamite.

New York, Feb. 15. It is announced that the Municipal Explosives Commission of Greater New York which has been informally investigating the recent Communipaw explosion and several other less serious accidents with dynamite and other explosives in the vicinity of the city, is considering the advisability of prohibiting entirely the use of dynamite within the city limits.

The commission's contemplated action would not only shut out dynamite for the purposes of blasting, but would also prevent its transportation or shipment from or to piers or terminals within the corporate limits.

Bad Wreck In France.

Courville, France, Feb. 15.—A bad collision occurred near here last evening on the western section of the State Railroad, when the expresses for Paris and Brest dashed simultaneously into a freight train which was being sidetracked. The wreckage immediately caught fire.

Nine bodies were taken from the wreck up to midnight, and one of the eight injured recovered died, making the total number of fatalities ten. It was apparent, also to the searching parties that other bodies are still uncovered, as charred flesh was visible under the debris, which was still blazing at that hour.

GOOD-BYE TO BEAUTY
It is good bye to beauty when kidney derangements set in. The skin becomes hard and dry and the form wastes away and becomes emaciated. One cannot be too watchful and the safest way is to keep the kidneys as well as the liver and bowels, healthy and active by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills. This ensures pure blood and a healthy digestive system.

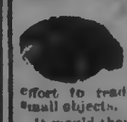
The Care Of The E--Y--E--S



A person in good health, at the age of 45 years, will ordinarily notice a change in the sight, requiring more effort to read fine print, or to see small objects.

It would then be advisable to have the eyes examined by a Competent Eyesight Specialist and fitted with "Preserving or Reet Glasses".

Glasses should be changed usually once in two years.

Headaches are often warnings that the eyes need help and they should not be neglected.

The Eyes are the most important organs of the fine senses, and generally the most abused.

Many Eyes Are Ruined by wearing cheap and imperfect glasses.

REDUCED TO A SKELETON

DOCTOR SAID SHE WOULD DIE

"Fruit-a-tives" Saved Her Life

RIVIERE A PIERRE, QUE., May 9th 1910

"I look upon my recovery as nothing short of a miracle. I was for eleven years constantly suffering from Chronic Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Constipation. The last two years of my illness, I was confined to my bed nearly all the time. I was so thin I weighed only 90 pounds, and I vomited everything I ate. Even water would not stay on my stomach.

The doctors gave me up to die as the stomach trouble produced heart weakness and I was frequently unconscious.

At this time, a lady friend strongly advised me to try "Fruit-a-tives" and how thankful I am that I did so. When I had taken one box, I was much better and after three boxes, I was practically well again and had gained 20 pounds.

I have taken thirteen boxes in all and now weigh 150 pounds and am absolutely well—no pain—no indigestion—no constipation—my heart is sound and complexion clear".

"THE INNOCENT MURDERERS"

By Wm. Johnston and Paul West

"George! George!" cried Ernesta, struggling to free her arm from his grasp. "What is the matter? Are you crazy?"

"Crazy!" Gordon hissed through his teeth. "Crazy! Why shouldn't I be. Read that!"

He shook the paper before Ernesta's eyes. She could not see the dancing type.

"Read what?" she demanded.

"So," he went on, "so, you have come to New York, to meet him, have you? Albert Rassignol! That's it, is it? Well, you can meet if you want to. But you can't play me as false as you think."

"Calm!" hissed Gordon. "You ask me to be calm, after the way you have treated me! I'll—" she had led him, by now, to a more secluded part of the lobby, where they were less liable to be overheard. But Sullivan, by straining his ears, could catch their words. "You've tried to play me false, Ernesta, and I know it all. Yes, you have," he went on as she protested. "This paper has shown me what you've tried to keep from me. Albert Rassignol is here. So that's why you wanted my five thousand dollars and made me give it to you! You wanted it for him! Well, you shan't have it. I demand that you give it back to me at once."

"Impossible," cried the girl. "Oh George, you don't understand, you don't believe me. You can't believe what you're saying about me. You are wrong."

"Tell me, then, isn't he in New York? Didn't you come here to meet him?"

"Yes, but—"

"Ah, so you confess it all! Oh, Ernesta, how could you? How could you?"

"George!" She laid her hand on his sleeve and looked up into his eyes. Her steady glance quieted him. He stopped, panting in his emotion. She led him to a chair and they sat down. Sullivan could hear no more, but he could see that Ernesta was speaking fervently. He saw the look of rage and wildness on Gordon's face gradually soften. Then they rose, and Ernesta put out her hand to her companion. He took it and smiled. They left the hotel together.

Sullivan looked after them.

"Well, by George!" was all he could say, as he entered the bar to take something to brace himself.

And at various times during the evening until they returned, he said the same thing again. Ernesta came back to the hotel accompanied to the door by Gordon, who left her. She went directly upstairs.

The next morning, Sullivan, who had made it a point to have his room located in a part of the hotel where Ernesta would not be so liable to discover him, was up early after a night spent in fruitless speculation. He kept an eye on the hotel from a doorway across the street. About half-past eight, he saw Ernesta come out alone. She did not take a car, but walked and Sullivan followed. She went down Broadway to Madison Square, and the detective guessed that he had hit it right. She had to go back to the place where she was to transact the business which had brought her to New York. He saw her enter one of the big buildings on Twenty-third street, and breathed a sigh of relief. Then he proceeded to watch for Gordon, knowing that he would not be far away.

At a little before ten he bought a paper and sat down on a bench to read. He had hardly glanced at the first page when he saw something that made his eyes nearly burst from their sockets. It was this:

THE GRAYDON GHOST

Ghastly Visitation That Has Upset A Peaceful New England College Town.

Graydon, Mass., May 20.—This town has a ghost or something so near to it that the inhabitants are thoroughly alarmed. It made its first appearance yesterday, when it began to bewitch the waters in Bradley's ice-pond, a hitherto respectable body of water on the hill near Graydon College. Small boys discovered the fact that the water had suddenly become possessed of a tingling sensation, and the town was immediately alarmed over the occurrence.

Last night the ghost was seen, and this time by a blind man! Strange as this may seem, it is declared to be a fact. The man is Dan Hawkins, a sober musician, who lost his sight five years ago. He was returning from a suburb when he suddenly perceived a human body moving along a few feet from the ground. He has not been able to tell more about it, but will probably when he recovers from the shock.

But the climax was reached this evening when a strange light appeared over Cemetery Hill, a little out of the town. It is now shining in a ghostly fashion and the entire population is looking at it and wondering what it is. Some suggest one thing and others another, but no conclusion can be reached. In the absence of Professor Hopkins, of Graydon College, who is an authority on anything of the kind, the rest of Graydon is entirely at sea in its efforts to account for the strange series of manifestations.

The detective had just finished the article when he was startled by hearing a voice exclaim:

"Look! That's the man!"

Looking up he saw Ernesta Frost and Gordon. The former was pointing at the detective, and Gordon was coming toward him. But as their eyes met, the professor drew back, his face livid with fear.

"No, no," he cried. "I didn't do it! It was not my fault! It was Snyder, I tell you! You shall not touch me. I—I—"

He paused, looking from Ernesta to Sullivan. Then, with the exclamation, "Come!" he caught the girl by the arm and rushed madly from the park, across the grass, to Broadway.

They jumped into a taxicab and were away before Sullivan had overcome his astonishment at the proceedings sufficiently to rise from the bench and rush after them.

A more befogged, bewildered detective never followed an escaping couple than Sullivan, as he climbed into a taxi and told the chauffeur to get there, wherever it might be, before the first one. "Never mind the speed laws," he shouted, "you simply go!"

The chauffeur sped up Fifth ave., dodging carriages, automobiles and pedestrians with a nicety that would have elicited Sullivan's boundless admiration under other circumstances.

He gained on Gordon's cab and by the time Thirty-fourth street was reached the detective had the satisfaction of seeing the collegian stand up in his vehicle and look back, fearful that he would not be able to escape.

"Sure, if the cops don't get me," replied the chauffeur.

Sullivan was held up by the traffic regulations at Thirty-fourth street, and Gordon gained considerable. But on being released at the crossing the detective's man put on more speed, and cut down the distance between pursued and pursuer at a rapid rate. When Gordon's machine reached Forty-second street it turned to the east.

The chauffeur could not answer; he was lustily engaged in turning the corner without capsizing his machine. He did it by a narrow margin, and dashed down Forty-second street to the railroad station. Fast as he had been, however, when he reached the entrance on Vanderbilt avenue and Sullivan jumped out, throwing the man a bill and telling him to keep the change, Gordon and Ernesta had vanished. The detective rushed into the station, momentarily baffled but by no means beaten. He saw Gordon just leaving the ticket window. Sullivan guessed what had occurred, and was the next man at the wicket.

"Boston! Quick!" he shouted, shoving a five dollar bill through.

"You've got to run," said the ticket seller, giving him the ticket, and Sullivan did. He was not a lightweight by any means, but he fairly flew across the tessalated floor of the waiting-room toward the station platform. As Gordon pushed Ernesta through the swinging door, Sullivan followed, dodging through the doorway on the rebound of the door. He was so near the fleeing couple, that Gordon may have heard him. At any rate, he turned, and as Sullivan came flying across the platform, the young professor's fist shot out, catching the detective full in the face. Sullivan heard Ernesta's scream of horror, he felt the impact and then went sprawling on the pavement.

Half a dozen porters rushed to his aid, but he was up before they reached him.

"I'm all right," he bellowed. "Do not touch me!"

He rushed through the gate, defying the efforts of the guard to examine his ticket, and threw himself aboard the platform of the last car, as the train pulled out. He rose to his feet, felt for his hat, and found that it was lost; put his hand to his mouth and drew it away with a grimace of pain. Then he turned the knob of the door and went inside, battered and bruised, but triumphant and burning with wrath and a craving for vengeance.

"I'll settle with him for that!" he muttered. "Yes, and I'll settle with him now!"

All the fighting blood of a long line of Irish ancestors was boiling within Sullivan as he strode through the cars, scanning the face of every passenger. Car after car he traversed, but no Gordon, no Ernesta. But he could find them. They could not hide from him! He tried another door. It did not open. A brakeman said:

Well! growled Sullivan (what he said)

Cured Eczema and Dandruff

"I am pleased to inform you that I have been cured by Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Since I was a boy I have suffered with dandruff, not only from the itching but from its disagreeable appearance in a scaly form all over my head. I had to brush it off my clothes all day long. I used every kind of preparation supposed to cure dandruff, also soaps and shampoos, but it seemed to me that, instead of improving with these remedies, the dandruff increased, even my hair began to fall out and the result was that two months ago eczema developed on my scalp.

"I suffered so from this that as a last resource I thought I would try Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. They had the most gratifying results for I had used only one box of Cuticura Ointment and a single cake of Cuticura Soap when I was cured, the eczema and dandruff were gone and my head perfectly clear.

"I can assure you that so long as I live no other soap than Cuticura will be used by me and all those near to me. I will also add that I will always use Cuticura Ointment as a dressing for the hair. I feel that you should know of my cure and if you desire you may use this as a true testimonial which comes from a sufferer of thirty years' standing. I will be happy to tell any one of my experience in order to assist those who may be suffering from the same disease." (Signed) J. ACEVEDO, General Commission Merchant, 59 Pearl St., New York.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment afford the speediest and most economical treatment for itching, burning, scaly humors of infants, children and adults. As in this case, a single set is often sufficient. Sold throughout the world. Send to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Boston, U. S. A., for 32-page Cuticura Book on treatment of skin and scalp affections.

"The engine," said the brakeman. The detective swayed, caught for support at the guard rail, and, as the brakeman led him back into the car he had just come from, he went weakly, crushed, outwitted.

CHAPTER SIXTEEN.

The Journey in the Dark.

Professor Snyder's wife was made of different material from Mrs. Hopkins and insisted always in taking intense interest in anything connected with the college or her husband's profession. It was, therefore, no simple matter for him to make a satisfactory excuse to leave home on Tuesday evening. At length he succeeded in convincing Mrs. Snyder that it would be absolutely necessary for him to meet Professors Fischer and Rice at the college in the neighbourhood of ten o'clock for the purpose of investigating some astronomical phenomena that were scheduled to manifest themselves at that hour.

Whether Mrs. Snyder believed her husband's extemporaneous story or not does not matter. Probably she did, for he had grown wonderfully experienced in mendacity during the last forty-eight hours, and whereas, a week previous, he could not have told her such a bare-faced lie without blushing, he now had no difficulty in delivering it with a direct gaze and a nonchalant air.

Rice and Fischer were at the rendezvous before him, the former cool, the latter nervous and petulant. Moreover, they had already procured a wheel-barrow—the same vehicle in use the night before—and the spade. Snyder saw something in a pile in the bottom of the barrow, and shuddered.

"Is it—have you already taken the body from the ice-house?" he asked.

"No," growled Fischer, "dose are blankets to wrap it up in. Come, take hold of der handles!"

Willy-nilly, Snyder found himself wheeling the barrow over the same old path to the ice-house. Rice stalked ahead, carrying the spade over his shoulder. Fischer walked at one side resolutely. Not a word was said until they reached the ice-house.

"Now," whispered Rice, "put it down."

Snyder dropped the handles of the wheel-barrow and followed Rice and Fischer inside the ice-house. It was dark. Rather, it would have been but for that awful light in the corner where lay the body of Prof. Hopkins. Instead of the refulgence having diminished in the twenty-four hours the body had lain there, it was apparent to their startled eyes that it had increased. It now shone through the blue print paper, the sawdust and the boards.

MARRIED TO A PURIST.

Wiggles and Wife as Overheard by the Dubbses.

Mrs. Wiggles has the very great misfortune to be married to a purist, and what she has to endure, so her neighbors say, passes all belief. For instance, here is a conversation said to have been overheard by the Dubbses, who live next door, one morning last week.

"Henry," called Mrs. Wiggles from upstairs, addressing Mr. Wiggles, who had got up early to start the furnace, "what's the thermometer this morning?"

"Same as usual, my dear," Mr. Wiggles replied, calling up through the flue. "It is a little instrument made of metal, glass and mercury designed to show degrees of heat and cold. It is a simple and inexpensive little contrivance, and no home should be without one."

"I mean what does it say?" returned Mrs. Wiggles, with an expression of countenance which, not having been seen, can only be imagined.

"It does not say anything, my love," replied Mr. Wiggles, brushing some soot out of his locks. "Up to this time nobody has thought to invent a talking thermometer, though I suppose that it would be possible by means of a phonographic attachment operated by a delicately adjusted device of some sort to get the results which you seem to believe are already attained."

"Oh, you know what I mean!" retorted Mrs. Wiggles, somewhat stridently. "Where is the thermometer, then, if you are going to be so very, very particular."

"It is just where we left it last night, dear heart," returned Wiggles; "screwed on to the left hand jamb of the front door. I fancy that if it had not been screwed on it would have disappeared long ago. Where did you think it was?"

"Has it risen or fallen?" demanded the lady.

"Not that I know of," said Wiggles. "If it had risen I think we should have seen the old screw holes in the place where it had been, and as for falling, I know it hasn't done that, because thermometers are rather fragile things, and if it had fallen at any time there would have been signs of fracture at least, even if the whole thing had not been shattered to pieces. Don't worry about it anyhow. I fastened it on the door jam myself, and with four screws it can hardly come loose—that is, not all at once."

"Henry Wiggles," roared the lady's voice, growing more than severe and having about it certain qualities of icy sharpness, "do you mean to tell me where the mercury stands or not?"

"Of course I do, lovey," replied Wiggles, lighting the fire at last. "It stands in the little glass tube that runs from the bulb at the base of the thermometer up to the top. Where did you suppose it stood—on its head?"

Here the conversation stopped.

Later in the day Mrs. Dubbs, meeting Wiggles with his head bandaged upon his way to catch the trolley, smiled sweetly.

"Ah, Mr. Wiggles," said she archly, "has Mrs. Wiggles been taking the broomstick to you that you have your head bandaged up?"

"No, madam," said Wiggles coldly. "We do not use brooms in my household. We use vacuum cleaners."

"Well, I guess they are more appropriate," said Mrs. Dubbs significantly. "It started in very warm this morning, didn't it?"

"You bet it did!" said Wiggles as he moved on. "Some cloudy too."—Harper's Weekly.

AFTER TREATMENT

Peter E. Summers relates his experience:

"I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay it to indiscretion and excesses in youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many first-class physicians, wore an electric belt for three months, but received little benefit. I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the NEW METHOD TREATMENT and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have sent them many patients and continue to do so.

XVII. — Stimulants and Drugs In the Home

By EUGENE L. FISK, M. D.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

As far back as the memory of man runneth not to the contrary alcoholic drinks have been termed "stimulants," and yet alcohol is not a stimulant, but a depressant.

Exact laboratory experiments have determined that alcohol acts as an anaesthetic upon the higher brain cells that preside over the more complex mental processes. In other words, the man who "wakes up" under the influence of alcohol is really going to sleep, so far as the more useful part of the brain is concerned, and thus the lower and simpler mental processes come more into evidence. Analyze the conversation at some convivial banquet and note how trivial and inane it appears in the clear light of day—puerile when compared with some splendid intellectual debate or discussion bringing into play the higher faculties. But these higher faculties are sometimes overworked and unduly active, denying proper exercise to the simple brain elements that control the emotions, the play instinct, the tendency to mix with one's kind in relaxing good fellowship.

Something might be said for alcohol as an agent for suppressing that part of the brain which is overworked in the daily struggle for existence and thereby affording opportunity for the nervous balance to be restored by exercise of the simpler faculties.

That some influence is necessary to preserve proper nervous and mental poise is evidenced by the example of philosophers and scientists who have become mentally "lopsided," as it were, by overuse of one portion of the brain or disuse of the other portion. Darwin's loss of the aesthetic faculty, the power of appreciation of disabled poetry is a familiar and trashiest weird taste to buy the call of his simthin to sentiments, neglected and suppressed by the constant exercise of the higher reasoning powers. But is it necessary to employ a poisonous drug for such purpose? It would appear not.

Is Alcohol a Food?

Atwater showed that alcohol in small quantities was utilised by the body as a food. It has long been known that alcohol is burned in the body with the production of energy, but poisonous mushrooms also furnish nourishment. Likewise, as Atwater states, human flesh is digestible and nourishing, but that is no reason for using it as a food.

Experience of Life Insurance.

Life insurance companies are quite a trend in this direction. They enjoy heavy ing no chances with alcohol, and they do not want to insure people who "feed" on it. This is a business matter with a life insurance company, and the moral phase is not considered, which means that its action is based upon the facts developed by experience.

The most comprehensive experience that has been published is that of the United Kingdom Temperance and General Provident Institution. In that company the total abstainers were separated from the temperate drinkers in the mortality experience, with the result that a difference of 32 per cent was shown in favor of the abstainers.

Alcohol is no longer used in medicine as a direct heart stimulant. It is of some value as a rapidly available temporary food in the crises of severe illness, fever, etc., when it supplies energy to carry on the body work, but even here it must be used with caution because of its toxic effect on the heart muscle and the fact that it lowers the resistance of the body to the poisons of disease.

Excluding the moral phase of this question, therefore, medical judgment, considering solely the scientific evidence available, must pronounce against the daily use of alcohol.

Whether the occasional use of alcohol as a relaxing beverage or anaesthetic for overactive brain centers is permissible each man must decide for himself. It is right, however, that the grave risks of even occasional indulgence should be known and remembered. Certainly no man of feeble will power or neurotic family history can afford to take the chances.

Narcotics.

Opium, cocaine, chloral, bromides, all are employed either to relieve bodily pain or stifle the overinsistent and worrying brain. But, as in the case of alcohol, the relief brought by these drugs is usually paid for at a high rate of interest. In fact, the troubles which are temporarily forced into the background by such indulgence seem to grow in direct proportion to the degree of indulgence and simply await the reckoning day, when the long evaded life burden must be taken up with its added weight or life's journey forever terminated.

These remarks do not apply, of course, to the intelligent and proper administration of such remedies by a physician. It is part of a physician's duty to relieve pain, both mental and physical, but it too often happens that a narcotic properly administered in one instance is carelessly again taken without medical advice, and the foundation of a lifelong habit is laid.

Headache Remedies.

A great deal of harm is done by the self administration of headache remedies, mostly of the coal tar class. These remedies have their place, but should be used under a physician's guidance. Many headaches can be relieved by simple remedies. Bathing the forehead with a little bay rum or rubbing with a menthol pencil, simple rest or a dose of salts will often prove sufficient. The constant use of headache remedies is more than likely to prove irritating to the kidneys, aside from the depressing action on the heart. Aromatic ammonia, strychnine or some other heart stimulant should always be within the reach of those who are so ill advised as to use headache powders more or less regularly.

The causes of headaches are so numerous as to cover almost the entire range of diseased conditions. So called "biliousness" is one of the common causes. This is nothing other than poisoning from the retained products of indigestion. Bile may have little or nothing to do with it, but calomel or some other brisk evacuant will clear the system of the poison and relieve the symptoms.

Eye strain is also a very frequent cause of headache. The proper glasses to relieve lowing drugs to rated glasses will is evident. If eye strain. But in ing a massage eye strain is due to overuse by improper use of the eyes. Such cases are readily relieved by rest and attention to proper illumination or position while reading.

Abuse of Cathartics.

As a rule, cathartics should only be used as emergency remedies in acute conditions, as colds, biliousness, indigestion, etc. A tendency to costiveness can usually be overcome by natural remedies. Drugging the bowels is very much like drugging the nervous system—the drug becomes master, but the time comes when the slave will not obey the master, and a condition of semi-paralysis of the bowel function exists.

In treating constipation it should be remembered that the intestine is a long muscular tube. This muscle is what is known as an "involuntary" muscle, not under the control of the will, but acting reflexly. Certain centers in the spinal cord preside over the bowel function and respond to certain stimuli. One of these stimuli is the distention of the intestine with a certain volume of waste tendency to rhythmical action in the spinal center. In other words, spinal centers form habits, just the same as brain centers, and if accustomed to act at a particular time each day will contrive to do so if permitted.

The value of a fairly general mixed diet is evident when the structure and function of the bowel are considered. Concentrated, predigested food would soon abolish the bowel function. Some people eat too little waste matter. Their food is mostly meat and potatoes. A generous allowance of fruit and green vegetables, especially spinach, and the free use of water between meals will act like magic in such cases. The use of drugs is irrational and positively harmful.

The use of tea, coffee and tobacco in moderation cannot be regarded as harmful, but even the term "moderation" is here used in a positive sense. No doubt much dyspepsia and nervous derangement are due to the abuse of these fragrant and cheering substances. What constitutes abuse can only be determined by experiment in each individual case. For the average man one cup of coffee at breakfast and a demitasse in the evening should be sufficient. Two cups of coffee or tea contain a pretty generous dose of the drug caffeine and amount to drugging the nervous system.

Tobacco should also be used according to personal susceptibility. A cigar after each meal will not, as a rule, injure the average man, although some are better off without tobacco or with an allowance of one cigar after dinner. Constant smoking or chewing is positively injurious, no matter how robust or concealed the man may be who indulges in it.

Summary of efficiency.

Alcohol is not even if used in moderation a stimulant. It impairs mental efficiency, may mask pain and trouble, but does not remove the cause. They destroy the will power more effectively than alcohol, but do not cause the same tissue degeneration.

Alcohol and narcotics should not be used in the home, except on a physician's orders.

The Fire Bag.

Every whaler and sealer that sailed the seas in the days of wooden ships carried a fire bag. This was a tarpaulin bag about a foot long and six inches wide lined with waterproof material, with interlinings of oilcloth and thick flannel. Into this was placed the flint and tinder box for kindling fire, and the bag was then securely fastened with double flaps and tied to keep its contents dry. It was the special duty of the second mate to look after the fire bag and in case of shipwreck to attack it at once to his person by means of stout straps provided for the purpose. Thus if officers and crew were cast away on some deserted shore in the desolate arctic circle the means of obtaining a fire to warm themselves by and to heat food and drink would not be wanting as long as the precious fire bag was safe.

The steam whalers and sealers of the present day still carry a fire bag stowed in the lifeboat with the bread and water, but now it is of rubber and contains half a dozen tin boxes of matches.—New York Press.

The Open Fire.

The open fire is a primitive, elemental thing. It cheers with more than mere heat; it is a bit of the red heart of nature laid bare; it is a dragon of the prince docile and friendly there in the corner. What pictures, what activity, how social, how it keeps up the talk! You are not permitted to forget it for a moment. How it responds when you nudge it! How it rejoices when you feed it! Why, an open fire in your room is a whole literature. It supplements your library as nothing else in the room does or can.—John Burroughs in Country Life in America.

XVII. — Stimulants and Drugs In the Home

By EUGENE L. FISK, M. D.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

As far back as the memory of man runneth not to the contrary alcoholic drinks have been termed "stimulants," and yet alcohol is not a stimulant, but a depressant.

Exact laboratory experiments have determined that alcohol acts as an anaesthetic upon the higher brain cells that preside over the more complex mental processes. In other words, the man who "wakes up" under the influence of alcohol is really going to sleep, so far as the more useful part of the brain is concerned, and thus the lower and simpler mental processes come more into evidence. Analyze the conversation at some convivial banquet and note how trivial and inane it appears in the clear light of day—puerile when compared with some splendid intellectual debate or discussion bringing into play the higher faculties. But these higher faculties are sometimes overworked and unduly active, denying proper exercise to the simple brain elements that control the emotions, the play instinct, the tendency to mix with one's kind in relaxing good fellowship.

Something might be said for alcohol as an agent for suppressing that part of the brain which is overworked in the daily struggle for existence and thereby affording opportunity for the nervous balance to be restored by exercise of the simpler faculties.

That some influence is necessary to preserve proper nervous and mental poise is evidenced by the example of philosophers and scientists who have become mentally "lopsided," as it were, by overuse of one portion of the brain or disuse of the other portion. Darwin's loss of the aesthetic faculties and the power of appreciation of music and poetry is a familiar instance. His weird taste in literature, which enabled him to enjoy the lightest and trashiest novels, was merely the call of his simpler brain elements, neglected and suppressed by the constant exercise of the higher reasoning powers. But is it necessary to employ a poisonous drug for such purpose? It would appear not.

Is Alcohol a Food?

Atwater showed that alcohol in small quantities was utilized by the body as a food. It has long been known that alcohol is burned in the body with the production of energy, but poisonous mushrooms also furnish nourishment. Likewise, as Atwater states, human flesh is digestible and nourishing, but that is no reason for using it as a food.

Experience of Life Insurance.

Life insurance companies are quite particular to exclude not only heavy drinkers but moderate drinkers, showing a trend in this direction. They are taking no chances with alcohol, and they do not want to insure people who "feed" on it. This is a business matter with a life insurance company, and the moral phase is not considered, which means that its action is based upon the facts developed by experience.

The most comprehensive experience that has been published is that of the United Kingdom Temperance and General Provident institution. In that company the total abstainers were separated from the temperate drinkers in the mortality experience, with the result that a difference of 32 per cent was shown in favor of the abstainers.

Alcohol is no longer used in medicine as a direct heart stimulant. It is of some value as a rapidly available temporary food in the crises of severe illness, fever, etc., when it supplies energy to carry on the body work, but even here it must be used with caution because of its toxic effect on the heart muscle and the fact that it lowers the resistance of the body to the poisons of disease.

Excluding the moral phase of this question, therefore, medical judgment, considering solely the scientific evidence available, must pronounce against the daily use of alcohol.

Whether the occasional use of alcohol as a relaxing beverage or anaesthetic for overactive brain centers is permissible each man must decide for himself. It is right, however, that the grave risks of even occasional indulgence should be known and remembered. Certainly no man of feeble will power or neurotic family history can afford to take the chances.

Narcotics.

Opium, cocaine, chloral, bromides, all are employed either to relieve bodily pain or stifle the overinsistent and worrying brain. But, as in the case of alcohol, the relief brought by these drugs is usually paid for at a high rate of interest. In fact, the troubles which are temporarily forced into the background by such indulgence seem to grow in direct proportion to the degree of indulgence and simply await the reckoning day, when the long evaded life burden must be taken up with its added weight or life's journey forever terminated.

These remarks do not apply, of course, to the intelligent and proper administration of such remedies by a physician. It is part of a physician's duty to relieve pain, both mental and physical, but it too often happens that a narcotic properly administered in one instance is carelessly again taken without medical advice, and the foundation of a lifelong habit is laid.

Headache Remedies.

A great deal of harm is done by the self administration of headache remedies, mostly of the coal tar class. These remedies have their place, but should be used under a physician's guidance. Many headaches can be relieved by simple remedies. Bathing the forehead with a little bay rum or rubbing with a menthol pencil, simple rest or a dose of salts will often prove sufficient. The constant use of headache remedies is more than likely to prove irritating to the kidneys, aside from the depressing action on the heart. Aromatic ammonia, strychnine or some other heart stimulant should always be within the reach of those who are so ill advised as to use headache powders more or less regularly.

The causes of headaches are so numerous as to cover almost the entire range of diseased conditions. So called "biliousness" is one of the common causes. This is nothing other than poisoning from the retained products of indigestion. Bile may have little or nothing to do with it, but calomel or some other brisk evacuant will clear the system of the poison and relieve the symptoms.

Eye strain is also a very frequent cause of headache. The fact that following drugs to relieve trouble is evident. It is impossible to knock-ing a man properly fitted glasses will his eyes relieve eye strain. But in some cases eye strain is due to overuse or improper use of the eyes. Such cases are readily relieved by rest and attention to proper illumination or position while reading.

Abuse of Cathartics.

As a rule, cathartics should only be used as emergency remedies in acute conditions, as colds, biliousness, indigestion, etc. A tendency to costiveness can usually be overcome by natural remedies. Drugging the bowels is very much like drugging the nervous system—the drug becomes master, but the time comes when the slave will not obey the master, and a condition of semi-paralysis of the bowel function exists.

In treating constipation it should be remembered that the intestine is a long muscular tube. This muscle is what is known as an "involuntary" muscle, not under the control of the will, but acting reflexly. Certain centers in the spinal cord preside over the bowel function and respond to certain stimuli. One of these stimuli is the presence of a certain volume of waste matter in the intestine, another is the tendency to rhythmical action of the spinal center. In other words, spinal centers form habits, just the same as brain centers, and if accustomed to act at a particular time each day will contrive to do so if permitted.

The value of a fairly general mixed diet is evident when the structure and function of the bowel are considered. Concentrated, predigested food would soon abolish the bowel function. Some people eat too little waste matter. Their food is mostly meat and potatoes. A generous allowance of fruit and green vegetables, especially spinach, and the free use of water between meals will act like magic in such cases. The use of drugs is irrational and positively harmful.

The use of tea, coffee and tobacco in moderation cannot be regarded as harmful, but even the term "moderation" is here used in a positive sense. No doubt much dyspepsia and nervous derangement are due to the abuse of these fragrant and cheering substances. What constitutes abuse can only be determined by experiment in each individual case. For the average man one cup of coffee at breakfast and a demitasse in the evening should be sufficient. Two cups of coffee or tea contain a pretty generous dose of the drug caffeine and amount to drugging the nervous system.

Tobacco should also be used according to personal susceptibility. A cigar after each meal will not, as a rule, injure the average man, although some are better off without tobacco or with an allowance of one cigar after dinner. Constant smoking or chewing is positively injurious, no matter how robust or concealed the man may be who indulges in it.

Summary.

Alcohol is not a stimulant but a poison; not a stimulant but an anaesthetic. It impairs mental and muscular efficiency. Bile may even if used in so-called moderation.

Narcotics mask pain and trouble, but do not remove the cause. They destroy the will power more effectively than alcohol, but do not cause the same tissue degeneration.

Alcohol and narcotics should not be used in the home, except on a physician's orders.

The Fire Bag.

Every whaler and sealer that sailed the seas in the days of wooden ships carried a fire bag. This was a tarpaulin bag about a foot long and six inches wide lined with waterproof material, with interlinings of oilcloth and thick flannel. Into this was placed the flint and tinder box for kindling fire, and the bag was then securely fastened with double flaps and tied to keep its contents dry. It was the special duty of the second mate to look after the fire bag and in case of shipwreck to attack it at once to his person by means of stout straps provided for the purpose. Thus if officers and crew were cast away on some deserted shore in the desolate arctic circle the means of obtaining a fire to warm themselves by and to heat food and drink would not be wanting as long as the precious fire bag was safe.

The steam whalers and sealers of the present day still carry a fire bag stowed in the lifeboat with the bread and water, but now it is of rubber and contains half a dozen tin boxes of matches. —New York Press

The Open Fire.

The open fire is a primitive, elemental thing. It cheers with more than mere heat; it is a bit of the red heart of nature laid bare; it is a dragon of the prince docile and friendly there in the corner. What pictures, what activity, how social, how it keeps up the talk! You are not permitted to forget it for a moment. How it responds when you nudge it! How it rejoices when you feed it! Why, an open fire in your room is a whole literature. It supplements your library as nothing else in the room does or can.—John Burroughs in Country Life in America.

Meats and Vegetables Are Prepared on This Adjustable Table

THOSE who are inclined to discuss the history of nations, wars and rumors of wars at the dinner table, illustrating the position of General Forget by the placement of a salt cellar and the gallant charge of Colonel Memoriam by a broken, zigzag line drawn upon the white cloth up to a point where it approaches Fort Vinegar Cruet, will doubtless be surprised to learn that soldiers of the regular army will soon be doing the same thing in camp or on the march almost as luxuriously as if they were being entertained at the Waldorf-Astoria.

The world has progressed since the Revolutionary period when General Marion, of the Continental army, was the host of General Burgoyne, of the British forces, at a meal of baked potatoes, pulled out of the fire with the prong of a wooden stick. And now we have the newly invented cook wagon, devised by Captain Frederick W. Stopford, commissary of the Presidio post, at San Francisco, which will provide quickly and bounteously for one of the greatest needs of modern military campaigns—a hot meal for soldiers ordered to the front.

United States army officers and the heads of the War Department are elated at the successful field tests of this ingenious cook wagon de luxe and believe that it will prove more valuable to the service than any other method of feeding an army and keeping it in fighting condition. Poor rations have always been the cause of most of the desertions from an army. To any soldier the savory smell of hot soup and roast beef is an antidote for the fear of gunpowder.

The facilities of the new rolling kitchen are calculated to revolutionize mess cooking for troops and to make it an indispensable feature for all the armies in the world.

In recent military manoeuvres the economy and efficiency of the field dining car were demonstrated by the providing of a complete menu at the moment a large marching force was halted.

The new rolling kitchen is not the result of some cook stove manufacturer's bright idea and proposal to the government, but is all the more creditable to the War Department for the reason that it was evolved by army officers especially assigned to the solution of the problem how best to promote the physical endurance of troops on the march.

Only a year and a half ago the War Department appointed a special board, consisting of Captain F. J. Koester, Fifth cavalry; Captain William Elliott, chief of commissary, Department of California, and Captain Frederick W. Stopford, commissary at the Presidio, to plan and equip a perambulating kitchen which would meet with the strictest field tests and satisfy all the demands of an active campaign.

The practical work of devising the cook wagon fell upon Captain Stopford, who has given up almost his entire time to the study of new equipment and experiments in every form of culinary art.

Conditions of the army commissary up to the present had not kept pace with the improvements in other departments. There seemed to be little suggestion for improvement over the old wagon train of supplies and the foraging of soldiers who did their own cooking. The only idea that Captain Stopford had to work upon was the favorable report of military observers from foreign nations on the huge portable soup kitchens which followed the Russian army during the Japanese Russian war. These kitchens were nothing more than large cauldrons mounted on wheels and provided with a fire box underneath, so that the moment the army was halted hot soup could be served to the famished soldiers without the necessity of building innumerable fires and the loss of time while waiting for the pot to boil.

Soup Wagons in Manchuria.

Military observers noted that whenever the Japanese captured any of these soup wagons they put them into commission for their own use. Representatives of the United States army on duty in Manchuria were impressed with the innovation. They were of the opinion, however, that an American soldier would hardly be satisfied to subsist on soup alone, and while they realized in the rolling kettle a novel idea in warfare they reported it as insufficient for our needs.

During the Spanish-American War every soldier in the United States Army ordered to the front was provided with a meat can, knife, fork and spoon. The meat can was oval in shape and of two pieces, which unhinged at one end, thus providing a frying pan and a plate, with a hook to hold the pan over the fire. There was seldom any cooking done in the middle of the day, for the reason that marching after a heavy meal does not promote the health of an army. The usual lunch consisted of hard tack and cold "salt horse," or bacon. A can of corned beef weighing two pounds constituted rations for four men and was carried by one of that number. This also was eaten cold at the noonday meal.

Wherever the army halted to encamp for the night the men pitched their tents and lined up in the "company street" with a meat can in one hand and a tin cup in the other to receive their rations from the commissary wagons. A portion of raw meat was placed in the frying pan, a hunk of bread slapped on top of it, into the cup was doled an allowance of ground coffee. The work of building the fires and bringing the water was often a tedious process. Frequently the wood was soaked with rain, which delayed the cooking of the meal until the troops, worn and hungry, were certain to be more or less irritable.

Come and get your porky,
Come and get your beans,
Come and get your coffee,
Meanest ever seen.

But with the introduction of the perambulating kitchen it is likely the soldiers will try to find a verse that is more ornate and befitting an elaborate bill of fare.

In addition to the aid given in various researches by the other members of the board Captain Stopford has been in constant consultation with Commissary Sergeant Patrick Dunn, who is an expert on fireless cookers. In its complete and accepted construction and equipment the army cook wagon represents an advanced development of an idea in which the Russian soup kitchen was used as a working model. It was not evolved in its perfected shape until a number of devices were tried out and rejected as being impracticable for all the needs of an army in time of war.

The transportation of supplies has always been considered one of the most serious problems of warfare. To cut off an enemy's supplies is second only in tactical importance to his surrender, and generally means about the same thing. Now, under ordinary circumstances a battalion has five wagons for transportation—one for each company and one for headquarters—and it was figured that the addition of one cook wagon to each battalion, or twenty-seven cook wagons to an army of nine regiments, would mean nearly half a mile more of road space, the wagons travelling at the usual distance of thirty yards apart. Here was a serious situation to be met.

Captain Stopford solved the difficulty by determining that if all the rations of a battalion were packed in one wagon and there were no pots, pans and dishes to dispose of, all the other luggage might be put in three additional wagons.

The new cook wagon, therefore, does not add to the paraphernalia of the army, but does greatly increase the efficiency and the wellbeing of the marching forces.

There are approximately 450 men in the four companies that compose a battalion, but the dimensions of the cook wagon are found to be ample for feeding that number within an hour. No especial form of wagon was devised. It is simply an ordinary army escort wagon, forty-two inches wide by nine feet six inches long, the side boards of which have been removed.

Monarchs of All They Survey.

Of course it is not intended that the soldiers climb into the wagon, sit down on a stool at a counter and call for what they want. There's a vast difference between an army kitchen on wheels and that variety known as the "owl wagon," which caters to night workers and belated roysterers in the city. Only the cooks and carvers are allowed in the rolling kitchen. Soldiers must remain on the ground and the food is passed out to them—hot meat, roasted or boiled vegetables, bread, coffee and a few extras.

At the front of the travelling caravan is placed the range, which is forty-two inches wide, the full width of the wagon, and about four feet long, including the main boiler, which goes under the driver's seat. On the top of the range may be placed four aluminum boilers, setting close together and occupying the entire surface. Each of these boilers holds eighteen gallons, while the main boiler, used only for water, holds one hundred gallons. The cooking utensils also include oven pans, each of which will hold forty pounds of meat or bread and may also be used on top of the stove as frying pans.

On each side of the wagon is a fireless cooking chest, which can be used also as a table if desired, and at the end of the wagon are boards which are pulled out and used as extension tables from which to serve the rations. Each board is provided with a stout iron leg at one end, the other end supported by the wagon.

By the installment of the kitchen wagon de luxe as part of the equipment of the United States Army there is introduced into history an absolutely new character—the professional army chef. Whether to class him as a non-combatant or not is a matter that must be settled by international law. In times of peace the most domestic of cooks are noted for being of a scrappy disposition, and it remains to be seen whether the army cook will go forth to lick the enemy and his own commanding officer besides.

One thing is certain, if soldiers of an opposing army succeed in capturing a first class American cook they are not likely to exchange him for any officer of the line under the rank of an adjutant general.

What an enlightening page of history it would be to read something like the following from the account of a decisive battle:—

"Just as General Ballygarde, of the Army of California, was about to surrender his sword to the commander in chief of the opposing forces a strange thing happened. Alphonse Chartier, chef of the third battalion, Eighth infantry, at the head of twenty-six lieutenant chefs and three times that number of scullions, broke through the lines and, armed only with skillets, put an entire regiment of the enemy to flight. General Ballygarde was so thrilled by the sudden change in the tide of battle that he ordered the regulars to charge once more. After five minutes of furious fighting on the left flank of the enemy another great American victory was added to the brilliant achievement of the campaign."

All very fine, but it is surmised that the chef of the kitchen wagon will have all he can do to attend to his pots and pans.

The cooking must go on from dawn to dark when the troops are on the march. As soon as breakfast has been served and before the cook wagons are started in the morning, the vegetables are put in the boilers to be prepared for a light noonday meal. When this provender is half cooked it is removed from the range and put into the fireless cookers, which draw their heat supply from an electric battery.

The rest of the raw food is then placed in four other boilers and cooked entirely on the fire. The same plan is pursued for the roasting of meats and the baking of beans, the pans being put into the top compartments of the fireless chests, while the automatic cookers are finishing up the preparation of soups and vegetables.

Before many months it is expected the entire army will be supplied with kitchen wagons of standard type ready for the order to march at an hour's notice.

HOW FAR AWAY ARE THE STARS?

OF the hundred million or more stars which are visible with astronomical instruments the distances from the earth of only a very few have been measured with even an approximation to accuracy. Most of the stars appear to be so far away that the change in their apparent place caused by viewing them from opposite sides of the earth's orbit—and that orbit is about one hundred and eighty-six million miles across—is so slight that it escapes certain detection.

Only a few stars have thus far yielded definite results in the attempt to measure their distances, and even those results are too often exceedingly conflicting and uncertain. One of the nearest stars discovered is one of the first magnitude, not visible from the United States or Europe. It is the star called Alpha in the constellation of the Centaur in the southern hemisphere of the heavens. The distance of this star appears to be something like twenty trillions of miles, or about two hundred and fifteen thousand times as great as the distance of the sun from the earth.

Another of the "near" stars, if the term may be used, is a little sixth magnitude twinkler, barely visible to the naked eye, in the constellation of Cygnus, popularly called the Northern Cross. The distance of this star, which is known to astronomers as 61 Cygni, is variously estimated at from forty to sixty trillion miles, or two or three times that of the bright star in the Centaur.

It follows from the above that the brightness of the stars is no measure of their comparative distance. A very bright star may be much more distant than a very faint one, the difference in brilliance being due to the greater magnitude of the more distant star. Sirius, the dog star, for instance, which scintillates so splendidly in the winter sky, is more distant, it is thought, than the little star 61 Cygni, the latter being in fact a very much smaller sun than ours, while Sirius is a far larger one.

It thus appears that while the efforts to measure the distances of the stars have not, on the whole, been very successful, they have nevertheless resulted in giving us a wonderful insight into the arrangement of the universe of suns in the midst of which we dwell. They have proved that large stars and small stars are scattered through space at various distances from one another and from us; that the dimensions of the blazing bodies which we call stars or suns vary to an enormous extent, and that our own sun, glorious and overpowering as it may seem to us, really belongs to a quite inferior rank.

Our knowledge of the stars is, however, constantly being extended. Spectroscopic investigation in the case of binary stars, as those are called which circle in pairs around their common centre of gravity, is helping a great deal in this direction.

For instance, one authority has calculated, from the results of such investigation, the mean distance of ninety-five stars situated in the northern hemisphere of the heavens, and he finds it equal to the distance which light would travel in about one hundred and fifty years. That distance is not less than eight hundred and seventy trillion miles, or more than forty-three times as great as the distance of the "near" star Alpha Centauri.

Yet, enormous as such a distance is, it is nearly certain that the average distance of all the stars composing the visible universe is still greater. And here and there the starry heavens, even in their most populous regions, present black and apparently empty spaces through which we seem to look out from the bounds of the visible universe into fathomless depths beyond.

THOMAS EDISON WAS PERSEVERING

Overcoming Difficulties in His Youth, He Was Enabled to Rise to Fame

For three months Thomas Edison, the famous inventor, had attended the public school at Port Huron, Michigan, where his parents lived; and at the end of that time his teacher described him as "an addle pated boy." And Edison himself has confessed that he was always at the foot of the class, and had come almost to regard himself as a dunce, whilst his father entertained anxieties as to his stupidity.

Mrs. Edison, however, had faith in the intellect of her boy. She insisted on taking him away from the school and teaching him herself, with the result that before he had reached the age of twelve he had read, with his mother's help, such works as Gibbon's "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire," Burton's "Anatomy of Melancholy," and the "Dictionary of Sciences."

Experiments in the Cellar

But before he reached this age, according to Frank Lewis Dyer and Thomas Comerford Martin, he had begun experiments in chemistry. And much mysterious work did he do in the cellar of the house; but he found himself handicapped by want of pocket-money. He therefore became a newsboy, overcoming the reluctance of his parents, particularly that of his mother, by pointing out that he could, by this means, earn all he wanted for his experiments and get fresh reading in the shape of papers and magazines free of charge.

The Grand Trunk Railway had been extended from Toronto to Port Huron, and he was successful in getting permission to go on the local train as a newsboy.

"After being on the train for several months," to quote Edison's own words, "I started two stores in Port Huron—one for periodicals and the other for vegetables, butter, and berries in the season. These were attended by two boys who shared in the profits. The periodical store I soon closed, as the boy in charge could not be trusted. The vegetable shop I kept up for nearly a year. After the railroad had been opened a short time they put on an express, which left Detroit in the morning and returned in the evening. I received permission to put a newsboy on this train." It was about this time that the Civil War broke out, and as the war progressed Edison found that the daily newspaper sales grew so rapidly that he could give up the vegetable store.

A New Use for Smoking-Cars

In those days no use was made of the smoking compartment, as there was no ventilation, and it was turned over to young Edison, who not only kept papers there and his stock of goods as a "candy butcher," but soon had it equipped with an extraordinary variety of apparatus. There was plenty of leisure on the two daily runs, even for an industrious boy, and thus he found time to transfer his laboratory from the cellar and reestablish it on the train. Surely the country could have presented at that moment no more striking example of the passionate pursuit of knowledge under difficulties than this newsboy, barely fourteen years of age, with his jars and test tubes installed on a railway baggage car.

But alas! one day, while conducting his experiments in the smoking-car, young Edison nearly set the train on fire, with the result that he was bundled off at the next station with his entire outfit—laboratory, newspapers, and everything else—and left on the platform tearful and indignant. It was through this incident that Edison acquired the deafness that he has suffered from all through his life, a negro boy on the car from the scorched and angry conductor of the train being the direct cause of the infirmity.

Hard times followed his ejectment from the rolling stock of the Grand Trunk Railroad, and he was down to his last cents when he succeeded, in 1869, in getting a job with a telegraph company in New York. And such good use did he make of his opportunity that he was able to remedy a big breakdown in the system when he had only been in the situation a short time, the result being that he was put in charge of the whole telegraph plant at a salary of $200 a month.

This enabled him to give more scope to his inventive faculties, and, after a little while, the manager of the telegraph company called him into his office one day and said, "Now, young man, I want to close up the matter of your inventions. How much do you think you should receive?" "I had made up my mind," said Edison, "that, taking into consideration the time and killing pace I was working at, I should be entitled to $5,000, but could get along with $2,000. When the psychological moment arrived I hadn't the nerve to name such a large sum, so I said to the manager, 'Well, suppose you make me an offer.' Then he said, 'How would $40,000 strike you?'" Thus, in an inconceivably brief time Edison passed from poverty to independence, made a deep impression as to his originality and ability on important people, and brought out valuable inventions. He then set up in business on his own account, and soon was employing fifty men.

How he ultimately developed the telephone, the phonograph, the incandescent light, and a hundred and one other inventions, has often been told, and the extent of his achievements may be gathered from the fact that a list of Mr. Edison's patents alone occupies twenty pages of his latest biography.

THE PREBENDARY'S TROMBONE

The founder of the Church Army, Prebendary Carlile, who was recently received by King George, tells an amusing story about one of the open-air brass-band processions which paraded the city, headed by Mr. Carlile with a trombone. Robed in his surplice, the Prebendary left the procession—which was a New Year's Eve parade—from time to time and entered the numerous public-houses passed on the road. In one public-house a man seized the Prebendary's trombone and told him he should have it back if he would play a tune. On his reply that he was too tired, a tall, clean-shaven man volunteered to play instead. Calling out, "Hats off, gentlemen!" he played "God Save the King." The musician then took Mr. Carlile's cap and passed it round, collecting 5s. in a very few moments. The cap, collection, and trombone were then returned to Mr. Carlile, who departed well satisfied to have raised something for the Church Army relief work in this unconventional way.

TOBACCO AND LITERARY MEN

Some Answers Obtained by a Theatrical Journal

A French theatrical journal has been questioning playwrights and other authors about smoking. Maurice Donnay replied that formerly he smoked half-a-dozen cigarettes a day; then he gave it up, and since that time he can work whenever and as much as he pleases. Alfred Capus said he would be glad if he could give up smoking, for it gave him no pleasure, and he believed that in the long run tobacco was an undesirable collaborator. "At first we smoke to be able to work, and finally we work only to be able to smoke." Georges Fedyeau replied: "I used to smoke a great deal, but have given it up, because I found it impaired my memory." The Rosny brothers, Paul Marqueritte, and the composer Massenet answered briefly: "We do not smoke." Louis Ganne used the weed till he was twenty-five, when he quit, to please a woman. "Too much!" wrote Francis de Croisset, in answer to the question whether he smoked; and to the second question, whether it helped or harmed him, he replied: "I don't wish to know." Henri Bernstein wrote: "Tobacco stimulates me, but I do not know whether it benefits me." Alexandre Bisson smokes only once in two weeks, because he does not want his enjoyment to degenerate into a necessity. Jules Claretie admitted that he smokes cigarettes, but he does not know why—"certainly not for pleasure."

ON SPARTAN LINES

Was Crown Prince of Germany Brought Up—Hours of Study

The Crown Prince of Germany has been brought up on Spartan lines. As is well known, the Kaiser is a strict disciplinarian, and till his fourteenth year the Crown Prince rose at 4 a.m. winter and summer, and was in bed at 8 p.m. He was kept hard at work by private tutors, and after leaving home went through a course at a military college, afterwards matriculating at the University of Bonn. Even when, a few years ago, he served a sort of diplomatic apprenticeship at the Ministry of the Interior he had to work as a junior clerk, and kept to the usual hours every day for a whole year. Even after these hours he was not free, for he had to take home a case of documents to study every evening, and was kept at work late into the night.

TECK A GOOD TREKKER

Prince Alexander is a Most Enthusiastic Soldier

Prince Alexander of Teck, who has accepted the chairmanship of the Middlesex Hospital, and will in that capacity continue the good work which his brother, the late Prince Francis of Teck, initiated, is a keen soldier. He passed from Eton and Sandhurst into the 7th Hussars, and saw active service—first in the Matabele War of 1896, and subsequently, in company with his two brothers, in the last Boer War, which brought him mention in despatches and a D.S.O. Here is a pithy pen-picture of the Prince, drawn by one who met him casually during the war. "Tall, strongly built, everlastingly youthful, and keen. I once travelled half a day with him, not knowing who he was, and, as is usual when campaigners meet, we fought this war from Talana to Paardeberg and Pieter's Hill. Then I learned how earnest a soldier the Prince is, and how thoroughly wedded to his profession. He is a good trekker, and a good camp man, too."

CHOOSING A CAR

Scotchman Reads Advertisements of "Best and Goes Farthest"

The late Sir Clifton Robinson, the "Tramway King," who, commencing his career as a conductor at the age of twelve, achieved the distinction of organizing street railways all over the world, had a budget of good stories to tell. One of the most amusing was that of two countrymen on a visit to Edinburgh some years ago, who noticed street cars for the first time. They wished to proceed in a certain direction, but as there seemed so many cars going the same way they were in doubt as to which to take. All dubiousness, however, soon vanished, for Geordie, noticing a car bearing a cocoa advertisement in huge letters, turned to his friend and said, "Here, Jimmie, we'll take' this ane; it's 'Best and goes farthest.'"

Your Danger From Kidney Troubles

BEGINS WHEN YOUR BACK ACHES.

Backache is the first and the sure sign of kidney disease.

When the back aches or becomes weak it is a warning that the kidneys are affected in some way.

Next to the heart, the kidneys are, perhaps the most important organs in the body. It is no wonder then that if the kidneys are affected the whole system must be.

On the first sign of backache Doan's Kidney Pills should be taken. They go right to the seat of the trouble, heal the delicate membranes of the kidneys and make their action regular and natural.

Mr. E. J. Saulnier, Lake Annis, N.S. writes:—"I take a great deal of pleasure in telling you the benefit I have received from the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. I was troubled with my kidneys for several years; my back was weak, I had terrible headaches, and was so restless I could not sleep at night. I commenced using Doan's Kidney Pills and in a very short time I was cured and felt again."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box or 3 for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

JACK and JILL in FAIRYLAND

1—Well, when Jack and Jill were going along one morning, what should they see but a little pig—a very little one. Then Jack clapped his hands. "Here's the little pig that went to market. Let's take a ride," said he. Of course Jill said "Sure"—even though her mother didn't like it. Then they both jumped on.

2—But what do you think? This time they'd made a mistake. It wasn't the little pig that went to market at all.

It was Dickory Dickory Dare,
The pig that flew up in the air.

And the worst of it was that it started to fly up too, with Jack and Jill hanging to its back—both scared to death.

And up they went to the Milky Way,
Where the cows get their milk, I've heard them say.

3—But just about that time the pig commenced to object. "See here," said he. "I'm not a traction service or even a cub-horse." Then he gave a wriggle and a twist and——

Off went Jill and Jacky, too,
Like a pair of shooting comets, with some shooting work to do.

4—And it was awful. There they were about a million miles up in the sky. Then—what luck!—old Mother Goose's umbrella loomed up, hanging on a star. The old lady must have forgotten it the last time she took a ride. Well, quick as a flash Jack grabbed it and——

5—Down they sailed as comfy as a pair of kiddies can,
The cutest couple of aeronaut tots since the aeronaut game began.
And, really, it looked as if their troubles were over. They'd even reached the ground, when——

6—Who should stand waiting for 'em but the farmer who owned the pig that had run away with Jack and Jill.

And Jack and Jill were whacked again (as a joke 'twas a perfect gem)
For running away with a piggy, you see, which had flown away with them.
Say! It's certainly fierce when you can't play a trick

Interesting Hague Trial.

The Hague, Feb. 15.—The permanent court of arbitration assembled yesterday to determine the case of the Indian law student, Savarkar, in dispute between Great Britain and France. After preliminaries of opening, the session was adjourned until Thursday, when arguments will be made.

Savarkar, an Indian subject of Great Britain, was arrested on his arrival in London, March 13, 1910, charged with sedition, and ordered extradited to India for trial. When the vessel upon which he was being taken home stopped in Marseilles harbor, Savarkar crawled through a porthole and swam ashore. He was captured in Marseilles by the French police, while running through the streets and calling out that he be taken before a magistrate. He was turned over to British detectives and taken on to Bombay for trial. The French Socialists raised the question of whether the student was properly surrendered to the British officers after he had set foot on French soil, and appealed for refuge as a political prisoner.

The case excited so much controversy that the Governments of Great Britain and France exchanged notes on the subject, and last fall agreed to submit to The Hague tribunal this question:

"Ought Vinayak Damodar Savarkar, in conformity with the rules of international law, to be or not be surrendered by the Government of his Britannic majesty to the Government of the French Republic?"

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 15.—Delegates representing marine labor organizations associated with dredging operations on the great lakes, submitted to representatives of the Dredge Owners' Association a formal request for the adoption of an eight-hour work day. The action of the labor associations followed a conference here on Monday at which T. V. O'Connor, Buffalo, president of the International 'Longshoremen's Association, was chairman. At this meeting were representatives of the dredge workers, engineers, and oranemen, licensed tugmen, tug firemen and the submarine and rock drill workers. The organization last named already has an eight-hour day. The other four want a similar limit to their hours of labor.

How Ovila Marcotte's Bright's Disease Was Caused and Cured

A cold was the cause and Dodd's Kidney Pills the cure—He recommends them because he has proved them good.

Lafond, Alta., Feb. 14.—(Special.)—In these winter days, when nearly everybody has a cold, and the cold goes to the weak spot, Backache and other symptoms of Kidney disease are almost epidemic.

For this reason the statement of Ovila Marcotte of this place is of interest to every one. He had a cold. It developed Backache, Kidney Disease, and finally the dreaded Bright's Disease. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured him. Here is his full statement:

"For three years, due to a cold, I suffered with Backache, Kidney Disease and Bright's Disease. I was treated by a doctor, who did me no good. It was four boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills did the work. I recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills to all persons who suffer from diseased Kidneys."

Neglected Kidney trouble brings suffering and disease, that too often proves fatal. When a cold shows you that your Kidneys are weak or disordered the only safe plan is to tone them up with Dodd's Kidney Pills. They always cure all form of Kidney trouble.

The supply of water was very low when the firemen fought the flames mostly with snow. The loss is estimated at about $150,000.

Georgian Bay Canal.

Ottawa, Feb. 15.—The Federated Boards of Trade have asked the civic publicity department for a grant for the furtherance of the objects of the federated boards, principal among which at the present time is the Georgian Bay Canal. The federated boards intend sending two men on a tour of the west with the object of enlightening the people there as to the merits of the project.

J. J. Warren's Home-Coming.

Toronto, Feb. 15.—J. J. Warren, manager of the Trusts & Guarantee Co., who was summoned to answer in the Police Court on Friday, a charge of conspiring, with Dr. Beattie Nesbitt, C. S. Smith and J. R. Stratton, to obtain a charter for the Farmers' Bank by fraud. On Monday his two-months-old son died, and he knew nothing of it till he arrived home.

Not as Bad as Painted.

Ottawa, Feb. 15.—There are objections in connection with the recent address of Miss Sylvia Pankhurst in Toronto, where she stated that some of the female employes of Hull, Que., received only $1.80 per week as wages. No one can be found accepting anything less than $3 a week, and these very young girls.

LIFE IN SANTIAGO.

Curious Customs That Prevail in the Capital of Chile.

They have women conductors on the electric cars of Santiago, the capital of Chile. This was made necessary by a war, which took so many men to the front and imposed upon women the work usually done by men. The custom has been kept up, the women having proved equally as efficient as the men had been.

One of the most peculiar customs seen here is the evening promenade in the plaza or park, which is attended by young ladies and young men and quite small boys and girls. They do not mix, but keep quite separate paths.

Yet even the little girls at seven or eight years are finished coquettes. Their eyes languidly observe every man and boy in the plaza, and they take care that each shall receive a due share of their smiles.

Another curious custom which prevails in Santiago and which is joined by those fortunate enough to have fine horses and carriages is the promenade at the Parque Cousino, a beautiful park near the center of the city.

A company of mounted police stands in single file in the center of the drive, and the carriages, with uniformed coachmen and footmen and beautifully gowned women and fashionably dressed men occupying the carriages, ride around and around these mounted police.

Sometimes there are two or as many as six rows of carriages, some going in the opposite direction and alternating, the ladies smiling and the gentlemen tipping their hats in a polite manner. This promenading lasts from 5 o'clock in the afternoon until 8 o'clock in the evening.—Logical Point.

The Moslem's Exalted Month.

Ramadan is the month exalted by Moslems above all others. In that month the Koran—according to Moslem tradition—was brought down by Gabriel from heaven and delivered to man in small sections. In that month Mohammed was accustomed to retire from Mecca to the cave of Hira for prayer and meditation. In that month Abraham, Moses and other prophets received their divine revelations. In that month the "doors of heaven are always open, the passages to hell are shut, and the devils are chained." So run the traditions.—Christian Herald.

The Missing Word.

A "new missing" word contest has just appeared. It is as follows: A good church deacon sat down on the pointed end of a tack. He at once sprang up and said only two words. The last was "it." Any one guessing the first word and sending a dollar in cash will be entitled to this periodical for one year.—Lippincott's.

The man who forgets to be thankful has fallen asleep in life.—Stevenson.

MARKET REPORTS.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Lower—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, Feb. 14.—Depressed by impending reciprocity and by rain in the drought-stricken southwest, miscellaneous holders of wheat sold out to-day with little or no reserve. Much evening up of open interests on the part of shorts caused a rally, but the close, the firm, was at a net loss of ⅝c to ¾c. The day's trade left corn from ⅛c to ⅝c higher than Saturday night. Oats unchanged to ⅛c up; provisions, less expensive by a shade to 25c.

LIVERPOOL, Feb. 14.—The market at opening to-day and during yesterday's session showed steadiness on the decrease in local stocks here and improved demand for spot. At the opening to-day values were ¼d lower to ¼d higher than Saturday, with the principal strength in March. Following the opening, there developed an easy undertone. Pressure resulted from the liberal world's shipments, increase on passage, heavy Russian shipments, and continued free offers of Plata and Australian wheat.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Feb. 14.—The foreign demand for wheat to-day was quiet, and consequently only a few loads were worked on the break in the Winnipeg prices. Oats were quiet and prices easy in sympathy with the weakness in the west. On account of the steady decline in wheat values, the demand for flour from all sources has fallen off, and business is quiet. On increased arrivals of American potatoes an easier feeling has developed in the market, and prices have declined five cents per bag, with sales of car lots at 97½c to 85c.

Owing to larger receipts of eggs, prices of new-laid have declined 2c per dozen, but cold storage stock is steady. Cheese is stronger.

Two aged women, who were nearly suffocated by smoke, were carried from the third floor to the street.

A Roxbury society girl and a Conservatory of Music student proved a heroine. She assisted the police and firemen in getting the people out of the building, and refused to leave until she was sure that everybody had reached the street in safety.

Intake Pipe on Which Toronto Depends for Its Water is Blocked Up and it Will be Difficult Matter to Remove Obstruction

MAY USE ARTILLERY

Special wire to The Examiner.

TORONTO, FEB. 15.—This city is thoorughly alarmed about the condition of the water supply. The intake pipe is blocked up, and owing to the condition of the weather and the ice jam no boat can get out to the pipe to remove the obstructions. The reservoir contains enough water to last till to-night, but after that nobody knows. The suggestion has been made to the city engineer that he should secure the permission of the military department, call out the artillery and shell the vicinity of the intake pipe, blowing up the obstructions.

A FIVE STOREY BUILDING COLLAPSES AT WINNIPEG

Sixty Winnipeg People Had a Miraculous Escape From a Terrible Death This Morning at 3 O'clock---Only One Woman Badly Hurt---The Screams Could Be Heard for Blocks.

Special Wire to the Examiner.

WINNIPEG, FEB. 15.—Sixty people had a miraculous escape from a terrible death this morning at three o'clock, when the Nares block, a five story residential apartment building collapsed, carrying the sleeping occupants with it. Most of them were women, but many generally, showed great presence of mind in helping their more excited sisters to safety. As the building began to crumble, the screams could be heard for blocks. The majority were rescued by climbing on to the roofs of neighbouring buildings. The firemen and policemen summoned succeeded eventually in getting everybody out before the final crash, although elderly Mrs. McLeavy may be fatally hurt. Adjacent building operations caused the collapse. The loss will be a hundred thousand dollars.

Y. M. C. A. DIRECTORS ARRANGE COMMITTEES FOR THE YEAR

The first meeting of the new Board of Directors of the Y.M.C.A. was held last evening in the Board Room of the Association. This was one of the brightest meetings the Board has held for some time. Most of the directors were present and the business was transacted with despatch and with undivided interest.

Mr. J. J. Turner, Jr., the new president, was in the chair and the meeting was opened with devotional exercises led by the General Secretary.

The Committees for the year 1911 were submitted by the president and after a few alterations had been made the list was adopted and the secretary authorized to have it printed for reference by each committee man. The chairman of the committees are: Finance, George A. Gillespie; Property, A. MacFarlane; Religious Work, J. J. Hartley; Educational, F. E. Ellis; Physical committee, J. H. Connal; Social Work, Frank Dawson; Membership, R. J. Soden; Boys' Work, R. F. Downey. This is a good list of chairmen and it is confidently felt that the personel of the committees is equally strong.

The financial statement for the month of January was submitted by the treasurer, Mr. J. J. Howden and adopted. This report was encouraging, showing that the Association is in better financial condition than it has been in for some time.

The Finance committee brought in the Budget for 1911 and this was the occasion for a lengthy and thoughtful discussion. The expenditures this year will necessitate a larger budget than last year and it is believed that with the increasing membership and the developing interest of the supporters the Finance committee will be able to meet all the calls that will be made upon the treasury.

The General Secretary read his report in which he reviewed the work done during the month of January and gave a forecast of possibilities before the Association during the coming 11 months. This was a very interesting and thoughtfully arranged paper and called forth the eulogy of the directors.

The resignation of Mr. E. L. Goodwill was received and accepted with the deepest regret by the Board. Mr. Goodwill is the secretary of the Children's Aid Society and feels that he cannot give the time which is demanded of a director and therefore he has asked to have his name removed. Mr. W. C. Switzer was appointed by the Board to fill the vacancy.

The meeting was brought to a close with prayer, in which the board was led by the Honorary President, Mr. J. W. Bennet.

FINED ON A CHARGE OF ASSAULT

Alex. Davis Took the Law in His Own Hands and His Bad Judgment Cost Him $10 in Police Court

THE EVIDENCE HEARD

Alex. Davis appeared in the Police Court this morning, charged with assaulting Gilbert Lush. He pleaded not guilty to the charge, but the case was proved against him and he was accordingly fined $10.00. He paid the fine.

Lush was put in the box to tell his side of the case and did so as follows:

"Davis was at the George Street him it was purely an accident and I was there, too. Through an accident, I ran into the girl Davis was skating with. I could not help it; but Davis said that he would settle with me when we got outside. At the time I ran into the girl, I did not know that Davis was skating with her. When I was on my way home, Davis was waiting for me at the corner of George and Sherbrook streets. He was alone. I passed him, and had got up as far as Peter Hamilton's foundry, when he overtook me. He touched me on the shoulder and asked me if I wanted to settle. I told him i was purely an accident and I could not help it, therefore there was nothing to settle. He told me that I nearly knocked her down. I told him that he was skating with her and that it was his place to hold her up. I then turned and walked on. He shoved me off the sidewalk and I got on again; he then shoved me into the wall and stunned me. I had to make a defence then. We started to fight, but when I found that I had lost a tooth, I quit. I wanted to go on, but he kept striking at me and would not let me. Then I ran."

"In the rink I was skating with a girl when Lush ran into her and gave her quite a blow, in fact it threw her right ground before me."

"Threw her into your arms," suggested the Magistrate. "Yes," said Davis. "Well, you didn't object to that," commented his Worship. Davis did not answer. Then he proceeded with his story:

"I wanted him to apologize, but he would not. I said that I would see him outside. I accordingly waited for him at the corner of George and Sherbrooke streets, and asked him if he was going to settle it. He answered that he had nothing to apologize for, and I told him not to try that again. I gave him a little shove to the edge of the walk, and he turned around and hit me on the back, then that started it. I would have let him go if it had not been for that.

Robt. Wilson, a defence witness, was then called. He gave evidence which agreed with both the others.

Then the Magistrate told Davis that he (Davis) had taken upon himself to punish Lush. He took the law into his own hands and started the fight, and forced the fight on him. The Magistrate said that in such a case these little accidents are informal and cannot be counted. "I find you guilty, and a lesson will be useful to you," concluded his Worship. "Fined $10.00 or ten days."

TO GIVE LECTURE

Rev. Jas. Northy, of Belfast, Ireland, will deliver a lecture in the Foresters' Hall, Simcoe street, to-morrow (Thursday) night, that promises to be of especial interest. The subject will be "Derry, Its Siege and After," and the lecture will be illustrated by some splendid limelight views. Rev. Mr. Northy is a fascinating and interesting speaker, who has to be heard to be appreciated, and he will be doubtless welcomed by a large audience to-morrow night.

OBJECTS OF THE Y.M.C.A. EXPLAINED TO THE PUBLIC

Interesting Interview With Mr. H. M. Gilchrist, the General Secretary---Their Aim is the Development of Efficient Christian Manhood---How the Object is Undertaken

An Examiner reporter was out for news and dropped in to see the General Secretary of the Y.M.C.A. with the desire to "write up" the Association, feeling that such information as he could give the readers about an organization which comes into such vital contact with the life of the city would be interesting to them.

There is marked improvement in the appearance of the Association building which one cannot overlook. The whole appearance of the building is taking on a brighter aspect and there is life from basement to attic.

The General Secretary at once took advantage of the opportunity to give the newspaper man the objective of the Association. "Many people" he said, "think that the Association is merely a place where young men and boys come and loaf, or come to join in 'harmless amusements.' This is not the case. We aim at the development of efficient Christian manhood, and we are not satisfied with any methods which have not that end in view."

The reporter is a sceptic by training and intimated that probably the public would be more interested to know how or to what extent the Association is accomplishing its purpose.

"Well," was the answer, "to commence with the physical, for that is the part of the young man's life which is most evident, our Physical Director reports that in the month of January, which is a slack month there were 238 men and boys enrolled in classes in the gymnasium. These young men are taking systematic body-building exercise under a competent director, the best director this Association has ever had. Exercise which gives a man complete control of his body and develops his physical judgment, standing him in good stead all through life. This steady stream of young men and boys being led and trained in this way is of inestimable worth to the city of Peterborough. In the bath room we are teaching boys and young men to swim. Since the first of November, no less than ten boys and several men have been taught to swim. When you are called upon to record the drowning of boys in and around our own city, and when you think of the homes made sorrowful by the loss of those who might have been spared if these boys had been taught to swim, you will see at once the value of this work; a work which no other organization is attempting to do. More than that we have a class in which our young men are taught to rescue the drowning and administer first aid, thus making a large number of young men efficient in this very important line."

The scribe could not very well gainsay the truth of the secretary's contention in the physical department the Association was rendering valuable service, but there are many persons who feel that the Association's efforts are largely confined to the physical. To this the answer came in no uncertain tone.

"That is simply because we are not talking about what we are doing in the other lines. But you look, for example, at what we have done this season alone in the educational line. Both our classes have touched the men on the side of their vocations. Outside of the Y.M.C.A. there are absolutely no classes, other than by correspondence, for the training of young men in industrial lines. Our class in shop arithmetic and mechanical drawing makes the men more intelligent mechanics and solves one of the largest problems which the industrial world has to deal with. Then we have a class in electricity which is giving the young men who are taking it, a training which they could not get otherwise without going to college. Each man is given personal attention by a competent teacher."

"But are you not losing sight of that phase of your work which many of your supporters think the most important?" was the next question asked by the reporter.

"In our religious work we are doing, and have for some time been doing, a work that is unique. We are not waiting for the men to come to us, we are going to where the men are and there bringing to them the plain, simple, but effective story of the life and teaching of Jesus. We have meetings in three of the shops of the city, and only the lack of help keeps us from entering others. We go there at the noon hour and we are welcomed by many of the men, who give us an attentive hearing and express themselves as delighted with the meetings. In this way we reach at least one hundred men every week. Then we have our gospel scrivce in the theatre on Sunday evenings. This catches the young men who otherwise walk the streets, and there again we reach about one hundred men a week and bring them to a moral and spiritual issue. We have classes, too, in the building. One on Sunday morning at 9.30 and another at 4.15 in the afternoon. These are reaching different classes of men and training them in the study of the scriptures. We are rendering an effective service to the church in that we are holding training classes for Sunday school teachers and making more efficient teachers."

The reporter, at this point, expressed himself as pretty thoroughly convinced, but the secretary saw his opportunity and went on to cite other features of the work which were not by any means less important than those which he had already mentioned.

"In our Boys' Department we had last month a total attendance at the rooms of over 1300 boys. He told of the statement of one of the local business men that one of the boys in his employ had made remarkable progress since he had joined the Association, and he had no hesitation in saying that it was the Association which had brought about that development. You can tell the business men and citizens that this Y.M.C.A. is doing a work that demands their support and that every citizen must take his or her choice between two positions, either that they believe that the Association is an absolute necessity to the well being of the community and that as a citizen he will do his best to maintain the work, or on the other hand that the Young Men's Christian Association is not necessary to Peterborough and that so far as they are concerned it can close it's doors."

When the reporter took his departure he was a better Association man than he was when he entered and he expressed the hope that this little 'interview' will be the means of making others more interested in one of the greatest works being carried on in the city.

IL TROVATORE

Lovers of grand opera who braved the blinding snow storm and blizzard that raged last night, to hear the English interpretation of Verdi's "Il Trovatore" at the Grand Opera House, were rewarded for their intrepidity by the finished excellence of the production by the Sheehan English Grand Opera Company.

The audience showed their appreciation in no uncertain manner by unstinted applause, and the principals had to respond to several recalls, which were thoroughly deserved.

In a company of such exceptional merit, in which every individual member deserves only praise, it would be invidious to make comparisons, yet, without detracting from the merit of the other performers, to Miss Elsine De Sellem, contralto, must be awarded the premier honours. For perfect control of her magnificent voice, expression, clear enunciation (in which she particularly excelled) and faithful portrayal of the passions, for which her character as Azucena afforded ample scope, Miss De Sellem could not be surpassed, and she more than earned the lavish applause showered upon her.

Had the enunciation of the other principals been up to the same high standard as their vocal and dramatic powers, the production would have been absolutely perfect, in the opinion of the audience.

THE LATE DAVID BOYLE.

The intelligence of the death of David Boyle, of Toronto, will be learned with deep regret by many in this city and vicinity, who had the pleasure and honour of an acquaintance with a man who was an enthusiastic scientist of a subject which in its superficial bearing at least was capable of appeal to popular appreciation. Time after time he spent considerable time in the Rice Lake district, especially, literally revelling in the fruitful search for bones, bones with a history, the bones that made the archeological history of this country plain. Mr. Boyle was a genial gentleman with a great fund of conversational material, and when engaged in burrowing in prehistoric burial mounds in company with residents of the vicinity, a good story told in his dry, pawky, humorous Scotch way effectively masked for the onlooker the deep importance of the discoveries, heavy with scientific interest, he was making and storing for future use. Mr. Boyle did a great work in archæ logical research and, though he began in a humble way in the intervals of leisure of a rural teacher, he won his way and became a peer, if not in many respects a leader, among the most celebrated archeologists of the continent. Whether remembered as a scientist in his line, or as a genial companion and faithful friend, Mr. Boyle's memory will long be cherished, and his example of patient, plodding work to a definite goal, will serve as an incentive and inspiration.

A SLIGHT CORRECTION.

When Augustus Bridle "wrote up" Hon. G. A Cox, in "Saturday Night" –as one contribution in a series of "Toronto's Millionaires," he did not in one sense, to employ an obvious pun, bridle his imagination or refrain from using strong contrasts. The tribute to Mr. Cox's financial genius and his progress to the chair of dean of the financial faculty in Canada are well reasoned and well deserved. But to set up a striking contrast between the humble origin or locale of the Senator's financial triumphs and his subsequent and great successes, it was hardly necessary to belittle Peterborough in the favourite Hog-town mode—supercilious patronage. Hon. Mr. Cox was Mayor of Peterborough in the seventies and early eighties, when the flippant title of "cordwood-town," with the market square as its "forum," bestowed by his financial biographer, was as ill-fitting as it would be now, or as "little muddy York" would be to the Toronto of to-day. Peterborough was, at that time, a thriving, busy, alert, clean, progressive town far removed from "cordwood," as a correct characterization and synonym of back-woodness. Peterborough appreciates Hon. Geo. A. Cox and has honest pride in his great personality and great accomplishments. We are sure, however, that he would not be quick to endorse an exaggerated disparagement, used even to point an antithesis, regarding the town where he began to mount the ladder of financial fame and achievement, and where his personal and sentimental affections as well as, to a large extent, his financial interests, are centred. With this slight correction, Mr. Bridle's tribute to Hon. Mr Cox is delightful reading to Peterborough people.

A FLOURISHING ASSOCIATION.

The annual statement of the Peterborough Poultry Association, not only on account of its own interests, but on account of what its work means, is an important one. Its finances seem to sound, and its cash balance a large one for an Association of its size. This is satisfactory, because its educative function bears an important relation to an industry capable of very great and very advantageous development. It is not to be disputed that the poultry industry in Canada is greatly neglected; that it falls immensely short of what it can be made. That a country like Canada, with its great capabilities in poultry breeding should have to undergo the humiliation of importing eggs, is not only an anomoly, but a disgrace and discredit to the enterprise of its farmers, who achieve such great triumphs in other branches of productions. We could with proper management, and properly directed enterprise, be exporting millions in the way of poultry products, birds and eggs. We could thus engage the boys and women of our farms in the profitable exploitation of an industry, without withdrawing the man kind from the possibly larger, but not altogether more profitable, objects of dairying and grain growing. In fostering a taste for poultry raising, and demonstrating the best breeds and methods, as well as the profits of poultry breeding, the Peterborough Association is doing a very important educative and stimulative work. That it is succeeding in justifying its existence is evident. Now that a wider market is in sight, thus eliminating the danger of over-production, the work of the Association should receive large encouragement and stimulation from the public. We are told, and we know it without telling, that the possibilities of Canadian agricultural production have not nearly been reached. We know that with intensive farming, applied in every department of farm activity, the 500 million annual output of Canadian farms available for marketting could easily be advanced to 1,000 million a year.

A CONSPIRACY.

Ottawa Citizen (Conservative)

In the province of Quebec and the state of New York there is a conspiracy on foot of annex this country to the United States, and not a word of protest from the Montreal Star, the great commercial champion of impedialism! The iniquitous plot will be perpetrated in this wise. A macadamized motor road will be built from New York city to Montreal. It is true that the road will cost our neighbours seven or eight times as much as our Quebec compatriots will be set back. But think of the iniquity of the scheme! A well paved highway from the leading city in the United States to the largest city in Canada, whereby citizens of both countries may more comfortably exchange visits! It will mean that many thousands of Canadians will be able to travel in motor cars to the metropolis of the United States, while the only way they can travel to the heart of the empire is over a rough ocean. Think of the strain on the imperial tie—not the genuine imperial bond that binds with unbreakable strands of love—but the commercial brand of imperial tie which shouts that unless the mother country pays us more for our wheat than she pays anybody else we will drift away from her. Unless the Montreal Star issues an injunction to restrain old Neptune from using rough tactics in his endeavour to throw Canada into the arms of the United States, the Montreal board of trade should sprinkle wire nails over the new international highway. This would discourage rich Americans from coming into Canada and spending their good money in Montreal merchandise, thereby diluting Montreal's loyalty to the mother country.

A PREPOSTEROUS PROPOSAL FOR PROTECTING CANADIAN INTERESTS

(Montreal Herald.)

If anything were needed to reconcile reluctant Canadians to the sad prospect of selling a few million dollars more of their goods to the United States, it would surely be provided by the extraordinary alternatives which are put forward by some of those who dislike the present proposals. One had supposed that the doctrine of the Haman's Gallows tariff was defunct in this country, so long is it since it has been officially voiced by a representative of any section of the people. But here is the Canadian Century, which appears to have constituted itself the advance guird of a new Army of High Protection, coming forth with the suggestion that the proper way of dealing with our trade balance with the United States is to stop buying from that country rather than to sell more to it. "There is another way than reciprocity of removing that disadvantage," says the Canadian Century, "viz., by raising the Canadian tariff high enough to cause the production in Canada of about one-half of what we now import from the United States."

An admirable idea, in truth. Let us see how it works out. The importations into Canada from the United States last year totalled just $233,000,000, exclusive of coin and bullion. How simple the process of "raising the Canadian tariff high enough to cause the production in Canada" of about $116,500,0 00 worth of these goods! Let us go about it scientifically. What shall we produce?

We import $4,600,000 of Indian corn. Why not put on a duty and manufacture it? True, the farmer would never be able to feed his pigs for the export market if he had to rely upon protected Canadian corn, for our climate is not exactly ideal for the growth of that cereal, and the trifling industry of exporting seven or eight or nine million dollars of bacon to Britain would go by the board; but what matter? We must quit buying things from the United States.

We import $30,000,000 of coal and coke from the States, much of it duty free. Preposterous; clap on a stiff duty and keep it out. It will please the manufacturers particularly. And we must quit buying things from the United States.

Then there is that $1,800,000 of binder twine and other cordage that comes in free because the farmer, who sells in an unprotected market, needs it in the handling of his product. Overboard with it!

After which we come to almost $10,000,000 of free raw cotton. This is enough to make one weep. It might all be made in Canada—if only the climate could be changed, and we had enough coloured labour. The cotton manufacturers particularly would be pleased to see it hit with a duty that would put a stop to all importation. Ten million dollars! A free gift to the Southern States. It is heart-rending.

Natural gums, $2,000,000. They are mostly tropical; why not grow them in Alberta, and keep out this alien product?

Nuts and dried fruits—mostly figs, raisins, prunes, dates and so forth—$1 400,000. Oranges, lemons, grapefruit; pineapples, all to the exceeding detriment of the Canadian tropic fruit industry, $3,800,000. This must certainly be cut out.

Raw furs, $3,000,000. Manilla grass, $1,000,000. Crude rubber, $4,000,000. Hides, raw, $1,800,000. Think how the manufacturers would hail the idea of a nice prohibitive duty on these raw materials, and wonder why nobody has done it before.

Metals and minerals and manufactures therof make up a long catalogue, into which it is not necessary to go into detail. No less than $16,200,000 worth is admitted free from the States, in every case because the article is either raw material or very slightly manufactured, and is needed in Canada for the supplying of some protected industry, or else because it is largely used by the farmer and cannot be as cheaply manufactured in Canada. Keep them out, by all means.

Then this item for seeds, $1,000,000. Nearly all of it for hay, too. Cannot Canada manufacture her own hayseeds? Perish the thought!

And then one of the saddest items in the whole list. Settlers' effects, $7,600,000—the largest amount of record. No true Canadian can contemplate this without a tear. The only question is: Shall we abolish the effects or shall we abolish the settler? And can we do one without doing the other? There are people who claim that we should raise our own settlers; but a bounty rather than a high tariff used to be the preferred method of encouraging the operation.

Tobacco, $3,000,000. This business of encouraging Virginia to compete with the aromatic products of the Province of Quebec is clearly a disadvantage to the nation. Why should any Canadian want to smoke a Richmond leaf when he can get "tabac rouge" right on the spot? Or with it? Vegetables, $1,000,000 — largely sweet potatoes, melons, tomatoes out of our own season, and other warm weather products. Doubtless a sufficient duty would enable us to raise sweet potatoes at Edmonton and tomatoes all the year round; at any rate we ought to try it.

Lumber in unfinished state for manufacturing purposes, free of duty, $8,000,000. Think of the magnificent oak forests and mahogany plantations that would spring up on every hand if we only had a prohibitive duty on these woods, and weep over the futility of the policy that allows us to buy all these things from somebody else.

"All other articles imported," free, $1,600 000. We don't know what they are, but it is surely safe to say that their importation is a crime against Canadian nationality. Who knows what "branch factories," for which the Canadian Century is so anxious, might not be established in Canada if no other article were allowed to be imported anyhow?

The foregoing are simply a few of the biggest items. There are plenty of others. Take $1,700,000 for duty-free animals—almost entirely entered for temporary exhibition purposes only and re-exported, but a few for "improvement of stock." To be abolished, doubtless. Free books and periodicals, $1,100,000; the books are limited to Bibles and to text-books for library purposes when such books are not printed in Canada. And many more such.

And then there is the trifling item of $12,000,000 of American wheat, entered not for our consumption, but to enjoy the advantages of our unrivalled route to the seaboard. This item too forms a part of the total that so alarms the Canadian Century, and that should be cut down by half. Certainly. Why import American wheat to use our tarnsportation routes, even if it pays its way?

The items we have enumerated total $116,600,000 — just $100,000 over the sum that the Canadian Century wants wiped out of the imports. They leave a total of $116,400,000 — just $100,000 less than the sum that the Canadian Century wants wiped out of the imports. We thus see at a glance how easy it is to "cause the production in Canada of about one-half of what we now import from the United States," and how certain it is that "the effect the industrial growth of Canada," that split infinite is the Century's), that the immense amount of American capital would be invested in building branch factories in Canada," and that "the population of cities and towns would double in a few years."

LINCOLN'S QUESTION.

It Stilled the Storm of Applause For His Opponent, Douglas.

Professor James T. McLeary of Mankato, Minn., who for fourteen years represented a district of his state in congress, told this Lincoln story:

"A friend of mine told me that when a boy he attended with his father one of the famous Lincoln-Douglas debates in Illinois. My friend's father was a Lincoln man, but the place in which that particular debate took place was a Douglas stronghold.

"Douglas spoke first, and he was frequently interrupted by vociferous applause. The cheering and the handclapping at the end lasted four or five minutes. When Lincoln was introduced the crowd broke out into cheers for Douglas and kept it up for several minutes. Lincoln meanwhile waited patiently.

"When at length the enthusiasm had subsided Lincoln extended his long right arm for silence. When he had partly got this he said in an impressive tone, 'What an orator Judge Douglas is!'

"This unexpected tribute to their friend set the audience wild with enthusiasm. When this applause had run its course Lincoln, extending his hand again, this time obtained silence more easily.

"'What a fine presence Judge Douglas has!' exclaimed the speaker earnestly. Again tumultuous applause followed the tribute.

"'How well rounded his sentences are! How well chosen his language is! How apt his illustrations are!' ending up with, 'What a splendid man Judge Douglas is!'

"Then when the audience had again become silent at his call Lincoln leaned forward and said:

"'And now, my countrymen, how many of you can tell me one thing Judge Douglas said?'

"My friend told me he searched his own heart for an answer and found none. Afterward he asked his father if he could remember anything Judge Douglas had said, and the latter remembered practically nothing. 'But,' my friend said to me impressively, 'even now, half a century later, I can recall practically all that Lincoln said.'"—Exchange.

Legend of Holyrood Palace.

Holyrood palace, Edinburgh, Scotland, once a British royal residence, is the subject of a strange legend. Robert Louis Stevenson alludes to it in his little book on Edinburgh. "There is a silly story," he writes, "of a subterranean passage between the castle of Holyrood and a bold highland piper who volunteered to explore its windings. He made his entrance by the upper end, playing a strathspey. The curious footed it after him down the street, following his descent by the sound of the chanter from below, until all of a sudden, about the level of St. Giles', the music came abruptly to an end and the people in the street stood at fault with hands uplifted. Whether he was choked with gases or perished in a quag or was removed bodily by the evil one remains a point of doubt, but the piper has never again been seen or heard of from that day to this."

National Shortsightedness.

"In this country," said the sociologist, "everything possible is done to discourage people from marrying."

"How so?" inquired one of the listeners.

"You have to buy the marriage license, fee the preacher, the boys give you what they call a 'shivaree,' your friends throw old shoes at you, the newspapers print caricatures of you, life insurance agents hound you, you bump right up against the cost of living, and if you find you've made a mistake you have to go to no end of trouble to get a divorce."—Chicago Tribune.

HOME OF FALCONRY.

The Kirghiz Hunt Wolves and Foxes With Great Golden Eagles.

All wanderers are lovers of the chase, but for sheer love of sport and daring exploits the Kirghis take the palm. Central Asia is the home of falconry, which was not introduced into Europe until the crusaders brought back falcons with them from their eastern wanderings. But imagine the ambition of the men who fly their birds at wolves and foxes instead of at quails and partridges! Not content with hunting game birds with small falcons, the Kirghis capture and train the great golden eagles, with which they hunt such game as gazelles, foxes and even wolves.

A well mounted Kirghis falconer, carrying on his wrist one of these magnificent birds, is a fine sight. The weight of the eagle is such that the owner requires a support for his wrist, and the hunters are usually to be seen with a little wooden bracket that supports the arm against the hip. The eagles are hooded, as all falcons are, but can be used only in winter, when they are hungry and keen. In summer they are fed on marmots and live a restful life, sitting in the sun in front of the tent doors.

When gazelles or wolves are the objects of the chase the eagles are aided by long, sleek greyhounds of a small breed, the dogs running in and pulling down the quarry when the eagles have sufficiently bewildered it.—Wide World Magazine.

HEMMED IN BY LIONS.

A Bad Case of Stage Fright and a Record Stunt in Singing.

Stage fright of the sort that afflicted Whit Cunliffe, at one time a prominent singer in English music halls, is not avoidable. Fortunately also it is not common. At a place where he was engaged in Birmingham one of the attractions was a lion show, some of the beasts being really wild and untamed. Nearly the whole stage was taken up with the "setting"—the animal show.

"Just as I was going on," said Cunliffe in telling the incident, "I heard a hurried rush and confused shouting, and some one slammed an iron gate I heard a voice say, 'Just in time; he was nearly out.' My music was starting, so I had no time to inquire. I went on the stage.

"In a moment I heard ominous growls and savage snarls mixed with much whip cracking and strenuous breathing. I am never fond of a wild animal show, and I felt distinctly nervous that night. The cloth behind me sagged and swayed, and then, to my horror, suddenly in the wings I saw the huge head and front of a lion.

"I was singing a song called 'I Would,' which had a lot of short verses. As I sang them, my blood running cold, I watched the lion. It seemed slowly to advance, and its baneful eyes glittered in a truly horrible way. I could not go off that side without passing it, so I prepared to 'exit' with haste.

"Turning, I was doubly horrified to see another lion on the other side.

"I was caught like a mouse in a trap. I dared not go off the stage; I dared not show my discomfiture to the audience. There was only one thing for me to do—sing. So I sang in desperation, hoping that some one would come and take those lions away. They told me afterward that I sang ninety-eight verses. But I think that was unkind.

"I wondered how long it would take those two brutes to make up their minds to come into the full glare of the footlights, and I had just prepared to leap into the stalls, regardless of the consequences, when I heard the hoarse voice of one of the stage hands say: 'Ere, Bill, these two chaps are too far forward. Give a 'and with them, will yer?' And, coming up between the two lions, they lifted them bodily. They were papier mache!"

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

THE GRILLERS WERE AHEAD AT THE HALF BUT COULD NOT KEEP UP THE FAST PACE

Kingston Frontenacs Repeated Their Victories of Last Week and Defeated Peterborough by 9 Goals to 3—Petes Led at the Half 3-2.

BLANKED IN SECOND

Until after half-time in last night's Junior O. H. A. semi-final game at Brock Street Rink it looked as if the Grillers to turn the trick and hand the Kingston Frontenacs their first beating of the season. At the half it was 3 to 2 in favour of Peterborough and the local youngsters had outplayed the Easterners by a much wider margin than those figures represent. In fact, with good shooting the Petes should have salted away half a dozen goals in the opening period. They out-checked and out-played the Sutherland bunch all through the half and the junior champions were lucky to escape with only a one-goal margin against them. There was a complete reversal of form in the second half. The Grillers fell off in their checking and seemed to lose their speed, while on the other hand the Frontenacs were tearing down the ice at an even faster clip than they had set in the first half, and the last period was all Kingston, the visitors gathering in seven counters, while the Petes failed to score, the net result being a 9 to 3 victory for the team from the East. The Grillers checked the Frontenacs to a standstill in the first period, but the pace they had to travel to do it told on them later on, and they wavered in the second half, while Kingston, in the meantime, travelled at the same break-neck speed all through The wear and tear of the first half seemed to take the steam out of the Peterborough line, and the defence often found themselves holding the fort alone. The last twenty minutes was pretty well a series of raids by the Kingston team, who were going as strong on end as at any period in the game. There is no doubt of the fact that the Frontenacs are a faster and better team. The Grillers held them in the first half only by a superhuman effort, which was too great to maintain throughout, while the visitors had plenty in reserve when called upon. The home team never let up, but the ginger and speed of the first half was lacking towards the end. The O.H.A.'s decision to replay the series thus resulted in nothing more than another trip to Peterborough for the Frontenacs, as the Peterborough team will default the return fixture.

The crowd was the smallest that has seen a League game this season numbering only about 500 fans, but they made up in noise what they lacked in number, and had a real good time in the first half when it looked as if the Kingston laurels were to be dragged in the dirt. The game itself was a fine exhibition of hockey, being fast at all times and clean in spite of the terrific speed.

The Grillers deserve credit for the great stand they made against Kingston. Although they did not beat the Frontenacs they were the first team to be ahead of them at any stage of the game and could they have kept up the gait until the finish would have carried off a victory. Of course the Easterners improved in the second half, but it is problematical if they could have done so if they had been looked after as closely as they were in the opening stages.

The Peterborough defence, which played a splendid game in the first half, did not work nearly so smoothly in the second. It may have been because the forwards did not come back as well, but at any event the Frontenacs had far less trouble in getting through. Early in the game the Grillers back division used the cross rink defence, used so successfully by Denison and Glover of the intermediates, but in the last period they lost the formation for some unaccountable reason and reverted to the old style. Patterson was magnificent in the first half and good all through, but his team crowded him badly in the last half and several easy shots leaked through on this account. His work in stopping shots right at the mouth of the goal line after time was splendid. Heffernan checked well and his rushes especially in the early stages, were hard to stop. Reynolds worked hard. On the forward line the bulk of the work fell to Matthews and Anderson, the two wings, both of which did a lot of useful work. Matthews, especially, was prominent by his great checking back; frequently he was the only Peterborough line man to chase back with the Frontenacs Anderson played The boards nicely all through Coughlin was handicapped first by a broken skate and later by a torn boot which kept him from getting along as he has in other games, although at that he contributed a lot of nice stick handling. Hall was off colour throughout and was never prominent. Undoubtedly the star of the Frontenacs last night and the best man on the ice was Davidson, the visitors' point player, whose speedy rushes, especially in the second half, were one of the features of the game. He is a very hard man to stop when once he gets under way. McCammon, the lanky cover, checked and rushed well. Brouse was the most effective of the forwards, doing a lot of pretty and effective work. Millan did not show up at all in the first half but came strong on end, his scoring coming into evidence. Frontenacs will never miss Marchand if Williams continues to play as he did last night. He was very cool and reliable and stopped a lot of shots dead on.

Harvey Sproule refereed the seventh time he has acted in a Griller game this season. There were few complaints from either team.

The line-up:—

The game started off like a repetition of the other two encounters between the two teams, the players going to top speed and the play of the end to end variety, with both goalkeepers and defences working overtime. Peterborough won the toss, for a wonder. Millan had the first shot of the game, but it was wide, and the play travelled down to the Knigston nets. Williams, the Kingston goaler, broke his stick in two, and the game was stopped until he was provided with a new club. Bouncer Brouse, the Kingston rover, was caught tripping and was penalized for the first time this season. Peterborough began to take the offensive and outplayed the visitors. Hall had a splendid opportunity, but Williams was in the way and Marchand's successor also turned a good one aside from Anderson. Once again Coughlin went right through on top of him, but he smothered up the shot. The Petes were having the better of the play, and hummed around Frontenacs' nets like a swarm of bees. Except for an occasional foray by McCammon or Davidson, which the Peterborough defence handled splendidly the play centred pretty steadily in the neighbourhood of the Kingston nets. Hall threw away a chance by missing a pass right in front and Coughlin lost another by shooting wide. Peterborough were not to be denied and finally, after 9 minutes' playing, Matthews fooled Williams with a neat scoop shot from the side. Peterborough 1, Kingston 0.

Peterborough continued to press, and Hall almost scored, after a combination rush. Davidson got away for a rink-length jaunt, but Heffernan stopped him and the play travelled back. Anderson sent the Grillers' stock up higher by shooting one past Williams from a scrimmage. Peterborough 2, Kingston 0.

There was a worried look on the faces of the Kingston team at this stage and their mentor, James T. Sutherland, was not in any too happy a mood. He felt better a few moments later, when Boyer went up the wing and scored for Frontenacs. Jerry Coughlin broke his skate and fell as he was about to check the Kingston wing and the latter got clear away and found the nets. Peterborough 2, Kingston 1.

Coughlin retired to fix his skate, and there was a delay. When play resumed, Hall was benched for cross-checking. Brouse drew his second penalty of the game for tripping. A few seconds later Matthews was chased for the same offence. The play was fairly even, with Peterborough having a shade on the visitors, although not getting in as frequently on the Frontenac defence as they had in the first few minutes. Hall slashed Davidson's stick out of his hands when the Frontenac point man started a rush and Davidson charged at the Peterborough centre. Davidson drawing a three-minute penalty, while Hall went off for two. Matthews was still in the penalty box, and Peterborough had to play five against six for a few moments. Millan broke his skate and retired until half-time, Anderson being dropped with him. Heffernan was sent away for tripping and Hunt followed on the same charge. Kingston tied the score with Heffernan off. Reynolds started a rush which carried him as far as centre, and he lost possession to McCammon, the Frontenac cover breaking away with a clear run to the nets. Matthews cut across from his wing in a speedy attempt to cut him off, but the big fellow side-stepped and swerved in scoring with a pretty shot. Peterborough 2. Kingston 2.

It only took Peterborough thirty seconds to take the lead again. From the face-off Coughlin carried the rubber down the side and scored on a beautiful shot from the boards, the rubber dropping through Williams' pads into the net. Peterborough 3. Kingston 2.

Half-time was called a few seconds afterwards.

The Frontenacs came back with a great burst of speed, after the rest, while the Grillers, on the other hand, did not seem to have the same ginger. Kingston started in at top speed and quickly evened up the score and shot ahead. Davidson, the sturdy point player, was responsible for the tying goal. Getting the rubber in the corner at his own end he shot across the rink and down the other side at top speed, then circled around the Petes' defence and scored from close in.

Kingston 3, Peterborough 3.

Peterborough rallied and the play was very even for the next few minutes. Millan was penalized but there was no scoring when he was off. Heffernan stopped Hunt with a heavy body check and the game was pulled off until the Kingston centre recovered. Anderson made a couple of pretty rushes along the wing at this stage but Williams took care of the shots from the boards coolly. Finally Brouse started the downfall of the Grillers by a pretty rush from centre which terminated in a goal. Kingston 5, Peterborough 3.

From this stage on the Frontenacs had considerably the better of the argument. The visitors were skating like whirlwinds, while the Petes were fading. Millan doubled the score with a shot from the side. Kingston 6, Peterborough 3.

Boyer was penalized for tripping, but the odd man advantage did not help the Petes, as Davidson came down with another beautiful rush carrying the rubber around Heffernan, and Reynolds, and scored from the mouth of the net. Kingston 7, Peterborough 3.

Millan got the last two goals for Kingston. One of them was very fluky. The little wing man passed the rubber out to centre from the corner, and it caromed into the net off Reynolds' skate.

1—Peterborough, Matthews.
2—Peterborough, Anderson.
3—Frontenacs, Boyer.
4—Frontenacs, McCammon.
5—Peterborough, Coughlin.

CONSIDERABLE INTEREST IN TO-MORROW'S PRO GAME

With both of Peterborough's O. H. A. teams out of the running there is a corresponding increase in the interest in the professional game at Brock Street Rink to-morrow night between the Port Hope professionals and Manager Nolan's team. The Port Hope team have been travelling at a lightning clip and have visions of trimming Waterloo and playing for the Stanley Cup. Manager Nolan says they will have a busy session, however, with the Peterborough team before the matter is decided, and the line-up to-morrow night will be the strongest that the Port Hope team has had to encounter this season. With the addition of Fred Doherty and Ras Murphy to the already formidable team that Manager Nolan has in town, it looks as if Ranall and Company will have their work cut out for them all through the engagement. With Randal, Dusty, Doherty and Robby Mercer in the game the fans will have a few familiar faces before them. The two graduates of the Peterborough City League, Dusty and Doherty will be watched especially. The game should draw a good crowd and will undoubtedly be a good exhibition of hockey.

ELLIOT'S

SOME HOCKEY HAPPENINGS

Well, it's better to have played again, than never to have played at all.

Al Davidson, the sturdy point and captain of the Frontenacs, is a star hockeyist, but he is inclined to lose his head a little. Last night he repeated his exploit of taking a swing at a spectator with his stick. In some of the towns in which the old Peterborough team had to play, an act of that kind would have been a signal for a free-for-all.

Coach Sutherland, like his team, did not get started until the second half. When the Frontenacs started to score the voice of James T. could be heard above all the crowd with its appeal for "More speed" and "faster."

Jerry Coughlin is the champion hard luck opponent. After breaking a skate last night and being forced to finish with an odd pair of skates, he tore the back out of one boot so that he could hardly skate.

Kingston had the luck that usually goes with the winning team. One goal in the second half was an accident, the puck glacing into the nets off Reynolds' skates when Millan was endeavouring to make a pass from the corner into centre. The first goal credited to the Frontenacs was a peculiar one, the rubber sliding along the ice and carroming in off the post.

KINGSTON, FEB. 1.—The Frontenac hockey management have, through their lawyer, written the editor of the Belleville Intelligencer demanding a retraction of an article in yesterday's issue of that paper, in which the Junior Frontenacs are referred to as "Sutherland's Pirates." If the paper refuses to apologize an action for seven thousand dollars will be instigated against it by the management of the junior champions for defamation of character.

The Orillia youngsters who beat University of Toronto juniors last night and put the students out of the running are one of the youngest teams in the series. Five of them played lacrosse in the C. L. A. juvenile series last season, and are less than seventeen years of age.

Mr. Jas. T. Sutherland, that eminent scholar and linguist of Kingston, who has been riding to fame on the shoulders of his fleet Frontenacs, junior champions of the O. H. A., has a "grouch," and it is no small one either. He believes that the sub-committee of the O. H. A. combined to do him "dirt" because forsooth they consigned his stellar goaler, Marchand, to the outer darkness. Marchand was allowed to play all season before it was accidentally discovered that he was over age. In translating the French documents relative of his birth, etc., a mistake was made by the erudite gentlemen to whom the task was handed, before the campaign opened, and he was given the benefit of some six months. The error was discovered the other day by Secretary W. A. Hewitt, and the only thing to do under the circumstances was to banish Marchand and have the last two games played by the Frontenacs replayed. Mr. Hewitt does not claim to be a French scholar, though he says he can understand the language if they throw it at him slowly. Evidently Mr. Sutherland is in the same boat, as the original slip was made at his end. In some respects the Kingston team may consider themselves fortunate that they are allowed to remain in the competition. The whole thing is somewhat unique and but for the fact that the O. H. A. "fumbled" as "pass" when the papers were first submitted, the extreme penalty was not meted to Sutherland's speed boys. Judging from the performances of the team, they hardly need a goal-keeper anyway.—Toronto News.

"Cheer up, Lizzie is coming."

A year ago to-night the final game in the City League between the Stratheonas and West Ends was played. What a difference this year.

Whitby and Midland Intermediates who are drawn together in the semi-finals, have met once this season. The game was played at Midland and was a victory for the latter in 20 minutes' overtime. Midland was without Eddie Gould, while Whitby did not have the services of Blanchard.

THE LINE-UP FOR TO-MORROW'S GAME

Manager Nolan to-day announced his line-up for to-morrow night's game with the Port Hope professional team. Harvey Sproule of Toronto, who is well known through his handling of the junior games here, will referee. The game will be played under Eastern rules in three twenty minute periods, and the fans are reminded that skating a man onside is not allowed under the Eastern playing rules. The Peterborough team will line up this way:

Goal—William Baker, formerly of the Montreal Wanderers.
Point—Ras. Murphy of Ottawa and Galt.
Cover—Bill Lane, late of Toronto Eurekas and Parkdales.
Rover—Ben Dusty of Peterborough.
Centre—Bill Chipchase, formerly of the Montreal Wanderers.
Right wing—Charlie Lightfoot of Stratford.

BALLOON AIRSHIPS.

Sport of the Winds, but Safe With Sea Room, Says Wellman.

"Men who thought there was danger that the America might be torn to pieces by a storm had not reflected well upon the physical conditions surrounding a ship of the air," says Walter Wellman in Hampton's Magazine. "A steamship or sailing vessel is buffeted by the wind and wave, but it is partly immersed in an ocean of fluid which offers great resistance and subjects it to violent shocks.

"An airship is completely immersed in a medium which offers so little resistance that shocks are impossible. It is not an easy fact to grasp, but is still a fact, that the only resistance an airship offers to the wind, the only strain or pressure upon her parts, is that which she herself creates with her engine and propellers.

"To understand this principle imagine the America in the air far out over the ocean. It is calm; no engine is running; the crew, perchance, is asleep. Up springs a gale, fast gathering force till it reaches a velocity of fifty miles per hour. Nothing whatever in the motion, the vibration, the pitching or rolling of the ship alarms and awakens the crew. The America being a free balloon, because no engine is turning, simply becomes a part of the wind, so to speak, moves with the wind, offers no resistance to it, flows along as peacefully as if it still were dead calm. A member of the crew awakes, rubs his eyes, goes to his post, but if it be night and he cannot see the ocean he has no idea whether the ship is standing still or moving fifty miles per hour. If he strikes a match to light his pipe the flame curls straight upward, precisely as if he were in a closed room—an experience which many of us have had in ordinary spherical ballooning.

"Suppose now the crew be roused An engine is started, a pair of propellers set in motion. Then, and then only, does the ship offer resistance to the wind, and the measure of her resistance is the energy exerted by the propellers—just that, no more, no less. Nor does it make any difference whether the velocity of the wind be ten or a hundred miles per hour nor yet any difference whether the ship be headed into the wind or with it—the result is the same. Obviously, as long as the ship had sea room—could keep herself up in the air—no storm that ever blew could hurt her. But it makes a tremendous difference as to the course and destination of the ship from what quarter the winds come and with what force they blow."

Rats and the Plague.

The bubonic plague has killed 168,000 people in the last fourteen years in the city of Bombay alone, the highest mortality being 30,000 in 1903 and the lowest 5,000 during the past year. The reduction of the mortality can be traced very largely to the number of rats killed in the city, which are the indiscriminate carriers of the disease. A half million rats were killed last year in that city alone, of which number 90,000 were examined by the bacteriologists of the health department, and 9,000 of them were found to be infected with the plague. The wholesale destruction of these rodents was accomplished by the most careful municipal plans and co-operation of health and police departments, which scattered broad cast among with poison certain house cleaning in all parts of the city and thousands thousands of disinfected traps for the inhabitants, who caught lots of thousands of them.—Christian Herald.

Ten Largest Cities.

Of the ten largest cities in the world the United States has three. These are New York, Chicago and Philadelphia, which rank respectively as second, fifth and ninth in the world list. No other country has as many as the United States, and only Russia has more than one, St. Petersburg and Moscow making eighth and tenth. The largest city in the world is London, which has 7,000,000 population, or nearly 3,000,000 more than New York, which is the second in size. Paris is third on the list and is one of five cities that have between two and three millions each. Fourth in order is Tokyo, and then after Chicago comes Berlin, while the seventh and only remaining city of the ten is Vienna.—Kansas City Star.

Won by a Word.

Sol Gage, superintendent of transportation, recently recommended a man in the Lake Shore's employ for an increase in pay. Mr. Gage and this employee engaged in some correspondence over a technical detail of some transportation regulation. In reply to Mr. Gage's third letter this letter came:

"Instead of clarifying the situation, your letter of yesterday serves rather to obfuscate it."

"Any servant of a great corporation who can use the word 'obfuscate,' and use it right, deserves more than $60 a month, and I am going to see that he gets it," says Mr. Gage.—Cleveland Leader.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

IF you had ten thousand dollars given you when you were born would you begin to waste it and misuse it and spend it without getting half the possible return from it, as soon as you were old enough to do so?

I'll answer for you: No, of course not.

Now would you sell your eyes for ten thousand dollars?

I'll answer again, No, most emphatically, of course not.

Why then do you foolishly waste and misuse and spend without getting half the possible return, these little organs which you acknowledge to be a heritage worth far more than ten thousand dollars?

I wonder if I have a single reader who does not in some way or other abuse his eyes occasionally.

I doubt it.

For there are many ways of carelessly mistreating these extremely delicate organs.

Reading or working in the twilight of these all too short winter afternoons is probably the most common at this time of year.

Aclose second at any time of year is the habit of reading about a lamp so improperly shaded as to let the light fall on the eyes as well as on the book or work.

In buying a lamp for the family reading table one should be most careful about this detail. Many expensive lamps have shades that do not come down nearly far enough.

I know a girl who bought a lamp of this description for her room at college and lost six months of her college career and nearly ruined her eyes from the trouble that set in before she realized her mistake.

In buying a reading lamp it is well too, to remember that green is much the most restful colour for the shade.

If children were only trained as carefully as they should be to always sit at work or reading with the light falling over the shoulder, and never coming towards them, we should have another bad source of eye-strain removed.

Reading when lying down is apt to be bad for the eyes, but it can be done without injury if the reader is careful never to place the book so that he will have to look up. Let him turn on his side so that he can look down, and if the light is good and he does not read too long at a stretch, there should be no trouble.

Eye glasses which are allowed to get bent and out of focus are another foolish waste of eye energy. No matter how good your glasses they will not do you good if they do not rest on the nose just right, and it is the easiest thing in the world for them to get out of place.

To get the full eye rest from glasses one should go to an optician at least once in three months and have glasses adjusted. Your regular optician will doubtless do this free of charge.

One more eye hint that I have found almost invaluable. And that is the habit of bathing the eyes in hot water when they are tired or strained. Nothing—except sleep, perhaps—refreshes and rests the eyes like five minutes of bathing with cloths saturated in water as hot as one can stand.

A prominent physician says that if we only realized how many headaches how many baffling nervous disorders and stomach ailments, how much pessimism, melancholia and general "crankiness"—so-called—were traceable to some trouble with the eyes we would be more careful of these wonderful little organs.

I wish, then, there were some way we could be made to realise it.

"The Lottery Man"

BY RIDA JOHNSON-YOUNG

"Helene!" he exclaimed, "you said—not ten minutes ago—that no matter what trouble I might be in you wouldn't turn your back on me. And now—"

"And now," answered Helene, "I must decline to share your attentions with three hundred thousand other women. I wanted to help Jack Wright, the man I thought was worthy of my friendship. I did not undertake to help the—Lottery Man."

At the last words she was gone. Jack made no effort to stop or follow her. He turned upon his mother a face from which the gay boyishness had been suddenly wiped as by a sponge.

"I'm—I'm up against it mother," he muttered unsteadily. "I guess that's about the last chapter. It was going to be a love story. And—and now it's to be a romance with 300,000 heroines and no hero."

"Don't you care, dear heart!" cried Mrs. Wright, in quick loyalty. "It'll come out all right I'm your chum—and I'm not going back on you. She'll marry you yet — see if she doesn't."

"Unluckily," replied Jack, "there are three hundred thousand applications ahead of hers. We study to please."

CHAPTER VI.

The "Beauty Culture" Girl."

It was the most miserable hour of the whole day in the Peyton household. In other words, it was Mrs. Peyton's "physical culture" hour. Hedwig Jansen, an expert masseuse and trainer from the nearest Turkish baths, was in charge of the said proceedings. Lizzie Roberts was dragged, a shrieking victim into the work, and Foxey's spacious den on the top floor was pressed into service for a gymnasium.

Here, one day a month after Helene's discovery that Jack was the much despised lottery man, Hedwig and Lizzie were hard at work shoving furniture aside and making ready for the daily exercises.

Hedwig toiled with business-like speed and precision. Lizzie feebly moved furniture with the air of a martyr on the way to the stake. A sleazy black gymnasium suit and white stockings gave her lank form the look of a thin packet of laths.

In the course of pushing the various articles in the room back against the wall Hedwig tipped a study table so far to one side that its contents cascaded to the floor. She picked them up one by one. The last was a copy of the Examiner.

"To-day's the day!" she chuckled.

"I beg your pardon," said Lizzie in lofty inquiry.

"I said 'to-day's the day.' It's to-day that the lucky number's to be drawn. In the Lottery Man Contest you know. Just listen to this: 'At 8 P. M. to-day a member of the committee appointed to oversee the competition will draw one number from the ten-by-ten box in which the coupon vouchers are kept. The result will be at once announced.' How's that? Oh, if I just had a pull with that committee! Maybe I wouldn't use it!"

Lizzie sniffed in proud contempt at such abaseness, but designed to make no reply.

"And see here again," prattled the irresponsible Hedwig, still scanning the paper, "see what it says: 'No less than 300,000 coupons have been sent to the Examiner office in this most remarkable competition. That means a fortune of $300,000. According to the terms of the contest should the winner refuse to marry Mr Wright, he and she will each receive one-half of this sum. Should he be so ungallant as to refuse to lead her to the altar' (don't them newspapers use grand language, Lizzie?) 'the entire $300'000 will revert to her.'"

"I don't see why you read that sort of thing to me,' 'said Lizzie, in disapproval. "Like Miss Helene, I consider it most vulgar."

"Miss Helene, indeed!" scoffed Hedwig. "Why should she be bothering her pretty head with it? Hasn't she all the money that's fit to coin? Does she ever have to worry over where the next meal's coming from? Not she. But if she was poor and had to work all day for the privilege of keeping alive, it's a different tune she'd be saying. I think that's why so many women are crazy to marry. A husband is a perpetual Human Meal Ticket. And the chance of getting a husband worth $300,000, as this Lottery Man will be, is something no poor woman should sneeze at. Us girls at the Baths have spent every cent we could get hold of for coupons. I've got more'n seventy myself. And—"

"And you would actually marry him if—if you won?" queried Lizzie as though interrogating some strange lowly creature from another world.

"Would I? Would I?" laughed Hedwig. "For $300,000 I would marry a cross-eyed, hump-backed gorilla with two game legs. And so would you. You've got men on the brain as much as any of us, Lizzie Roberts. Only you try to hide your feelings. That's foolish. It's better to speak it out than keep it rattling around in your head."

"You will please leave me out of the discussion," coldly reproved Lizzie, a faint red staining the sallow yellow of her cheeks.

"H'm'" sniffed Hedda. "For all your high and mighty airs, I've caught you reading those Examiner contest pages on the sly. Before I'd be a hypocrite—"

"I am not a hypocrite!" snorted Lizzie, in virtuous indignation. "If I've ever stooped to read such stuff it's because I happen to know the gentleman — the Lottery Man. He mixed me some punch once. And if is comes to talk of hypocrites, how about you? You call yourself 'Hedda Jansen' and say you're a Swede. But you have a brogue sometimes that—"

"That shows I came from County Galway? I did." And I'm proud of it. 'Hedda Jansen' is my professional name. My nomy ploom, as it were. For folks seems to think massages is no good unless it has a Svensk trade mark. As for being a hypocrit—"

Foxhall Peyton and Jack Wright burst into the room.

"I tell you I won't!" Jack was declaring. "—hello, we've butted into the Beauty Parlours. Good-morning, Miss Lizzie."

Giving him a look of icy disdain, Lizzie swept from the room with all the majestic dignity of a walking toothpick. Hedwig, in one corner, was staring in wide-eyed admiration at the famous Lottery Man. Without noting her presence there, Jack turned again on Peyton with the exclamation:

"Don't look so confoundedly calm and smug! Have a little sympathy for me, can't you? I haven't slept a wink all night. I've cornered the Anxiety and Suspense market. Just think! Three hundred thousand dollars right within my reach! And it's a hundred to one I'll have to pass it up!"

"I'm going down to the office," said Foxey, rising. "Come along."

"The office? Haven't you been there to-day? Maguire was yelling for you."

"Why ?What's up?"

"What isn't up?" growled Jack. "The contest closed at midnight. But coupons have been pouring in all day, just the same. And there's a big crowd collecting in front of the Examiner Building. Oh, laugh if you want to! But there's no jovial ha-ha in it for me! Why, I haven't been able to look at a woman on the cars or in the streets for two months without wondering if I mightn't have to marry her. Three hundred thousand possible wives? Good Lord! I make old Brigham Young look like a piker."

"Say, young man," observed Hedwig, striding forward and twisting Jack around bodily, so that he faced her. "I've got twenty chances on you!"

Jack Wright collapsed limply into the nearest chair.

"Don't look at me like that!" he yelled in alarm, as Hedwig beamed proudly down upon him. "Foxey, get me a drink!"

"Better cut out the booze to-day," warned Peyton. "You'll need a cool head."

"Then give me an anaesthetic," implored Jack. "Oh, take her away, can't you? She's grinning at me again!"

"Come to the office,' 'advised Foxey. "Maybe youll be safer there."

"Going so soon?" cooed Hedwig, fetchingly.

"So soon?" panted Jack. "Yes! Sooner! And then some!"

He was gone before she could answer. With a ponderous sigh Hedwig turned to greet Mrs. Peyton, who, with the luckless Lizzie at her heels, came in.

"Well, I'm ready,' 'announced Mrs. Peyton. "Though somehow I don't feel much like working this morning."

"No more do I, ma'am!" said Hedwig. "I've seen the Lottery Man! Saint Anthony be with me this day! Will you try the medicine ball first, ma'am?"

"Not yet. Throw it to Lizzie first. She needs the exercise."

Through the air bounded the big ball. Lizzie made a futile effort to catch it. It struck her, and with a quail of dismay she fell to the floor, grappling helplessly with the bag.

"I don't see what makes Lizzie so awkward!" said Mrs. Peyton, plaintively. "I let her do nearly all my exercising for me. And she looks so dismal too."

Lizzie meekly got to her feet, and for a few minutes the calisthenics went on without more than the usual interruption. Then Mrs. Wright was announced and Mrs. Peyton gleefully seized the excuse to end exercise for the day. As Hedwig and Lizzie withdrew, Mrs. Wright came into the room, bringing as she did, an atmosphere of sunshine with her.

"Yes'm,' replied Hedwig, leaning in the doorway, "unless I win the Lottery Man. If I win him, I'll work no more."

"That awful lottery!" cried Mrs. Wright in comic despair. "It was sweet of Helene to ask me to spend the day here. She knows how nervous I'd be when the time came to draw the number."

"No," said Mrs. Peyton, "that wasn't why she asked you. She did it because she loves to have you here. As we all do. You have such a knack of seeming young. How do you do it?"

"By not letting myself grow old, I suppose."

"I'm sure no one likes to keep young harder than I do," complained Mrs. Peyton, "and yet — for all your gray hair and the trouble you've been through — you seem younger than I do. Tell me the secret."

BABY'S SKIN TROUBLES

"My baby boy while nursing broke out with running, watery sores all over his head and behind his ears," writes Mrs. Oscar Vancott, St. Antoine, Sask. "Many salves were prescribed to no effect. The child's head became a mass of scabs and he suffered untold agony from the dreadful itching. Dr. Chase's Ointment soon made a lasting cure, and also cured an older son of eczema."

AYRSHIRE BREEDERS HAVE A SUCCESSFUL MEETING

The Ayrshire breeders of the Counties of Hastings, Prince Edward, Northumberland and Durham and Peterborough, met in Campbellford on Tuesday Feb. 7th, and organized a local club of Ayrshire breeders. The purpose of the club is in the main, to foster the interests of Ayrshires in the counties named, to encourage breeders more generally to adopt the Ayrshire cattle, to assist the breeders locally in marketing their cattle and their produce to the best advantage, and generally to promote the interest of the breeders and become better acquainted one with another. The organization, as formed, will be known as the "Menie District Ayrshire Breeders' Association." The officers and directors are:

Hon. Pres. — Mr. Wm. Stewart, Menie.

Pres.—Mr. Alex Hume, Menie.

Vice-Pres. — Mr. John McCubbin, Warkworth.

Sec.-Treas. — Mr. W. E. Truman, Crookston.

Directors — Mr. Chas. Macoun, Campbellford; Mr. Barlow Cumberland, Port Hope; Mr. H. K. Denyes, Foxboro; Mr. Geo. Stokes, Tweed; Mr. John Locke, Campbellford; Mr. Wm. Rannie, Menie; Mr. H. Curtis, Warkworth; Mr. J. O'Connor, Campbellford; Mr. F. W. Furber, Cobourg.

Note.—Three yet to be chosen.

Owing to the inclemency of the weather many were prevented from attending who intended to be present. As it was, about twenty Ayrshire men assembled in the Cheese Board room at the St. Lawrence Hotel, where they discussed the merits of Ayrshire cattle, and on receiving the feeling of those present in regard to a local organization the Association was formed.

The Ayrshire breeders present were surprised to learn that there were so many brother breeders of Ayrshires in the local counties, there being some seventy or more. In deciding upon a name for the local organization the members chose to "hitch their waggons to stars" in that they took advantage of the reputation which their two well known local fellow breeders, Messrs. Alex Hume and Wm. Stewart, of Menie, held. Thus they calculated that much would be gained by the Association from the start which otherwise would take some time and much expense to obtain.

The meeting was addressed by Mr. C. C. Nixon, editor of the Farm and Dairy, Peterborough, who emphasized the sterling qualities of the Ayrshire cow. Pointing out the main things wherein she excelled, he urged Ayrshire breeders generally to demand "pay by test" in their cheese factories and assured them that, if milk were paid for at the cheese factories according to its value and if the cost of production was taken into consideration the Ayrshire would rapidly become more in favour and take the prime position that is hers by right. The speaker urged the breeders present to have more faith in their breed, to talk it up and to tell the world at large of the splendid records and the low cost of production of the Ayrshires.

The thanks of the local Ayrshire men is due Messrs. R. S. Duncan, of Port Hope, A. D. McIntosh, of Stirling, A. P. McVannel, of Picton, and H. G. Duff, of Peterborough, the district representative of the Ontario Department of Agriculture in the local counties, and to Mr. Alex Hume and Mr. Wm. POST CARD COLUMN

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Will you allow me to make a few remarks in reply to an article in last evening's issue, signed "Peace". There is no denying the fact that the writer's intention is good in advising a remedy, whereby we may have a greater degree of peace and goodfellowship in our city. However, I cannot altogether agree with him, that our great and esteemed body of clergymen are stirrers-up of strife.

As to the press, I think his suggestion as to a remedy, a very good one. Inasmuch as we often find the stranger, who is here to-day and away to-morrow, attacking other religious beliefs and making statements that our local men would not dare to make.

His remedy for the wrongs or weakness of the clergy, that of our Industrial Commissioner finding them employment on week days, to my mind, is altogether away from the mark. I infer from his suggestion that he thinks the clergys' work is to preach a sermon or two on Sunday and then gossip and stir up strife through the week. If he will study his Bible and take it as his basic thought, he must conclude that our very worthy clergymen are a very busy people every day of the week. They take Jesus as their example and teacher, who was always about his Father's business and was busy every day of the week. Then listen to what he says to those who accept His teaching: "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature, heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils."

There is no place in the Bible where Jesus authorized the preaching of the Gospel, but what he commanded the healing of the sick, etc.. When we look around us and see the great amount of suffering, and the number of devils to be cast out, how can "Mr. Peace" think that our dear clergymen are idle gossipers. Look at our asylums, prisons, and hospitals — overflowing, crowded to the utmost, through crime, sorrow, and suffering; then say if you can, that our clergy have nothing to do.

It seems to me if the great hillside Preacher and Teacher were here in the flesh to-day, and see the state of affairs, He would mourn over it as He did over Jerusalem, saying: "O Jerusalem, often would I have gathered thee as a hen doth gather her brood, under her wings, and ye would not."

When we take the Bible and find the responsibility, the great work of the preacher of the Gospel, is it not rather uncharitable to say they are idlers. Would it not be more in keeping with the present condition of things, to use the language of the Master and say, "The harvest truly is plenteous, but the labourers are few; pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that He will send forth labourers into his harvest," Matt. 9: 37-38. We might add ,here a better class of labourers, those who obey the law and Gospel. Jesus said, "Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you," John 15:14. "I give you power to tread on serpents and scorpions and over all the power of the enemy," Luke 10:19 "And these signs shall follow that believe; they shall cast out devils; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover," etc., Mark 16: 17-18.

In conclusion I sincerely hope our lover of peace will see the great burden of work that is already laid upon worthy clergymen, and not insist on anything more till they accomplish what has been laid out for them by their Master. "To obey God is more than all burnt offerings or sacrifices," long prayers, sermons, or work of Industrial Commission.

Thanking you for valuable space.

CHARITY.

BILL GOES TO A COMMITTEE

Examiner Special:

WASHINGTON, FEB. 15.—The reciprocity bill with Canada, passed by the House yesterday, was referred this morning to the Committee on Finance with the president's message and all other papers dealing with it.

"THE OLD HOMESTEAD"

The perennial drawing power of "The Old Homestead" is indisputable and its long successes and continuous popularity are due in no inconsiderable measure to the fact that it is a perfect transcript of nature, holding the mirror up to nature as do few other plays of modern times. It was accounted a good play twenty years ago; as far back as 1886, when it had its initial performance at the Boston Theatre and made the most telling success ever scored by a new production in Boston. Year after year since then it has repeated that success, and it has even improved with age. Little melodramatic touches and effects have been eliminated until now there is more natural wit and humour in the dialogue and more genuine touches of pathos and sentiment than ever before. It is old, yet ever new, and it is absolutely true to the New England country life which it represents. In Joshua Whitcomb, the central figure of that circle of familiar rustic types, we have to welcome a perfect representative of the best and broadest type of humanity, a prosperous, warm-hearted, peace-loving, God-fearing Yankee farmer. And associated with him we shall find, as of old, those other delightful characters, Cy. Prime, Seth Perkins, Happy Jack, Aunt Matilda, Eb. Ganzey and Rickety Ann. "The Old Homestead" comes to the Grand next Saturday, Feb. 18, for matinee and evening.

FIREMEN'S SALARIES

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—The Council of 1911 has evidently started in to economize, and the Fire, Water and Light Committee, in refusing to grant a small increase in salary to the firemen, showed a disposition to economize in foresight and wisdom, as well as in other things. They saved the city $365 a year. On the other hand the efficiency of the brigade is lessened by their action. How in the world the aldermen can expect to get good men to work for them twenty-four hours a day for $1.37 is something that the average man cannot see. Men go into the brigade when they can not get anything else to do, and as soon as something crops up in the way of a better job it is good-bye to the fire-hall. And no one can blame the men. They are the worst paid workmen in the city, while their hours are the longest. And they only asked for 10 cents a day more. What was the Committee thinking about? Economy is all right in its place, but there is such a thing as penny wise and pound foolish, and the Fire, Water and Light Committee admirably illustrate that adage.

Yours,

"COMMON-SENSE."

"WHIPPED THE LEOPARD."

But It Took a Troop of Baboons to Kill the Big Cat.

A vivid pen picture of a fight between a leopard and a troop of baboons is given in a German paper by P. Ritter, a sportsman and explorer in German West Africa. Leopards have a particular liking for baboon flesh, which is often used as bait to trap them.

"One afternoon," the hunter relates, "I was resting on the shady side of a big rock which formed the bank of a small stream. On the opposite side a troop of baboons came down chattering toward the water, a large male going cautiously in front, glancing and scenting around for danger. I remained immobile.

"A deep growl assured the herd that all was well, and down the steep slope they came, last of all a female with two young, which the mother tenderly helped over the rough places. Suddenly a big leopard shot out from behind a boulder and with one blow of his paw grabbed one of the young.

"The mother, with a roar of fury, threw herself upon the big cat. The others halted and with one accord clambered back to her assistance. The leopard had just settled the female and was about to make off with his prey when he found himself surrounded by the whole horde, which closed in upon him.

"He gave as good as he got, and two big baboons rolled down the slope apparently done for, but numbers told, and he was literally torn to pieces. It was a horribly fascinating sight, and I never regretted more having no camera with me than I did then."

THEY DIDN'T FIGHT.

It Was Only a Little Friendly Discussion That Excited Them.

Two Spaniards were conversing earnestly, then excitedly, at last angrily. The young American woman who passed them looked with frightened eyes toward her Spanish guide.

"What are they talking about, Senor Jose?" she asked timidly. "Do you think they will fight—or maybe kill?"

"Ah, no, Senorita Maria," replied Jose, smiling and showing his pretty teeth. "One man—that one, you see, senorita, with the long mustachios—he is saying, 'Me, I prefer much the celuire button which is steel,' and the other one—look, senorita—he is running his fingers through his hair now and his sombrero has a gold cord—he is saying, 'Ah, no, senor, the button which is of gold—si, senor, that is the button for me.'

"But as for myself, senorita, the bone solitaire button—that I prefer above all the others.

"Do I not speak with good sense, senorita? Listen. If the button is of steel it will cut, if it is of gold one cannot afford to lose it, but if it is of bone it does not cut, and if it goes what matter? I have a dozen at home in my little top drawer."

"You speak with great good sense, Don Jose, but tell me—were the men really angry?"

"Oh, not at all, senorita. It is only our southern way of being interested in what we discuss. If it had been two Germans, senorita, or maybe two Englishman, you would never have noticed them."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Then They Talked in English.

A couple of Cleveland business men visited Mexico. In Mexico City their train was switched from one station to another. One of the Clevelanders went to the first station to make inquiries. Approaching a pair of dark visaged employees, he cudgeled his memory for the proper words from the phrase book.

"Donde esta?" he hesitatingly asked and paused.

The two dark visaged persons listened attentively.

"Gracias," stammered the Cleveland man. "Donde estan?"

Then one of the men looked at the other.

And after that it was easy.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

NATURE'S PAINT BRUSH.

Colors, Shades and Tints That Cannot Be Reproduced by Man.

Nature paints in the most striking colors and shades and tints with a delicacy never achieved by the brush in the hands of the artist. The highest ambition of the manufacturer of paints is to produce colors which look like nature's. The have never succeeded. Grass has a green of its own. So has the leaf and so has the distant ocean. None of these has ever been reproduced and put in cans with a price label on them.

Winter apples now repose on the shelves of the paint chemists. Never awaits the man who can combine colors to produce the tints of red of the Baldwin and Northern Spy. They come pretty near it, that is all. The same is true of the colors with which October first touches the maple leaf.

If all the paint grinding works in the world were multiplied ten thousand times they couldn't turn out pigment enough in a year to do what nature does in a change from season to season.

Nature's brush is busy everywhere all the time. In the life of a leaf it applies the brush day by day, following with its tints from budding time until it flutters from the branch. It touches the valleys and the hills, the growing grains, the flowering plants. Never is it idle.—New York World.

Insult and Injury.

We are told that the invention of scissors dates back to the fourteenth century.

Just think of it! Delilah must have cut Samson's hair with a knife.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Superstitious Hungarians.

In many country districts in Hungary superstition is still rife. One of the latest evidences of this comes from Grosswardein. In the communities of Vaskoh and Barcad severe earthquake shocks were experienced, and in the former place the church bells were started ringing. A "witch" living in the neighborhood persuaded the peasants that the devil was hungry and was shaking the earth in his anger. Thereupon they collected a number of calves and goats and drove them into a cave where the devil was supposed to be dwelling. After this they set fire to the forest in two places to drive out the devil living there.

His Strong Point.

"This is a pretty bad report card," said the father of the young hopeful as he looked over the teacher's figures. "You seem to be 'poor' in pretty much everything."

"That's 'cause teacher only puts down th' studies I ain't good in. I ought to have 'excellent' in one thing."

"And what's that?" hopefully inquired the father.

"Fightin'. I can lick any boy in th' class!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Shop.

"Take your arm away, sir!" sharply exclaimed the indignant maiden.

"So," said the young editor musingly, "an unexpected accident, we regret to say, prevents our going to press."—Chicago Tribune.

Judged It by Himself.

DAUGHTER OF GENERAL MANAGER OF THE C.G.E. IS ACCIDENTALLY SHOT AND KILLED

Miss Hazel Nicholls, Victim of a Terrible Fatality at Her Own Home in Toronto Last Night—Discharged a Revolver

AND DIED INSTANTLY

Special Wire to the Examiner.

TORONTO, FEB. 16.—Miss Hazel Nicholls, the twenty-three year old daughter of Mr. Frederic Nicholls, the manager of the Canadian General Electric Company, is dead, as the result of an accidental discharge of a revolver last night. She was engaged in taking some wearing apparel out of the bureau drawer in her room after returning from the attic, and in so doing discharged a small loaded revolver she kept in her drawer, the bullet entering her head, and she died instantly.

The news of the tragic death of Miss Nicholls will be received with deep regret in Peterborough. Her father, Mr. Frederick Nicholls, by reason of his position at the head of Peterborough's biggest industry, is very well known here and was in the city as late as Tuesday, when he met the Board of Works in regard to the erection of an addition to the company's plant.

TEMPERANCE DEPUTATION HAD COOL RECEPTION

Hon Mr. Hanna Says He is More Satisfied With the Three-Fifths Clause Than Ever, While Premier Gives as His Opinion That Provincial Prohibition is Impossible.

Special Wire to the Examiner.

TORONTO, FEB. 16. — Provincial prohibition is absolutely impossible," Sir James Whitney told the big delegation of the Dominion Alliance, which stormed the Parliament Buildings this morning and demanded this or in alternative the abolition of the three-fifth clause and of the bar. Regarding the later demands, Hon. Mr. Hanna, the Provincial Secretary, told the deputation that he was more satisfied with the working of the three fifth clause than ever and thought the people were. The Alliance was plainly disappointed with the reception they got. Mayor Lee, of Hamilton, Rev. Dr. McTavish of Kingston, and President Jos. Gibson of Ingersoll, were spokesmen.

Mr. Hanna replied without delay. He noted, he said, that the government had been charged with treachery by Secretary Ben Spence of the Alliance. If there was any one in the deputation who endorsed that view he wished them not to come again. They would get nothing from this government. In his opinion, the temperance situation in Ontario was better than in any other province or state on the continent. No changes of law were needed at present. Premier Whitney said if the government made a prohibition in Ontario, train load after train load and ship load after ship load of liquor would be sent in and distributed without government control. Every hour of the day and every day of the week would develop an intolerable situation. The three-fifths clause had ensured permanency and there was nothing to be gained by dropping it. The rights of private property had to be protected too.

TORONTO HAS A BAD FAMINE IN WATER

Special Wire to The Examiner.

TORONTO, FEB. 16.—The tooting of tin horns and the clatter of sauce pans ladling out drinking water to citizens were the unusual sounds heard in some of Toronto streets this morning. The residential districts have a water famine owing to the ice clogging pipes. There are 108 sleighs out on free water delivery, each carrying two and a half tons or 500 gallons of water. Each driver is armed with a tin horn which he toots vigorously as he drives along, to warn the householders of his approach.

WANTS UNITED STATES TO ANNEX CANADA

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, FEB. 16.—Something startling from a Canadian viewpoint was the resolution introduced by Republican representative Bennett, of New York this afternoon as follows: "That the president be requested to commence and continue negotiations with the British government to secure annexation of the Dominion of Canada and the United States." Bennett said he introduced this on his own initiative.

A. E. KENNEDY, OF LAKEFIELD A DOMINION FISHERY OVERSEER

OTTAWA, FEB. 15. — In order to meet the laxity in the present enforcement of the fisheries regulations in Ontario, under the Provincial overseers, and to prevent the rapid depletion of fisheries of the Province through inadequate conservation under the present system, whereby since 1898 the Province has assumed the charge of the enforcement of regulations, the Federal government has found it necessary to assume control of the enforcement of its own regulations. For this purpose there has been a re-organization of the districts in which the three present Federal inspectors operate, and to assist them and to devote their whole time to the work of enforcing the regulations during the fisheries season, thirty-seven Federal overseers have been appointed at salaries beginning at $500 per annum, with $50 increase each year until the maximum of $700 is reached.

Mr. A. E. Kennedy, of Lakefield is appointed as overseer of Peterborough County.

BELMONT CLUB DANCE WAS A GREAT SUCCESS

The third annual dance of the Belmont Club held last evening in the Conservatory of Music, was quite the most successful in the history of the Club, and one of the most delightful social events of the season. About two hundred and fifty people were present. The hall was most artistically decorated for the occasion by Messrs. J. J. Turner and Sons, the Belmont colours and crest being prominent in the decorations. The music was supplied by Fralick's orchestra of Toronto, and the refreshments by Coleman Bros. The patronesses were Mrs. J. R. Stratton, Mrs. E. V. Frederick, Mrs. T. A. S. Hay, Mrs. C. E. Barnett, Mrs. R. R. Hall, Mr. W. T. Belleghem was the honourary secretary and the stewards were Messrs. Social Evening Under Auspices Of St. Peter's T. A. S. Pleasure Club

One of the most successful social evenings ever held by the Pleasure Club of St. Peter's T.A.S. brought together a very large assemblage at St. Alphonsus Lyceum last night and the occasion was most enjoyable. The early part of the evening was taken up with progressive euchre, the contest proving most interesting. The gentleman's prize was captured by Mr. Jack Deannard, while Miss Lizzie Grady won the ladies' prize. A dainty supper was served, after which the evening was wound up by a most delightful dance.

ALL FOR THE PARTY.

Some Conservative newspapers are taking a good deal of consolation out of the fact they assert that the government supporters will not all support the tariff agreement. It is natural that they should be pleased with the fact that here are possibly some breaks in he Liberal ranks; and it is also natural that upon a question where there is room for difference of opinion that the right of forming independent judgment should be exercised. It is only what is to be expected of men who think for themselves, and will not be content, or asked, to follow a leader like unreasoning sheep. The Toronto News in discussing the probability of independent Liberal attitude on the tariff agreement says:

"Whatever happens on the government side it is becoming apparent that the Conservatives will present an united front. Some of the Westerners at the outset were in favour of reciprocity, but in the final analysis, they will be with the party. The patriotic and national aspect of the situation appeals more strongly to them than any possible resultant gain to their constituents."

This is quite natural too. It is only the logical outcome of parizanship carried to its extremest conclusion. While the negotiations leading to the agreement were under consideration, the Conservatives condemned in advance. They thus showed a disposition to prejudge the matter and to refuse to consider the subject on its merits. And when the agreement came before Parliament, and there was exhibited an inclination on the part of some members of the Opposition, to treat it on its merits, to think for themselves, the party lash was brought down hard and the Opposition herded together against the agreement. There is something natural, too, in the News speaking of the "national" aspect of the situation appealing to the Conservative members; but the right word was not employed, it should have been "Nationalist" aspect Lacking the courage to strike out a line of policy for themselves, they took refuge under the wing of the "Nationalist" faction and voted solidly for a motion, presented by Mr. Monk, under the leadership and dictation of Mr. Bourassa. Thus we have the spectacle, the second time repeated, of the Opposition led by Mr. Borden, in default of a desperate policy of its own, constituting itself a tail to the "Nationalist" kite. The interests of the country are thus subdued in the interests of the party. It will be difficult for a great party to commend itself to public approval unless it is able and willing to present a policy somewhat broader than mere attainment of office. Whatever the merits or demerits of the trade agreement it should be judged accordingly—not by the narrow gauge of partizanship.

"A NEW DANGER."

(London Adertiser.)

Under this heading the Montreal Gazette solemnly warns the country against a greater economic peril than reciprocity with the United States. It forsees more concessions to the mother country' Mr. Fielding has said that the present trade agreement with Washington will lead to a further tariff revision 'in which the Canadian Government will be free to fix the British preferential tariff at any rates that may be deemed proper.' These words are not a pledge to act on the demand of the western grain growers by increasing the British preference to 50 per cent., but the Gazette fears they do indicate that Mr. Fielding is thinking about it. Is Mr. Fielding not a free trader, and would his inclination for a free traders' tariff not be gratified by again lowering the tariff on British goods? The Gazette goes on to mourn the "disastrous" effects of the present British preference on the woolen trade, and shudders over the ruin of other textile trades and metal trades if any more favours are to be given British manufacturers.

The Gazette is to be thanked for stripping the cloak of hypocrisy from the loyalty agitation against reciprocity. The woolen trio of the-----ers would shout more desperately against an extension of the British preference than against the bargain with the United States, which threatens very few Canadian producers with an increase of competition, while offering wider markets to the basic industry of the country. The affected concern for the unity of the Empire is the most arrant humbug. Pe rhaps Mr. Fielding will complete the Gazette's exposure by making a cut in the duties on British goods. It would be entertaining to hear the professional patriots change their tune.

EXPTRIMENTS WITH PEAT.

(Ottawa Free Press)

The experience of people who bought peat from the department of mines for domestic purposes in this city amply justifies the experiments which Dr. Hansel and his corps of peat experts are making with this native fuel in the central provinces of Canada.

From the product of the experimental field plant at Alfred, six hundred tons were shipped to Ottawa and sold to householders. If the Mines department had several times six hundred tons available here now, it is safe to say it would be quickly snapped up.

The preparation of peat for market has been a matter of experimentation in Canada for years. The object is to remove the moisture and yet leave the product in shape so that it can be handled and shipped. Processes by which the peat is compressed into briquettes have been only partially successful. In Ireland a process of electrical treatment proved a failure. The cost of baking the moisture out of the peat has been proven too expensive to be commercial.

Dr. Huanel's process is the "air-drying" system. The peat is spread out on the ground, marked off into bricks, and the sun absorbs the moisture. It is in practical use in Russia and other European countires.

The product of the Alfred marsh is found to be excellent for the fireplace It has given good service for cooking and with proper arrangement of drafts has proven satisfactory as a furnace fuel.

But the use of peat is not by any means confined to domestic purposes. At $7.50 per h.p. per year Dr. Haanel estimates it will produce power in a gas-producer plant. This looks like stiff competition with water power at lowest rates.

The object of the Government plant is merely experimental. Its purpose is to point the way to commercial operation by private concerns of the huge peat bogs of Ontario and Quebec. The demonstration this year seems to be complete. Peat as a domestic fuel, at least, has been a success in Ottawa.

One of the difficulties in the way of commercial operation of bogs is the high freight rates on peat. The charges from the Alfred plant to Ottawa are said to be 2 1-2c a ton per mile. The Intercolonial Railway hauls Nova Scotia coal for about 1-2c per ton. To make the peat industry a complete success better freight rates are necessary.

COMMISSION GOVERNMENT AND ITS POPULARITY.

(Halifax Chronicle)

The commission form of municipal government seems to be flourishing where least expected. No one would think, for instance, of looking to conservative New England for guidance in the reformig of outworn systems of civic administration, and yet, in New England the Commission form of Government is spreading like wild fire Bostom has blossomed forth under a new charter, Lynn has followed suit and Salem and Springfield are seriously debating the matter.

The Commission form of Civic Government is making good, in fact, throughout the length and breadth of the North American continent. The fact that New England has taken it up would seem to be proof positive of its efficiency in the disposal of the more common evils incidental to the old-fashioned aldermanic system. In view of the growing demand among Haligonians for something better in the administration line, the following opinions from competent authorities in touch with the Commission plan should prove of interest.

I n regard to the experiment in Leavenworth, Kan., Congressman D. R. Anthony says:

"Leavenworth's experiment with the Commission form of Government has been eminently satisfactory. Here it was almos otsismiehpi Here it was almost impossible to secure the better class of business men to stand for election to city offices under the old system. Since we have adopted the Commission form of Government every candidate for Mayor and Commissioner is chosen from among the business men of the city. Politics and party lines have been largely eliminated."

Thomas Finty, Jr., one of the most prominent citizens of Dallas has this to say about the Commission experiment in the growing Texas city:

"My observations convince me that Commission Government has given satisfaction to the great body of citizens in every city which has adopted it. In Dallas the adoption of Commission Government was brought about through the argument that the old form made it practically impossible for even good men to do well. Most of the members of the Government under the old plan were champions of the Commission form.

"It is conceivable that municipal Government may be as bad under the Commission plan as under the old aldermenic plan, or even worse, if the people shall go to sleep at the switch. But if they are on the alert, as I am happy to say is the case in cities which have adopted the new plan, they can secure better Government under it than under any other plan yet devised."

The opinion of W. B. Gonzales of the State regarding what has been done in Columbia, the capital of South Carolina, under the form of municipal rule, is as follows:

"Columbia has a very good income —about $540,000 a year—but exceedingly little had been done in the way of permanent improvements and the city always had a considerable floating debt. When the Commission Government came in there was a floating debt of about $85,000. This has been reduced ot $2,5000 and the Mayor hopes it will be wiped out within the next ninety days."

United Kingdom's Prosperity Does Not Need Help Of Fiscal Nostrums

(Manitoba Free Press.)

At the annual meetings of the leading banks of the United Kingdom economic conditions are discussed without reference to politicis. From the addresses of practical bankers at these meetings an accurate, impartial view is obtained of conditions, as they now are and as they have been during the course of the year an the extent to which they have influenced the fortunes of the institutions so closely allied to the nation's commercial well-being. Depression or decadence of a nation's material welfare are first felt by the banks, and no institutions are more sensitive to or reflect more accurately its changing symptoms. This is as true of Canadian as of United Kingdom banks.

A perusal of the statements of Britain's most eminent bankers must be gratifying to citizens of the Empire. In them there is a singular unanimity of opinion that the old land's commercial vitality was never healthier, and at no time was the horizon of her industrial future freer from threatening clouds. At the annual meeting of the shareholders of the National Provincial Bank of England, held on January 26th, Mr. Maurice C. Fitzgerald, who presided, stated that "When they bore in mind the various adverse influences — the death of the Sovereign, the postponement of the Budget, and the two General Elections — it was surely a wonderful tribute to the vitality of the country's commerce and the soundness of its conditions that the year had been throughout one of continuously expanding trade. The total turnover for the year amounted to £1,212,806,088, and on the average goods to the value of £3,500,000 had entered or left our ports every day of the year, of which nearly £2,000,000 were imports. These were indeed amazing figures, and far ahead of any previous totals in this or any other country. If our overseas commerce had prospered the home trades had also, on the whole, been doing well—in some quarters extremely well. Whether they looked to the revenue returns, the railway receipts, the Bankers' Clearing House totals, on the other hand, or the decrease in pauperism, unemployment, and bankruptcies on the other, all alike pointed to a great industrial revival, which, as far as they could see now, had not yet by any means exhausted its energy. This industrial activity had naturally brought with it an increasing demand for credit and banking accommodation, and their institution might claim to have secured their fair share of the resulting business."

Lord Goschen frankly admitted the prevalence of a good trade when presiding over the shareholders' meeting in connection with London County and Westminster Bank, and in the course of his address said that the bank's net profits for the year "amounted to £883,441, as compared with £662,894 for the previous year, which was a year in which the figures were partly those of the old bank and partly of the amalgamated undertaking. With the balance brought forward they had available £1,031,229, as compared with £797,789 in the previous year. They declared the same dividend of 20 per cent., which took £700,000; as he had said, they took £125,000 to write down investments below their market value, and they put £50,000 to premises account, which now stood at £1,574,000. That left them with a 'carry forward' of £156,000, as compared with £147,000 last year."

Such extremely healthy conditions do not lend weight to the contentions that the United Kingdom need the restorative prescribed by some Canadian politicians, or that the commercial policy of the British Government needs adjustment to accommodate their policies.

BE WARNED BY HEADACHE

It Tells of Serious Derangements of the Liver and Kidneys

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

You can stop a headache with powerful drugs. But it is not generally wise to do so.

A headache almost always warns you of derangements of the digestive system, the liver, kidneys or bowels.

Awaken the liver to healthful action by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and you not only free yourself of headache, but remove the cause which will soon lead to more dangerous results than headache.

Invigorate the action of the kidneys by this treatment and you take away the dangers of Bright's disease as well as free yourself of headache.

Pains are the result of poison in the system and whether you have headache, backache or aching limbs, you can be almost sure of relief and cure when you cleanse and regulate the vital organs by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

They are wonderfully prompt, as well as definite and thorough in action. You can depend upon them, no matter how long-standing or complicated your case, so long as the cause is the sluggish, torpid condition of the liver and kidneys.

If you don't feel like risking 25 cents for a box, write for a free sample. A trial will convince you of their merits. One pill a dose; 25 cents a box; all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

DUFF'S MILK BILL.

It Comprises Most of the Previous Legislation.

Toronto, Feb. 16.—Hon. J. S. Duff, Minister of Agriculture, yesterday announced the particulars of his pure milk bill.

The bill follows the recommendations made by the Milk Commission appointed by the Government. It is entitled, "An act respecting the production and sale of milk for human consumption." It seeks to embody all legislation on this subject, hence many of its clauses are not new.

The bill gives municipalities complete control over their milk supply. And sets general standards for the province.

The principle followed is that the municipality in which the milk is to be consumed should have complete control in the matter of the production, care and sale. Municipalities are given power to pass bylaws making regulations as to the care of cows, the sanitary condition of the places where cows are kept, the water supplied to cows, the care of utensils used in handling milk, the proper storage and transportation of milk, the making of bacteriological tests as a guide to the wholesomeness of milk, and such other matters as may be considered necessary. These regulations are to be approved by the Minister of Agriculture.

Councils are also authorised to fix standards for butter fat and total solids, but it is provided that "no milk shall be sold for human consumption which contains less than 12 per cent. of solids, of which 3 per cent. shall be butter fat." In addition to this, stringent provisions are made to prevent adulteration.

Councils are empowered to appoint inspectors. As to tuberculosis, it is provided that no milk shall be sold from any cow which, upon physical examination by a certified veterinarian, shall be declared to be suffering from tuberculosis. It is provided that no cans or other utensils used in the distribution of milk shall be used for any other purposes, and all must be thoroughly cleansed.

For Irish Parliament.

London, Feb 16.—The Nationalist members of the House of Commons came across the Irish Channel in force yesterday for the preliminary skirmish on the home rule question, which arose as the result of an amendment to the address in reply to the speech from the throne, moved in the Lower House by Ian Z. Malcolm, Conservative member for Croydon.

Complaining that the obscurity of the Ministerial remarks on the subject of home rule, "which avowedly was one of the main reasons for altering the existing constitution," hampered an effective deliberation on the proposed changes of relations between the two Houses of Parliament, Mr Malcolm asked on what terms peace had been patched up between the Liberals and Nationalists.

He claimed that the land purchase act, permitting Irish tenants to acquire property, had knocked the bottom out of the demand for home rule and protested against an attempt to smuggle home rule through by a single chamber government.

Casgrain, Not Langelier.

Montreal, Feb. 16.—The report sent out from this city Tuesday night that Sir Francois Langelier would succeed Sir Alphonse Pelletier as Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec is without foundation.

Senator Casgrain is in line for the appointment, and as he has previously had the offer of this post, it is considered as practically certain that he will succeed Sir Alphonse Pelletier. The latter's resignation, however, has not yet been received by Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

"THE INNOCENT MURDERERS"

By Wm. Johnston and Paul West

"My, my!" exclaimed Rice. "It is lucky we came. By-to-morrow morning it would even show in the daylight."

Swiftly they went to work, pulling the boards away and scooping the sawdust from the bundle. Then they dragged it out upon the floor and stripped it of the blue print paper. They turned their eyes away as they threw the blankets over it, and, though this covering shut in the dreadful light more effectually than the paper had done at its best, they placed the burden in the wheel-barrow without once looking at it. Over it they laid more blankets. Then Rice said:

"Now, follow me."

Snyder would have rebelled against once more acting in the capacity of a horse, but he felt the mastery of Fischer and Rice and meekly bent to his task. Across the edge of the ice-pond they went, across a ploughed field and down a steep hill through some woods, the wheelbarrow bumping against hummocks and sinking hub deep into furrows. Fischer now and then lent a hand in helping the perspiring Snyder to extricate the vehicle, but Rice always walked ahead.

When the road was reached, the pool somewhat beyond the town where horses could and were always tied to one side. On the other there was a stone wall and behind this a thick hedge of hawthorn trees. Snyder shuddered at the fearsomeness of these felt upon his senses. He knew the event [illegible] must be disposed of. Fischer volunteered to attend to that duty.

"You go home to your wives," he said. "I'll put this back."

So they left him at the foot of the hill that led up to the college grounds by way of the ice-pond, and went to their homes. Fischer made the rest of the journey alone.

Mrs. Snyder had sat up for her husband.

"Well," she asked when he came in, "did the astronomical phenomena manifest themselves?"

"Slightly, my dear, slightly."

"Do you think to-morrow night will be more favourable for them?"

"I cannot tell, my dear, I cannot tell!" said Snyder. Sincerely he hoped that it would not be.

But, as we know, the next night was notable for the strangeness of phenomena! Phenomena that exhibited themselves in the heavens above the crest of Cemetery Hill. And among those who witnessed them from afar the unhappy trio were by all means the most interested.

"My dear," asked Mrs. Snyder, when, after-supper, her attention was called to the strange glare in the sky, "My dear, do you suppose that this is the phenomenon you were looking for last night?"

"I wouldn't care to say so, decisively," replied the professor, his words coming with a great effort. "I cannot tell. I—I think I will go and consult with Professors Rice and Fischer!"

He stumbled from the house and went in search of his fellow conspirators. He found Rice standing in the street, looking breathlessly out toward the cemetery.

"Rice, my God!" cried Snyder, falling against the other.

"Horrible! Horrible!" said Rice. "Snyder, I fear that we have made a terrible mistake! We have not acted like reasoning men. We have—great heavens! What have we done? What impelled us to act in that way?

Fischer found them there. His swarthy face was drawn and tense with the fear within him.

"Vell?" he asked, as he approached. Then, as there was no answer, again "Vell?"

"I don't know," muttered Rice.

Their agony was augmented by the appearance of acquaintances, who appealed to them for explanations of the unusual glow. They heard with shivers of terror the occasional suggestions that "Somebody ought to go over and see what is!" They feared,—though they had little reason to—that someone would actually make the journey. Not until very late did they go home, and many times during the night they rose from their beds and went to the window to see if the light still shone. It did. Nothing but the dawn dispelled it. With the rising of the sun, their hopes temporarily rose, and when they met at the college they were in a better state of mind to consider their predicament, which, they all agreed, was now desperate.

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN.

The Dean's Telegram.

"Gentlemen," said Rice, at the first moment the trio had an opportunity of conferring, "I have given the matter careful consideration since we last met. I have concluded—and I am certain that you will agree with me—that affairs have reached a crisis. Am I right?"

"In some way or other I have been forced, thus far, into the leadership in all things connected with this unfortunate affair. I now wish to take a back seat in the deliberations. But not on account of a desire to shirk any responsibilities, I assure you; simply because I do not think that my judgment is good, and because I believe that if you expect to find a way out of our troubles, you must let some other head govern. However, before I step down, let me say this: We have now come to a point where further beating about the bush is impossible. Either to-night the body will be discovered, or we must dispose of it so that no traces of it can be found."

Snyder shifted uneasily in his seat.

"There is but one other course open to us," Rice went on. Snyder looked hopeful. Could it be that Rice had solved the problem? Was there a ray of sunshine somewhere? The mathematician's next words dashed his hopes to the ground. "We can appear before the proper authorities, confess our complicity in the er—crime, and let the law take its course."

Fischer grunted. Snyder shrunk. He looked at Rice with a horror-stricken countenance.

"The law?" he repeated.

"The law," said Rice, coolly. "I am not versed in legal matters, but I am morally certain that the things which we have done have placed us within the pale of the law. I am morally certain that we are guilty of crimes sufficient to place us in the penitentiary."

"Or de madhouse!" said Fischer.

"Or the madhouse," agreed Rice. "I myself incline to hte belief that a court, hearing our story, would immediately decide that we were insane. I have no doubt that we have been, since—since the beginning of the unfortunate affair. I—"

"Hold on," said Fischer, impatiently. "Vat if ve are insane or criminals? Ve don't vish to be punished as either. I swear I don't, if I can help it!"

Rice smiled.

"Dr. Fischer," said he, "I judge that you have a suggestion to make. In that case I am perfectly willing to let you take the leadership." He sat down with an air of resignation, and proceded to listen to the German, who was not loath to speak.

"Vell," said Fischer, "so be it. You say the body vill surely be found by to-night. It vill, if der glow does not subside. And I don't think it vill. So! Vat is to be done? Dis!" He leaned forward in his chair, his sharp, blue eyes fixed on Rice and Snyder. He held one hand a few inches above the desk at his side. At the conclusion of each word in his next statement he brought his hand down with a smart blow on the desk, making the intervals dramatic pauses. What he said was this:

BY RIDA JOHNSON-YOUNG

"Why, there's no secret" about it. I keep interested in other people and try not to think about myself. That's all. I think we get from people just what we give them. If we give out good humour and affection, we get it back from others. If we give out peevishness and suspicion and selfishness, it's only natural we should get them back—with interest. And if we are on the lookout for anything we are pretty apt to get it. So why should not one be always on the lookout for love and happiness and friendship? It's just as easy as watching for hate or snubs. But I'm preaching and—"

"No, no. It interests me. Go on, please."

"I discovered something to-day," said Mrs. Wright, confidential, as she turned to a more personal theme. "We aren't the only ones who have been buying up coupons in Helene's name."

"Oh, Foxey has a big stack of them, too. And—"

"I don't mean Foxey; I mean Jack. I found a whole pile of them in his top chiffonier drawer yesterday. He never cared for any other girl. And for two months he has been doing extra work to make money for buying coupons."

"Helene would be awfully angry with us all if she knew."

"Does she seem excited over the drawing of the numbers to-day?"

"No. Oh, if she should win and—if she should refuse to marry Jack then!"

"No one could refuse my boy!" declared Mrs. Wright, proudly. "He—"

"Good-morning, Mrs. Wright!" came Helene's voice from the door. "It was dear of you to come to us to-day."

She came in, gaily to greet her guest. Yet a close observer might have noted weariness and pathos behind the bright smile. The girl had aged during the past few weeks.

"I couldn't have stayed at home," said Mrs. Wright. "I was so excited. And Jack didn't sleep any last night."

"He was looking forward, I suppose," said Helene, coldly, "to meeting the future Mrs. Jack?"

"Oh," protested Mrs. Wright. "I'm sure—pretty sure—he'll never marry any strange woman just because she happens to win him in a lottery, no matter how big a fortune there might be in it."

"You see," explained Mrs. Peyton, for Helene's benefit, "Jack went into this impulsively, to pay Foxey $1,000 he owed him. He is the soul of honour. So of course, he couldn't back out. Foxey is as much to blame as Jack."

"Neither of them seems to think there is any blame in it," observed Helene. "They both are delighted over the newspaper sensation the whole thing has created."

"It was certainly clever and original," mused Mrs. Wright. "No one but Jack would have had the brains to think it up. Can't you see, Helene, how brilliant—"

She broke off in alarm. All three women sprang up excitedly. There was a wild clamour of voices below stairs. Then the sound of swift running feet on the stairs. The door burst open and a truly horrible figure reeled into the room.

CHAPTER VII.

"Rough Work."

Into the room staggered a man. His derby hat was smashed to flinders and its torn brim was jammed down over his eyes. His coat was in ribbons, his gay waistcoat a tattered wreck.

He swayed dizzily and panted from sheer exhaustion as he tumbled into a chair. Even Mrs. Wright looked at him a second time before she recognized him. But Helene, with the eyes of love, had known him at a glance.

"Jack Wright!" she gasped incredulously.

"Oh, my boy! My boy!" cried Mrs. Wright, in pain, rushing to her son's side and kneeling in front of him. "Are you hurt? Where? Tell me!"

"Where?" echoed Jack, hoarsely, "Everywhere. And I'm not hurt. I'm slaughtered. Butchered to make an Examiner holiday. I—"

"But where are you injured?" pleaded his mother. "Oh, isn't there anything I can do for you, dear lad?"

"Yes. Send me to a hospital! Don't worry, mother, I'm not injured anywhere. I'm just down and out."

"Foxey!" commanded Mrs. Peyton, "will you explain? What has happened?"

"We've been mobbed," returned Foxey, readjusting his own rumpled clothing. "Jack got most of it. Here's the tale of woe:

"Women, women, women, women, women!" groaned Jack.

"That's it," asserted Peyton. "Women! Three hundred thousand of them. The street in front of the Examiner office was chockful of women waiting for the drawing of the lucky number. When we were pushing our way through the crowd, somebody recognized Jack and set up a yell: "That's the Lottery Man;" They made one wild, horrible rush for us—"

"Oh, Jack!" exclaimed Mrs. Wright, "and—"

"And," went on Foxey, "before we could get away they—"

"Talk about the 'Weaker Sex!'" put in Jack; "you don't know anything about it until you face a mob of rabid brides-to-be! An army of souvenir hunters! They cleaned out my pockets, pinched my watch and pun as relics fought for scraps of my cloth. The old girl with sunset hair had the nerve to haul out a pair of pocket shears and clip off a lock of my hair. The rest of them hadn't any scissors, but they seemed to like the idea of hair collecting. So they were just starting in on my head with their bare fingers when—"

"When all at once," Foxey caught up the story, "some one yelled, "The lucky number is drawn!" There was a general rush for the Examiner Building. I dragged Jack, half-dead, into a taxicab. And here we are."

"Oh, it's perfectly disgusting and disgraceful!" cried Helene, finding her voice as the recital of the adventure ended.

"It wasn't my fault," grumbled Jack, "I couldn't ask them to—"

"It was your fault," she contradicted. "And you have yourself to thank for it. Any one who makes such mockery of a sacred thing like marriage must not complain if he is dragged to the level of those—creatures."

"But, Helene!" protested Mrs. Wright, fighting back a laugh, "how was Jack to know this would happen?"

"Oh, well," agreed Helene, coldly, "as all the rest of you seem to think it is a beautiful joke perhaps I'm too particular."

"It was an icy winter's day!" murmured Jack, dreamily. "And the cold, cold winds—"

"But why did the women want your coat buttons?" asked Mrs. Peyton, in bewilderment.

"Because I'm a hero," growled Jack. "Why did they kiss Hobson?"

"They are the sort of women who send flowers to criminals," sneered Helene.

"Bless you, Miss, for them kind words!" replied Jack, warmly

"I've got to get back to the office," announced Foxey, "There's all sorts of trouble down there. Good-by, Jack."

"Mrs. Peyton," said Mrs. Wright, "would you mind telling me where I can find some buttons and a needle and thread? I want to patch my boy up so he can get home."

The two older women set off on their search for sewing materials. Helene was about to follow, but Jack barred the way.

"Haven't you punished me long enough?" he demanded. "You've turned the cold shoulder on me all the time lately. Yet we got along so beautifully—at first."

"That was before I knew," she replied. "One of the first things you ever said to me was to warn me against a marriage for money. And now you are — the Lottery Man. Selling yourself for $300,000."

"I'm not selling myself," he urged, "It'll be my money—not hers."

"So you really intend to marry the winner of this horrible Lottery?"

"I'm the victim of circumstances," he evaded, sulkily.

"A 'victim!'" she scoffed, "and with $300,600!"

"You've never known what it means to want for money. To have to have it. To be broke. Just the same, I'd never have gone on in this deal if I'd met you first. And you know I wouldn't."

"I can't see what difference that would have made," she said, wilfully refusing to understand.

"Here are some buttons,' announced Mrs. Wright, coming in, "and the needle and thread. I'm afraid there aren't enough buttons though. I'm going to look for more."

She set down the sewing things and a cardboard box of buttons and bustled out.

"Here!" said Helene, with the air of a martyr. "I'll heap coals of fire on your head by sewing those buttons on. Take off your coat."

Delightfully he obeyed, seating himself at her side and watching her busy fingers at work among the buttons.

"Let me see," she said, sorting out the various hued buttons. "They're brown, aren't they?"

"No," he answered, his gaze on her flushed face. "They are blue. Blue as violets under spring skies."

"Violet blue buttons?" she cried. "Are you crazy?"

"I—I meant your eyes," he faltered.

"Silly!" she rebuked, snatching up the coat to hide her em barrassment.

"Oh, I'm sorry!" she began, bending to pick them up.

"Don't!" he cried in alarm, swooping down in a vain attempt to snatch away the coupons from her. "Please don't."

"The Lottery Man"

"Why, there's no secret" about it. I keep interested in other people and try not to think about myself. That's all. I think we get from people just what we give them. If we give out good humour and affection, we get it back from others. If we give out peevishness and suspicion and selfishness, it's only natural we should get them back—with interest. And if we are on the lookout for anything we are pretty apt to get it. So why should not one be always on the lookout for love and happiness and friendship? It's just as easy as watching for hate or snubs. But I'm preaching and—"

"No, no. It interests me. Go on, please."

"I discovered something to-day," said Mrs. Wright, confidential, as she turned to a more personal theme. "We aren't the only ones who have been buying up coupons in Helene's name."

"Oh, Foxey has a big stack of them, too. And—"

"I don't mean Foxey; I mean Jack. I found a whole pile of them in his top chiffonier drawer yesterday. He never cared for any other girl. And for two months he has been doing extra work to make money for buying coupons."

"Helene would be awfully angry with us all if she knew."

"Does she seem excited over the drawing of the numbers to-day?"

"No. Oh, if she should win and—if she should refuse to marry Jack then!"

"No one could refuse my boy!" declared Mrs. Wright, proudly. "He—"

"Good-morning, Mrs. Wright!" came Helene's voice from the door. "It was dear of you to come to us to-day."

She came in, gaily to greet her guest. Yet a close observer might have noted weariness and pathos behind the bright smile. The girl had aged during the past few weeks.

"I couldn't have stayed at home," said Mrs. Wright. "I was so excited. And Jack didn't sleep any last night."

"He was looking forward, I suppose," said Helene, coldly, "to meeting the future Mrs. Jack?"

"Oh," protested Mrs. Wright. "I'm sure—pretty sure—he'll never marry any strange woman just because she happens to win him in a lottery, no matter how big a fortune there might be in it."

"You see," explained Mrs. Peyton, for Helene's benefit, "Jack went into this impulsively, to pay Foxey $1,000 he owed him. He is the soul of honour. So of course, he couldn't back out. Foxey is as much to blame as Jack."

"Neither of them seems to think there is any blame in it," observed Helene. "They both are delighted over the newspaper sensation the whole thing has created."

"It was certainly clever and original," mused Mrs. Wright. "No one but Jack would have had the brains to think it up. Can't you see, Helene, how brilliant—"

She broke off in alarm. All three women sprang up excitedly. There was a wild clamour of voices below stairs. Then the sound of swift running feet on the stairs. The door burst open and a truly horrible figure reeled into the room.

CHAPTER VII.

"Rough Work."

Into the room staggered a man. His derby hat was smashed to flinders and its torn brim was jammed down over his eyes. His coat was in ribbons, his gay waistcoat a tattered wreck.

He swayed dizzily and panted from sheer exhaustion as he tumbled into a chair. Even Mrs. Wright looked at him a second time before she recognized him. But Helene, with the eyes of love, had known him at a glance.

"Jack Wright!" she gasped incredulously.

"Oh, my boy! My boy!" cried Mrs. Wright, in pain, rushing to her son's side and kneeling in front of him. "Are you hurt? Where? Tell me!"

"Where?" echoed Jack, hoarsely, "Everywhere. And I'm not hurt. I'm slaughtered. Butchered to make an Examiner holiday. I—"

"But where are you injured?" pleaded his mother. "Oh, isn't there anything I can do for you, dear lad?"

"Yes. Send me to a hospital! Don't worry, mother, I'm not injured anywhere. I'm just down and out."

"Foxey!" commanded Mrs. Peyton, "will you explain? What has happened?"

"We've been mobbed," returned Foxey, readjusting his own rumpled clothing. "Jack got most of it. Here's the tale of woe:

"Women, women, women, women, women!" groaned Jack.

"That's it," asserted Peyton. "Women! Three hundred thousand of them. The street in front of the Examiner office was chockful of women waiting for the drawing of the lucky number. When we were pushing our way through the crowd, somebody recognized Jack and set up a yell: "That's the Lottery Man;" They made one wild, horrible rush for us—"

"Oh, Jack!" exclaimed Mrs. Wright, "and—"

"And," went on Foxey, "before we could get away they—"

"Talk about the 'Weaker Sex!'" put in Jack; "you don't know anything about it until you face a mob of rabid brides-to-be! An army of souvenir hunters! They cleaned out my pockets, pinched my watch and pun as relics fought for scraps of my cloth. The old girl with sunset hair had the nerve to haul out a pair of pocket shears and clip off a lock of my hair. The rest of them hadn't any scissors, but they seemed to like the idea of hair collecting. So they were just starting in on my head with their bare fingers when—"

"When all at once," Foxey caught up the story, "some one yelled, "The lucky number is drawn!" There was a general rush for the Examiner Building. I dragged Jack, half-dead, into a taxicab. And here we are."

"Oh, it's perfectly disgusting and disgraceful!" cried Helene, finding her voice as the recital of the adventure ended.

"It wasn't my fault," grumbled Jack, "I couldn't ask them to—"

"It was your fault," she contradicted. "And you have yourself to thank for it. Any one who makes such mockery of a sacred thing like marriage must not complain if he is dragged to the level of those—creatures."

"But, Helene!" protested Mrs. Wright, fighting back a laugh, "how was Jack to know this would happen?"

"Oh, well," agreed Helene, coldly, "as all the rest of you seem to think it is a beautiful joke perhaps I'm too particular."

"It was an icy winter's day!" murmured Jack, dreamily. "And the cold, cold winds—"

"But why did the women want your coat buttons?" asked Mrs. Peyton, in bewilderment.

"Because I'm a hero," growled Jack. "Why did they kiss Hobson?"

"They are the sort of women who send flowers to criminals," sneered Helene.

"Bless you, Miss, for them kind words!" replied Jack, warmly

"I've got to get back to the office," announced Foxey, "There's all sorts of trouble down there. Good-by, Jack."

"Mrs. Peyton," said Mrs. Wright, "would you mind telling me where I can find some buttons and a needle and thread? I want to patch my boy up so he can get home."

The two older women set off on their search for sewing materials. Helene was about to follow, but Jack barred the way.

"Haven't you punished me long enough?" he demanded. "You've turned the cold shoulder on me all the time lately. Yet we got along so beautifully—at first."

"That was before I knew," she replied. "One of the first things you ever said to me was to warn me against a marriage for money. And now you are — the Lottery Man. Selling yourself for $300,000."

"I'm not selling myself," he urged, "It'll be my money—not hers."

"So you really intend to marry the winner of this horrible Lottery?"

"I'm the victim of circumstances," he evaded, sulkily.

"A 'victim!'" she scoffed, "and with $300,600!"

"You've never known what it means to want for money. To have to have it. To be broke. Just the same, I'd never have gone on in this deal if I'd met you first. And you know I wouldn't."

"I can't see what difference that would have made," she said, wilfully refusing to understand.

"Here are some buttons,' announced Mrs. Wright, coming in, "and the needle and thread. I'm afraid there aren't enough buttons though. I'm going to look for more."

She set down the sewing things and a cardboard box of buttons and bustled out.

"Here!" said Helene, with the air of a martyr. "I'll heap coals of fire on your head by sewing those buttons on. Take off your coat."

Delightfully he obeyed, seating himself at her side and watching her busy fingers at work among the buttons.

"Let me see," she said, sorting out the various hued buttons. "They're brown, aren't they?"

"No," he answered, his gaze on her flushed face. "They are blue. Blue as violets under spring skies."

"Violet blue buttons?" she cried. "Are you crazy?"

"I—I meant your eyes," he faltered.

"Silly!" she rebuked, snatching up the coat to hide her em barrassment.

"Oh, I'm sorry!" she began, bending to pick them up.

"Don't!" he cried in alarm, swooping down in a vain attempt to snatch away the coupons from her. "Please don't."

MISSIONARY WORK IN CHINA

Mrs. Fee's Interesting Address Before the Women's Mission Circle of Park Street Church

The regular meeting of the Women's Mission Circle of the Park St. Baptist church was held at the home of Miss M. Mann, 435 George street, Tuesday evening. Mrs. Fee of Bethany Tabernacle gave a talk on her work in China. This was very interesting. Mrs. Fee gave the population of China, the number of missionaries, the number of persons in each parish; number of walled cities, the location of the missionaries, etc.: and as one listened to the speaker explain the difficulties under which the missionaries have to work, it was not hard to realize that it was only by the power of the Holy Spirit those people are reached by the Gospel, and some of them won for Christ.

At the close refreshments were served and a social hour spent.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

PRESERVE me from the people who go out of their way and even deny their convictions for the pleasure of disagreeing with you on every possible subject.

But equally much, preserve me from the folks who swing the pendulum to the opposite extreme by being fairly fulsome in their acquiescence.

I wonder if you know just the kind of people I mean?

Let me elucidate by telling you some of their ways.

These folks are so prone to agree with you and so sure they know just what you are going to say that if you pause an instant in your speech, they supply the word for you. Quite frequently it isn't the right word, but politeness forbids, of course, that you should tell them that.

They always gaze intently at you while you are talking, presumably in order to demonstrate their interest more thoroughly. As a natural result of this painfully direct gaze your eyes begin to feel as if you were trying to look into the sun, you feel yourself becoming embarrassed and start looking at the floor, the ceiling, out the window or anywhere to avoid meeting their gaze.

They almost always nod their heads frequently in approval of what you are saying. You ought to be grateful, but as a matter of fact it irritates you and makes you think of those funny little figures that used to be so popular who nodded their heads frantically at the slightest jar.

If you start to quote anything to these folks they promptly join in the quotation, or if they can't do that, at least chime in on the last word of every line, like a child whose mother is trying to teach it its first nursery rhyme.

Occasionally they become so enthusiastic in their acquiescence that they interrupt what you have barely begun to say by "Yes, I know," and when you have yielded the floor to them, you frequently find that they know something quite different from what you have intended to say.

Now, do you recognize them?

Talking to such people makes me think of a gymnastic exercise we used to take in which we were instructed to clinch our fists and draw our arms back against the air as if we were really pulling something.

That exercise tired me much more than actually lifting heavy weights. And it seems to me that's the way with talking to these fulsomely acquiescent folks.

It's fighting air, wrestling with a ghost, stepping up when there is no step to take.

Of course, they just do that way because they mean well, but how often does meaning well do any good unless it's preceded by thinking well?

And so far as I can see, they entirely omit that part of the program.

Effect Of The Treaty On Canadian Pork Packers Memorial Presented

Mr. T. F. Matthews of Peterborough, was a member of the deputation of pork packers which waited upon Hon. Mr. Fielding and presented the following memorial on Monday:

The meat packers of Ontario and Quebec have in good faith invested large sums of money in fixed assets represented by their buildings and plant. They have had the courage to build and equip their houses in advance of the production of hogs necessary to their operation. They have to-day, as they have had for years past, an aggregate capacity greatly exceeding the aggregate supply of hogs. They are therefore deeply concerned and have great anxiety as to the effect upon these investments if the proposed reciprocal trade relations are established between Canada and the United States.

Increased Domestic Demand.

The Ontario and Quebec packer has marketed his cured pork products in Canada and in Great Britain. Exports to Great Britain, which in 1880 were $600,000, thirteen years later aggregated $15,000,000, and at present aggregate between $6,000,000 and $7,000,000 annually. During this period of twenty years the domestic trade has steadily enlarged. In recent years large quantities of product hitherto exported have been consumed at home. This increased domestic demand has come chiefly from the Western Provinces. Undisturbed by tariff changes those Western Provinces would ultimately raise and pack hogs in excess of their requirements when the surplus as well as the surplus from Ontario and Quebec, would go to Great Britain, and would re-establish or enlarge the export figures of 1903.

Vital to Packers.

The continuance of this domestic and export trade we believe to be vital alike to packer and farmer in the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec. Each supplements the other and provides invaluable flexibility. It is because of this combined trade that during the last twenty years the average price of hogs in Ontario and Quebec each year has exceeded the average price of hogs in the United States. We have not had the extreme range in values incident to United States markets, hence we have not been as high in price during a period of extraordinarily high levels, nor have we been as low in price during a period of extraordinarily low levels but the average price throughout any year with the exception of two years when the price was in favour of Buffalo) has been higher.

Will Lose Trade.

Under the proposed reciprocity agreement the trade of the Western Provinces, now so important and becoming increasingly so, will be lost to the Ontario and Quebec packer. The lower price for hogs at Western United States packing points, the more favourable rate of freight for cured product from these packing points of the Western Provinces of Canada, the higher return secured for offal, and the lower operating charge per pound of produce through large volume, establish conditions so favorable to the Western United States packer that the trade of the Western Provinces would pass to him. The proposed duty of 1½c. per lb. say 10 to 12 per cent. (in contrast to the present duty of 2c. per lb., say 15 to 18 per cent.) is insufficient to offset the advantages (as indicated above) enjoyed by the Western American curer.

If this Western trade were lost to the Ontario and Quebec packer through the raising and packing of hogs in the Western Provinces, with the existing tariff conditions undisturbed, no serious trouble would follow, as the quantity of product exported would be increased as the Western business decreased. Under reciprocity, however, packers in the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec would be put in a position which must cripple and later destroy the export trade, as the minimum buying price of hogs in Ontario and Quebec would then always be determined by Buffalo and other nearby United States markets. There would be then, as there are now, periods each year when, through some conditions peculiar to the United States, the buying price for hogs established by these United States markets would be higher than the relative value of export product. During such periods the hogs from Ontario would be marketed in Buffalo and Detroit. The Ontario and Quebec packer would be unable to operate and for whatever length of time these conditions prevailed, export product would not be made and hence would not be forwarded to Great Britain.

Vital to Export Trade.

It is vital to the continuance of an export trade to Great Britain that shipments should go forward for arrival every week in the year. These shipments should be in quantity as nearly regular as possible each week during the year. This trade to Great Britain cannot be sustained unless such constancy of shipments is maintained. This export trade in Canadian bacon could not survive if the product were on the market for a period of weeks, then off the market for a period of weks. It is a trade which, if cared for regularly, is sufficiently generous in the average price established to make it worth while to the Canadian producer and packer, and it has been this trade, supplemented by the domestic business, which has made the establishment of the hog industry possible in the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec.

It may be argued that the Ontario and Quebec packers cannot object to the proposed changes. They have indicated that the average buying price of hogs in these Provinces is higher than the average buying price of hogs in the United States, hence under reciprocity they would be in a position to buy and slaughter cheap American hogs. It will be sufficient to point out that the extrime fluctuations in price in the United States would be the controlling factor. During periods when the buying price of hogs thus determined by the United States was unduly low, packers in these Provinces would be able to operate on a large scale, making United States cuts for the export trade. During periods when a high price prevailed, determined by conditions peculiar to the United States, and when there was no parity for the time being between such buying price thus established, and the clearance value of export meats, the Ontario and Quebec packer would be forced to close down. Deprived of his Western business through the lowering of the tariff, deprived of his export business during longer or shorter periods each year, the Ontario and Quebec packer would find his dependable trade confined to his local provincial business. This would be of insufficient volume to pay operating charges. The irregularity in the operation of packing houses under such conditions would introduce labour and other troubles and would so increase the operating charge per pound of product that the continuance of the business would be impossible.

Would Kill the Industry.

We believe, therefore, that the interference with the regularity of export shipments, the interference with the existing market for domestic products, and the consequent interference with the regularity of operation of the packing houses which would follow the adoption of the proposed reciprocity agreement, would result in the destruction of the meat packing industry in Ontario and Quebec.

We believe, in addition, that the industry of hog raising in these Provinces would be greatly injured and would ultimately fall into minor proportions. Farmers would be denied the advantage under which the industry has been established, as the buying price for hogs is now determined by returns secured from export and interprovincial trade, with the consequent general average of buying price for hogs is now determent in the United States. With the return of the inevitably low prices in the United States and for long periods, similarly low prices must follow in these Provinces. For the reasons given we do not consider that the Ontario and Quebec farmer under reciprocity would secure the advantages of the occasionally high United States market and retain the advantages of the present generally high hog market which is the outcome of the present export trade to Great Britain. eReciprocity, as proposed, would ultimately result in the price paid for hogs in Ontario and Quebec being determined solely by United States hog prices. We do not consider that feeding conditions in Ontario and Quebec are fairly competitive with the feeding conditions of the Western United States. We believe that, forced into lower values by the United States feeders, farmers in the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec would become discouraged and would ultimately largely go out of the business of hog raising.

Means Great Loss.

We, therefore, respectfully, but earnestly press upon you our conviction that if the proposed reciprocal agreement becomes operative, the meat packing and hog raising industries in Ontario and Quebec will fall into such small proportions that they will practically cease to be industries of the country. This will impose great loss and severe hardship upon the packers, deprive their workpeople of employment, turn the farmers in these Provinces from the production of hogs, and deprive the country generally of the direct and collateral advantages of important industries.

The gravely serious situation incident to these proposals and the importance that the statements which we have made may command your respect, seems to make it fitting that we should refer to the unfortunate spirit of suspicion to which the industry with which we are identified has been subjected for many years. It has been so commonly and continuously asserted that through combination or agreement the packers in the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec denied the producer a just value for his stock and to the consumer a reasonable price for the products which he used, that it is now generally accepted that some such combination or understanding exists, or did exist. We desire to earnestly assure you that there has been at no time any foundation, in fact for such impressions or belief. There is not now, there has not been at any time, a combination or any form of understanding, implied or actual, whereby the buying price of hogs or cattle has been fixed, or the selling price of products established. Every house in the trade, independent of every other house, has sought to interpret their day to day operations as their best judgment might direct. Without intermission during all the years in which the trade has been carried on, the price of hogs and cattle has been determined under active competitive conditions, as has the sale of the product from such hogs and cattle. Notwithstanding frequent denials by everyone in the trade, the charge which originated in imagination has grown to be generally accepted as true. It has not at any time been supported by evidence. It could not be so supported, as none existed.

PETERBOROUGH FIREMEN ARE THE WORST PAID BRIGADE

Comparison of the Figures Make the Pay of the Local Firefighters Look Small---How They Are Paid in Other Cities in Canada.

In connection with the controversy which has arisen regarding the increase of pay for firemen, the prevailing schedules which are in force in other towns are appended below. Some of them have increased since these figures were obtained officially last year. It will be easily seen that while Peterborough is the largest city on the list with the exception of Toronto, it heads the list with the poorest paid Fire Department. The figures given below have no reference to Chiefs, Deputy-Chiefs, Captains, etc. whatever, as it is not the Chief or Deputy Chief that are after the raise, but the men themselves, $1.37 per day for 24 hours a day service, places the firemen at the head of the list for poorly paid civic servants. Of course, the pay increases the second and third year, but there are very few men who stay on the force long enough to reap the benefits of the raise. At present there are no third year men on the pay roll and there are not likely to be any until the City Fathers see their way clear to grant an increase. There have been 69 different men employed in the Department since the inauguration of the paid brigade. Some of the men who have left the Department on account of the small salary paid, not without some reluctance, have done well. Several of them are getting from three to four dollars per day, while the engineer, who last year made a strenuous effort to get an increase of $50 only succeeded in getting $25 of the amount. He eventually left the Department, and is now getting an increase of $300 per year over his former salary.

In every place but Peterborough there are, in addition to Chief and Deputy Chief, foreman, assistant foreman, captain and lieutenant, all of whom receive an additional $50 or $100 more per year. In Peterborough no such recognition is taken of the above offices. A man who has earned his stripes by long service or efficient work, gets the same scale of pay as the inferior men.

When Chief Howard applied for an increase of pay last year for his men, he was instructed by the committee to write other places and ascertain what salaries were paid elsewhere. The above figures are copies from letters on file in Chief Howard's office, which may be seen at any time by any citizen so interested.

PETERBOROUGH COUNTY FARMERS TO ORGANIZE

Subordinate Branches of the Dominion Grange Are to be Formed Here--Successful Meeting Held at Warsaw ---Inspiring Addresses.

Subordinate branches of the Dominion Grange that farmers' organization that was so largely instrumental in organizing the huge deputation of Ontario farmers who waited on the Dominion government last December in conjunction with the farmers of Western Canada to press the claims of the farmer for a reduction in tariff schedules are being formed in Peterborough County. A meeting was held at Warsaw yesterday afternoon. Mr. Drury, of Crown Hill, Ontario, Past Master of the Dominion Grange and Secretary of the Canadian National Council of Agriculture, F. L. Smith, Editor of the Weekly Sun, and H. B. Cowan, Editor-in-Chief of Farm and Dairy, were the principal speakers.

In his opening address Mr. Drury explained to the farmers present the aims and objects of the Dominion Grange. According to Mr. Drury the Grange in its influence is educative and influential. It affords to farmers an opportunity to discuss questions of importance to them which could not be discussed at their farmers' club where their liberty of speech is curtailed by the fact that the clubs receive government assistance. Mr. Drury then went on and gave an explanation of the position of the farmers on the tariff, showing wherein the farming industry of Ontario and of all of Canada is being injuriously affected by the extra prices which they have to pay on everything that they buy, due to the working of the protective tariff. The sum which the tariff costs each farmer was estimated by Mr. Drury as $200.00. This is equivalent to a mortgage of $4,000.00, with interest of 5 p.c. The farmers, therefore, must organize and fight for their rights.

Mr. W. L. Smith, who followed, pointed out the work which the Grange had already done in political lines for the benefit of farmers. "The Grange," said Mr. Smith, "is not only an organization where farmers can discuss questions of economic importance, but it should be also a social centre for the life of the community." The necessity of bringing the women and children out to the meetings if the organization is to be a permanent success, was strongly emphasized by this speaker.

The addresses were listened to with much enthusiasm by all the farmers present and the speeches were interrupted frequently by applause. At the end of the meeting the following motion was moved and seconded and carried unanimously:

"That, having listened to the speakers at this meeting we heartily approve of the necessity of the organization of the farming community to look after their interest. Further, we believe that in order to have a successful organization it should be independent of government influence. We ask each member of this Club to take into consideration the proposition of affiliation with the Dominion Grange to be decided finally at our next meeting to be held on the second Wednesday of March at 8 o'clock p. m.

A joint meeting of the Pine Grove and Zion Farmers' Clubs was held in the Town Hall at Lakefield in the evening, and the same speakers addressed the meeting. It was moved by Mr. G. E. Johnson and seconded by Mr. W. A. Roseburgh, that a Grange be formed at Lakefield. Here also the audience was almost entirely in sympathy with the idea of organizing granges in preference to farmrs' clubs where liberty of speech is denied them.

This is only the beginning of the campaign in this country. Meetings are being held at Stewart this afternoon and at Central Smith to-night. At the Town Hall, Moneghan, at 2 o'clock to-morrow afternoon, a meeting will be held, at which the same speakers will be present. In the evening a meeting will be held in Norwood at 8 p.m. Saturday afternoon, at 2 p.m., a meeting will be held in the Court House at Peterborough. All are invited to attend these meetings. Ladies are welcome.

OUR RAILROADS BEST OF ALL

Comment of W. M. Acworth, the English Economist

ARE HIGHEST IN EFFICENCY

Nation as a Whole Not Preeminently Efficent

Mr. W. M. Acworth, the English railway economist, who has been making a study of the railway situation in the United States during the last two months, sailed this morning on the Mauretania. Mr. Acworth was introduced to the Railroad Securities Commission when he testified before them last month, by President Hadley as "the highest authority on the railways of Great Britain." He is the author of several standard works on the railroads, not only of Great Britain, but of other countries; was a delegate of the British Government to the International Railway Congress held at Washington in 1905, and to that held in Berne last summer. At intervals of every two or three years he has examined the railway and commercial conditions of the United States, and his reviews are held in high esteem by the great bankers of England and the Continent.

In commenting on the present status in the light of the investigation just concluded, Mr. Acworth spoke very freely. He said:

"I have been somewhat surprised to see the space that has been given in your newspapers to the criticisms of the efficiency of your railways. It has always been my opinion that in actual economy of operation the railways of the United States are first in the world. In the number of tons per car, cars per train; in the fullest utilization of locomotives; in the obtaining of the greatest measure of result for each unit of expenditure they are not equalled by the railways of any other nation. When the Greek commanders after the battle of Salamis voted who should receive the prize for valor each put his own name first, but all put the name of Themistocles second. And Themistocles received the prize. So, too, though German, French and English railway men would, I dare say, all put their own railways first in efficiency they would all, I am sure, put your second, and on the voting of the experts your railways would come out first.

"But, further, your nation as a whole is not in other matters preeminently efficient. No one would say that your farmers were more efficient than those of France, and England, or that your government is more efficient than the government of Prussia. Your railways have reached a higher standard in international comparson than your farmers or your government, and under greater difficulties, for in England and on the Continent employment with a railway company is a prize and man hopes to remain in the service of the same company throughout his life. He is, therefore, obviously more amendable to discipline than the shifting and often even foreign force employed on your railway."

When asked what was the principal fault he had to find with the railway administration of this country, Mr. Acworth said:

"I think the centralization of administrative power in your headquarters offices in Chicago and New York, while tending doubtless to efficiency and economy, is responsible in some degree for the present strained relations between the railways and the public. As a wise railway friend of mine says (The counter between the salesman and the customer is too wide). Matters that arise in Kansas, in Texas, in the far South, in the far West, and need prompt adjustment have to be referred to officers a thousand or two thousand miles away and the citizen in the far West thinks he is dealing with a machine. He wants to deal personally with a flesh and blood neighbour. I think that in these various important sections of your country the large railroad systems should have real executive officers with the largest possible discretion to deal with local questions on the spot. I also think that the ranking officers of your railways should every now and then visit the different communities along their lines and cultivate the personal acquaintance of their citizens.

"Some good work in this direction is being done, but there is opportunity for a great deal more. If your great railway men were steadfastly to pursue this policy, I think they would soon live down much of the antagonism that has been manifested in various perts of the country. Time was when your railways had a good many skeletons in their cupboards, and then they naturally kept them shut. Nowadays the skeletons are all buried and I think the railways would do well to open their cupboards and let the public see how sweet and clean they are.

"The investors of Europe and even your own Wall Street seem hardly to grasp the enormous amount of money that must be spent upon your railroads to keep pace with your growing traffic. If your traffic doubles every ten years, as it substantially does, you will need not perhaps to double your facilities every ten years, but to increase them at least 50 per cent. The eleven hundred millions per year specified by Mr. Hill as necessary for this purpose is none too much. The inhabitants of your Western and Southern States, your people in general, must understand that this capital cannot be obtained in their own communities.

"Texas and Oklahama have no money to spare for railroad building. They want it all for their own local business. Even the East cannot find all the money required. This money in large measure must for a long time to come be raised abroad; and the investors of other lines will not be willing to subscribe it so long as there is a continuance of the harassing conditions which tend to impair the revenues of your railways, to retard their development. If the railways of the United States would reach a time when State legislators ceased from troubling and State commissions were at rest it would in my thinking be good for the railways and still better for the citizens of the United States."—New York Evening Sun, February 1st, 1911.

CHARGE AGAINST ROYAL THEATRE WAS DISMISSED

Magistrate Takes View That Management Could Not Avoid the Overcrowding That Took Place on Monday Night ---Crowd Could Not Be Controlled.

Mr. M. Pappas was charged in the Police Court this morning with violating the law regarding the Moving Picture Shows. The charge was that he did not keep the aisles clear. He pleaded not guilty. Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for the defence.

The Chief took the witness box, and stated the evidence as follows: "On the 18th I notified Constable Meagher, when he was going out on duty, to see Mr. Pappas, that he did not obstruct the aisles and see that they were not filled up. I went to the Royal Theatre about 8.45, in company with Detective Newhall. He had previously notified me, and when we got around there, the sidewalk was crowded so that the people could not move. I got inside, but could get no further than inside the door on the south side. The aisles were packed and the doors were being held open, and people could not move. I could not see to the front, but it was packed along the end in the lobby and down the side aisles. I spoke to the usher and he said that the show would be over in a few minutes, so we waited. The place was very hot. One lady fainted. I spoke to Mr. Pappas, and he informed me that the crowd was beyond his control, and that they rushed in without buying a ticket or anything else. About a month ago I warned the proprietors of moving picture shows regarding the obstructing of the aisles, and they all got a copy of the rules and regulations."

Mr. Gordon—"You experienced difficulty in moving the crowd."

Chief Thompson—"Yes, there were about two or three hundred people outside, and in the rotunda, when we tried to move them, they backed out into the street, and right on to the street car track. There was no possibility of keeping the people out when I got there."

Detective Newhall then gave evidence as follows: "I got there about 7.30 and stayed about an hour. When I got there the place was comfortable, but about 8.30 the people started to complain; the people inside were not complaining; but the crowd was so bad outside that they were complaining. Then I notified the Chief at 8.30, and we tried to make a clearance, but we were notified that the show would be out in a few minutes so we waited. When it was over one lot of people wanted to rush in, and the others wanted to rush out. It lasted like this until about 9.15. The people seemed to go clean crazy then and did not stop at tramping children or anything. If anything had happened at that time there would would have been broken bones and the women were just as bad as the men."

"They are far worse!" said his Worship.

"About 15 minutes after 10 o'clock things quieted down a little, and then a crowd came down the street, apparently from one of the upper picture shows, and crowded right in without paying. There are four exit doors at the back and one at the front, and one admission door. They crowded in all three exit doors."

Mr. Gordon: "Mr. Pappas made all possible efforts to prevent this; the doors were swinging doors, so that it was impossible. I ask that the charge be dismissed on that ground."

Detective Newhall—"Mr. Pappas and Mr. Henry and two employees were in their places at the door, but they could not stop the crowd no more than we could."

His Worship Magistrate Dumble then said that he thought that it was clear that they had the "Fans" and the "Rooters" and all that element. He could not see that there was any culpable negligence on the part of Mr. Pappas. He thought that it was one of those occasions when the crowd just lost its head, but, he commented, the act of this crowd just shows what would be the result if anything happened. He said he could not find that Mr. Pappas encouraged it. He hoped that the whole event would be a warning to these people, and concluded that if it didn't the picture shows would be closed up altogether. He said he did not feel that the evidence would justify him in imposing a fine, but he hoped that it would be a warning.

The case was, accordingly, dismissed.

VOICED HIS OWN IDEAS

Champ Clark Surprised That Any One Should Have Taken Him Seriously—Secretary Knox Speaks

J. J. HILL'S STATEMENT

Washington, Feb. 16.—The semi-jocular remarks of Champ Clark, the Democratic Speaker-to-be, made in the House on Tuesday during the debate on the Canadian reciprocity agreement to the effect that he believed the Stars and Stripes would one day float over the entire western hemisphere, stirred up most unexpected trouble yesterday. President Taft took occasion to write to Representative McCall a letter disclaiming and deprecating the annexation talk, and to follow it up with personal remarks even more emphatic to his visitors.

The news that Mr. Clark's allusions had created excitement in Canada and in England occasioned great surprise and considerable amusement at the capitol. The man most surprised of all was Mr. Clark himself.

Mr. Clark's entire speech on reciprocity Tuesday was delivered in a half humorous, half taunting vein. The House was in a gale of laughter most of the time. In return for the laughs he was creating at their expense, some of the Republicans tried to turn the tables on Mr. Clark by chiding him with the fact that he might have President Taft as an opponent for the Democratic nomination. The humorous exchange reflected the spirit of the debate during the entire time Mr. Clark was on his feet, and no one gave serious consideration to his remarks regarding the possible annexation of Canada at some distant time. They regarded his statements in the nature of a compliment to the Canadian people, in that he would be glad to see the friendship that exists at present between the Canadians and the people of the United States so great in the future that all might some day be under one flag.

Knox Sees No Danger.

Chicago, Feb. 16.—Though the people of the United States and Canada as "a substantially homogeneous people," with "deep moral and racial reciprocities," the benefits of the proposed commercial reciprocity with Canada "ought not to be obscured by the fear of relations too cordial and conceivably dangerous to the great Canadian loyalty to England," is the opinion of the Secretary of State, Philander C. Knox, who addressed the Chicago Association of Commerce here last night.

Mr. Knox declared that while migrations proceeded as constantly and as freely between Canada and the United States as between two states of the Union, and while the two peoples have been welding together for two centuries, "there is not the slightest probability that this racial and moral union will involve any political change or annexation or absorption."

"If there should be any great world movement, involving this continent, Canada and the United States would, as a matter of course, act in the most perfect concert in defence of the common rights of a common blood and civilization."

Speaking of the provision for free wheat, Mr. Knox pointed out that the transportation facilities of the United States for handling the surplus Canadian crop must be taken into account, thus preventing "the demoralization of prices which results through the dumping of larger quantities upon the European markets, where the world's supply is fixed." He declared that the free admission of grain from Canada would meet the present situation and place the control in the hands of the American growers.

Greatest Opportunity In Years.

Chicago, Feb. 16.—An urgent plea for the proposed reciprocity agreement between Canadian and the United States was made last night by Jas. J. Hill, at the Chicago Association of Commerce.

Mr Hill said in part:

"There ought not to be one vote in Congress or one voice in the country against an arrangement worth more than armies and navies, more in dollars and cents than the acquisition of other markets for which we are prepared to spend huge sums. Every man in public life who knows the true value and effect of reciprocity, and yet opposes, is willing to sacrifice

"Any opposition to a project so advantageous to the American people is so extraordinary that the nature and cause of it should be considered first. It comes from three sources; two of which may be summarily disposed of. Such of the monopolistic combinations as find their power to overcharge the people imperilled by reciprocity are naturally against it."

THE BUDGET DEBATE

In Legislature Came to an End Yesterday With the Leaders on the Floor—Hon. A. G. McKay's Trenchant Criticism

HOODWINKING PUBLIC

Toronto, Feb. 16.—Crowded galleries and members present, all but six, was the tribute paid by public and Legislature alike to the oratorical prowess of the talented leader of the Opposition, and the redoubtable Premier, who were carded to bring the budget debate to a stirring conclusion yesterday. The finale included the first division of the session.

Hon. A. G. MacKay said the figures in the annual financial statement should not be juggled with. If the classification advocated by the honorable Provincial Treasurer, in 1905, were adopted instead of that used by him now instead of a bogey surplus of $2,406 there would be shown a deficit of over half a million dollars.

There was a reason for the manner of statements that the Provincial Treasurer had made. The curse of the party system was responsible. It was necessary to cover up the ruthless disposal of natural resources. The curse of the party system had been exampled in the United States, where the forests had become annihilated.

A board of directors who would attempt to hoodwink its shareholders in the way the Provincial Treasurer had would mighty soon be driven off the board. It was not the part of any public man to so arrange his receipts as to make a deficit appear as a surplus.

Members of the Government had contrasted the price the Liberals had received for its land in the mineral areas as compared with what it was now bringing. "The inference is that because we sold land for $3 an acre in the early days of New Ontario, we would still be selling it at the same figure. When we sold it for $3 an acre that was all it was worth. The wealth of the territory was not dreamed of."

The Government had paid the Opposition a compliment in adopting their suggestion of placing the mines on a royalty basis, but they had not gone far enough. He had advised that the rich mines should be taxed a greater percentage than the smaller ones. The heaviest load should be saddled on the strongest horse.

The succession duties act could also be enlarged upon. Large estates of millions should be made to cough up a larger percentage than estates of $50,000, and nobody would be hurt.

The great revenues, of which the present Government boasted, were flowing in as a result of laws made by the old Government. It had been stated that the Government employed too many civil servants. It might be so. He would not argue either way, but if civil servants were to be retained the province should be big enough to pay them fair, living wages.

Mr. MacKay noted that the cost of civil government had increased 65 per cent. under the present Government; the expenditure on crown lands had increased 98 per cent., while the cost for agriculture had only increased 35 per cent. The Government was not doing its duty by agriculture.

In view of the fact that our current expenditure on forests was $500,000 more than the receipts, there should be some systematic mode of conservation.

He then moved an amendment to the adoption of the budget deploring the nature of the financial statement, the condition of the schools, the state of colonization of the northern districts, and the introduction of the reciprocity question into the debates.

Sir James Whitney made a slashing one-hour fighting speech, in which he poked fun at the Opposition leader and hammered back at his arguments to the entusiastic delight of his followers.

Great applause was evoked by the Premier's significant declaration that members of the Opposition may shortly hear "an announcement respecting the T. & N.O. Railway that will prevent any member making such a statement again as that the railway is little pettidogging line as long as he lives."

Viewing in significance was also the intimation that the Legislature would be asked to consider a resolution of protest with respect to reciprocity or a memorial against it to the Dominion Government.

Sir James considered it amusing that not one of Col. Matheson's critics agreed with another as to how much of a deficit there was. They varied from a half to three millions. If there was anything wrong with that financial statement he could safely say that none of those men were the proper persons to rectify it. There had never been a clearer or more concise accounting of the Government's affairs given on the floor of the House.

The Premier would have the honorable the leader of the Opposition remember when he charged the Government with giving away pine lands, that when the Conservatives came into power, they found all the desks and drawers swept clean, and the papers had been burned so that no trace could be got of what the Liberals had done.

"When a prospective purchaser offered us $72,000 for a piece of it, we found that the Minister of Crown Lands had, with his own hand, marked an extension of the limit in lead pencil upon the map, and we had to forego the sale. The records, being destroyed, we could not get at the actual state of affairs. So that $72,000 represents one instance, at least, where the province was robbed of cold cash by the old Government."

"We are told by a foreigner that we are at the parting of the ways with England. Are we willing to abandon that tie that has for fifty years tended to our peace and prosperity?

Are we prepared to let the American millionaires swamp us out?"

The amendment was negatived on a division, the ayes being 16 and nays 80.

USUALLY ONE DOSE ENDS INDIGESTION

Dyspepsia, Heartburn, Gas and All Stomach Distress Vanishes

If your meals don't fit comfortably, or you feel bloated after eating, and you believe it is the food which fills you; if what little you eat lies like a lump of lead on your stomach; if there is difficulty in breathing after eating, eructations of sour, undigested food and acid, heartburn, brash or a belching of gas, you can make up your mind that you need something to stop food fermentation and cure Indigestion.

To make every bite of food you eat aid in the nourishment and strength of your body, you must rid your Stomach of poisons, excessive acid and stomach gas, which sours your entire meal—interferes with digestion and causes so many sufferers of Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Biliousness, Constipation, Griping, etc. Your case is no different—you are a stomach sufferer, though you may call it by some other name; your real and only trouble is that which you eat does not digest, but quickly ferments and sours, producing almost any unhealthy condition.

A case of Pape's Diapepsin will cost fifty cents at any Pharmacy here, and will convince any stomach sufferer five minutes after taking a single dose that Fermentation and Sour Stomach is causing the misery of Indigestion.

No matter if you call your trouble Catarrh of the Stomach, Nervousness or Gastritis, or by any other name—always remember that a certain cure is waiting at any drug store the moment you decide to begin its use.

Pape's Diapepsin will regulate any out-of-order Stomach within five minutes, and digest promptly, without any fuss or discomfort, all or any kind of food you eat.

Canada Cannot Afford to Stagnate Commercially Says Hugh Guthrie in a Stirring Speech

CANADA NOT BOUND

Ottawa, Feb. 16.—"Canada is young, vigorous, progressive. She is strong in the enthusiasm of achievement. She cannot afford to listen to the counsel of the timid, the faint-hearted, the pessimist. She must be up and doing, ever going ahead. She cannot sit down and folds her arms, close her eyes and murmur, 'Let well enough alone.' She can retire from business altogether, but she is not doing that. She knows that if she is not moving forward she must be moving backward. There is no standing still. And the policy of the Government, since it took office in 1896, year by year, has been forward, forward, forward."

Such was the keynote of the splendid speech of Mr. Hugh Guthrie in the Commons yesterday, which roused the Liberals to repeated enthusiasm.

Mr. Burrell continued his remarks on the reciprocity arrangement. He said there were one million peach trees on ten thousand acres in western Ontario, and there was no doubt that this industry would be injured by the reciprocity agreement. They had five million fruit trees in the orchards of British Columbia, and in no other part of Canada would the industry be hit with equal force. They were still at the beginning of things. Thousands of men had spent their all on the fruit lands, and the proposals of the Government were deplorably crude.

With regard to the remark of Sir Wilfrid Laurier to the recent fruit growers' deputation that they were too late, Mr. Burrell pointed out that the Niagara fruit growers at St. Catherines, Ont., on Dec. 15, had sent a resolution to Hon. Wm. Paterson asking that nothing be done until their case had been heard.

Mr. Paterson had acknowledged this before the western farmers were heard. Did the Government think these subterfuges were creditable? Was it ever too late to do justice?

Hugh Guthrie (South Wellington), who followed Mr. Burrell, said it was almost a waste of time to reply to the argument that there had been in Canada no demand for better trade relations with the United States. As a matter of fact there had been no period since the abrogation of the old reciprocity agreement of 1854 when there had not been a positive and active demand for freer trade with our neighbors to the south.

Mr. Guthrie said that the best feature of the agreement was that it was not in the form of a binding treaty. It was simply a bargain based on the good faith of the two nations.

It had been argued that Canada should wait till another Colonial Conference has been held, but the best answer was that we had not bound our hands, and that if anything better developed at the Colonial Conference, Canada was still free to take advantage of it. Proceeding, Mr. Guthrie said that he believed that the agreement contained advantages for both countries. If it was a one-sided bargain it would not last for twelve months, nevertheless he believed that the preponderating advantage was on the side of the Dominion.

In the Senate yesterday the question of a better distribution of work between the Commons and the Upper House was discussed, and a resolution moved by Senator David adopted inviting the Lower Chamber to join in the formation of a joint committee to report on a plan. The Senate representatives on the committee will be Sir Richard Cartwright, Sir Mackenzie Bowell and Messrs. Lougheed, Beique, Power, Belcourt and David.

Senator Macdonald said there should be more young and active men in the Senate, and the membership of both that branch of the Legislature and the Commons itself should be cut in half.

In committee on a bill to prohibit the improper use of opium and other drugs Senator Lougheed expressed the opinion that this measure did not go far enough. Deadly patent medicines were being freely sold and it was time they should be inspected and approved or forbidden by the Government before being put on sale. Sir Richard Cartwright said he would be glad to consider any amendment which was proposed.

Senator Power thought there was a question of provincial jurisdiction to be considered.

Senator Cloran said the bill was within Federal jurisdiction as it made certain offences a crime.

Senator Kirchoffer, chairman of the divorce committee, reported in favor of granting the application of Dr. L. F. Robertson for divorce from his wife Elizabeth Louise Robertson, now of London, England, and in favor of granting the application of Maggie Florence Sadlier of Toronto, from her husband, W. A. Sadlier, barrister, formerly of Toronto.

Freed From Kaiser's Authority.

Berlin, Feb. 16.—The commission of the Reichstag further amended the Government's draft of the constitution proposed for Alsace-Lorraine yesterday, wholly freeing the future state from the influence of the Emperor. The commission struck out the clause giving the Emperor the exercise of executive authority, and substituted a provision for a regent who would hold office for life and be nominated by the Emperor upon the proposal of the Bundesrath. The regent also would be removable only by the Bundesrath.

Caught a Heavy Cold.

It Left Him with a Hacking Cough.

Mr. J. H. Richards, 1352 Second Ave. East, Vancouver, B.C., writes:—"Allow me to write a few lines in praise of your Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. Last fall I contracted a heavy cold which left me with a hacking cough, and every time I would get a little more cold this hacking cough would become a lung splitting one. It kept on getting worse and I kept on spending money buying different cough remedies until a friend asked me if I had ever tried Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. I told him I was willing to try anything I thought would cure, and on the same day bought two bottles. Before half the first one was used my cough began to get much easier, and by the time I had used a bottle and a half my cough was gone. I am keeping the other half bottle in case it should come again but I am quite sure I have a positive cure. Let me recommend Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup to all who suffer from a cough or throat irritation of any kind."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25 cents.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

Parkdale Knocked St. Michael's Out Of Running Paddlers Won 5 To 3

TORONTO, FEB. 16. — Dethroned are St. Michael's College, champions of Canada and holders of the Allan Cup. Don't let "holders" get away from you. Parkdale put them out of the running for the season last night by beating them 5 to 3. It was no fluke or unearned victory, and, truth to tell, the Paddlers looked like a team that could do the job again whenever called upon. The score at the intermission was 2 to 2.

There was no room for excuses, and St. Michael's players and management are not making any. The better team won, and there can be no question of doubt. In the first meeting between the teams Parkdale won by 8 to 2, making the score on the round 13 to 5. St. Michael's were beaten on the Paddlers' favourite going in the first game—slush and even water. Last night the rink management provided a sheet of ice as near perfect for hocked purposes as could be asked for. It was very hard and fast, and several degrees of frost in the building kept it that way throughout the game. In the first game the champions were outclassed, last night they were handily beaten but not outclassed. The claims of the Parkdale followers that their team is a great one on fast ice has been regarded with skepticism, especially after their defeat at Stratford. Stratford has not had a strong team this season. Last night the West Enders showed the way for the champions, even on the glassy surface. That feature of the contest was a surprise. The very material advantage in weight augmented the benefit of superior speed, and that is the answer to the 5 ot 3 score. St. Mike's had speed enough to check back, and they did that like terriers, but the winners were whirlwinds when carrying the puck.

MAY ARRANGE A GAME WITH ST. MICHAEL'S HERE

The Peterborough Hockey Club are endeavouring to make arrangements by which the St. Michael's College team, until last night amateur champions of Canada and holders of the controversial Allan Cup, will play here early next week. The St. Michael's team would undoubtedly prove a good drawing card, and a game between them and the Peterborough Intermediates should just about prove the hockey feast of the season. The Petes would have their work cut out to beat the Collegians, but they are anxious to try the feat. A very strong team can be placed on the ice for the blue and white. Kelly's hand is improved enough to allow him to play and Park will be available, as the O. H. A., in response to an inquiry from Peterborough, stated that he was eligible for exhibition games, as he had not been suspended.

To-night's Pro Game Will Be Worth Seeing As Both Teams Are Strong

The first professional hockey game ever seen in Peterborough will take place at Brock Street rin kto-night when Manager Nolan's line-up will clash with Geo. Brown's Port Hope hustlers. The game is called for 8.15 o'clock with Harvey Sproule of Toronto, handling the bell. The game should be well worth seeing. The line-up that Manager Nolan has announced for this game is the strongest that has been gathered together in the Eastern Ontario Professional League this season, strengthened as it will be by the addition of Russ Murphy and Fred Doherty of the Galt team ot the pick of the Trenton and Picton teams. Port Hope will have the same line-up that has won so many games this season, and are confident of beating the all star combination they will be up against to-night. The Nolan aggregation will line up as follows:

Goal—Baker.
Piont—Murphy.
Cover—Lane.
Rover—Dusty.
Centre—Chipchase.
Right wing—Lightfoot.

WOULD VERY OFTEN FAINT AWAY.

Doctor Said That Sometime He Would Never Come Out of One.

Many people may be unaware of having anything wrong with their heart till some little excitement, overwork, or confinement in an overheated or overcrowded room or public building makes them feel faint or dizzy.

If you neglect the warning the slight feeling of dizziness gives you, and fail to take treatment, there will be a gradual progression to something more serious.

There is no reason you should wait till your case becomes desperate before you avail yourself of a perfect cure by using Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mr. F. S. Chute, Wheatley, Ont. writes:—"It is with gratitude I tell how your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills benefited me. I was very weak and run down, and had headache, nearly every day and would very often faint away.

"In fact, my doctor said that sometime I would never come out of one of them. After taking three boxes of your pills I am glad to relate that it has been a number of years since I have had a fainting spell and scarcely have had a headache. Too much cannot be said in praise of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills for in me they have effected a perfect cure."

SOME HOCKEY HAPPENINGS

If Pete Campbell's bad leg had been O.K. Varsity would just about have won out. He got going a while in the initial half, but after a tumble or two it went back on him, and he lacked his usual spirit of aggressiveness. He camped in on the Orillia nets until Referee Caldwell fenced him. The crowd called him "Inside Home" Campbell.—Toronto Star.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Feb. 15.—At the Canadian Pacific live stock market the offerings this morning were 350 cattle, 200 sheep and lambs, 550 hogs and 500 calves. There was no important change in the condition of the market for cattle, prices being well maintained under a good demand and small supplies. The trade was fairly active thruout, and a clearance was made.

A feature of the market was the sale of one extra choice heifer, weighing 1350 lbs., at 7½c per lb., which is the highest figure which has been paid here since Christmas. Choice steers sold at 6½c; good at 6¼c; fairly good at 5½c to 6c; fair at 5½c to 5¾c, and the lower grades at 4½c to 5c per lb. A few choice cows and bulls brought 5½c, and the commoner grades sold at from that down to 3½c per lb.

The market for sheep and lambs was quiet on account of the limited supplies coming forward, and prices ruled steady. Sheep sold at 4c to 4½c, and lambs at 6c to 6c per lb. A weaker feeling developed in the market for calves on account of the increased receipts, and prices ruled lower, with sales at from $2.50 to $12 each, as to size and quality.

The market for hogs was weaker, and prices declined 25c to 40c per 100 lbs., owing to the supplies being much larger than were generally expected. At the reduction the demand was good, and sales of selected lots were made at $7.60 to $7.75 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars.

At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market the receipts were 350 cattle, 100 sheep and lambs, 1000 hogs and 400 calves. The feature of the trade was the weaker feeling in the market for hogs, and prices were lower, at $7.60 to $7.75 per 100 lbs. for selected lots, weighed off cars. The demand for cattle, sheep, lambs and calves was good, and the prices realized were much the same as those quoted above.

Faces Water Famine.

Toronto, Feb. 16.—"We are doing our best to relieve the situation," said Deputy City Engineer Fellowes during a brief rest at the shore crib this morning. "We hope to have sufficient pressure to supply all points south of College and Carlton streets by daybreak. Owing to the water being out of the reservoir, it will be difficult to get pressure enough to supply the district north of that until later in the day with the full capacity of the mains, even if we do succeed in removing all of the obstruction by that time."

This was the official statement given out this morning on the worst water famine with which the city of Toronto has ever been confronted. It is but a repetition in a more aggravated form of the trouble with the choking of the intake pipe which cut off the city's water supply on Dec. 31 last. It was caused by the east wind churning up the ice and creating a current which drove a large quantity of floe ice, sand and brush into the intake, causing a stoppage of the water supply and necessitated the tapping of the old wooden intake unused for the last twenty years, in order to get enough water to keep two 10,000,000 gallon per day pumps running to half capacity in order to prevent the entire water supply being cut off.

Fallen Must Not Attend.

Ottawa, Feb. 16.—The French-Canadians of Ottawa will not present an address of welcome or participate in the ceremonies at the installation of Archbishop Gauthier, if Bishop Fallon of London or Bishop Scollard of North Bay have any part in the proceedings. This stand is taken owing to their position on the bi-lingual question.

Chairman J. U. Viencent, president of the St. Jean Baptiste Society, made the announcement yesterday in strong terms: "We refer particularly to Bishop Fallon. We have written, asking him not to come, but if he persists the French people will not participate. Bishop Fallon has shown himself to be a man who does not respect the truth."

Should Not Fortify.

New York, Feb. 16.—As a manifestation of the desire of this nation to promote peace throughout the world, the United States should refuse to fortify the Panama Canal. This assertion is made by Dr. H. S. Pritchett, president of the Carnegie Foundation, in a letter to the New York Peace Society. He says the question is not one of right, but one of large public policy, and that the only danger existing belongs to those "indeterminate causes" against which no country is called upon to arm itself.

Masked Men Rob Prisoner.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Feb. 16.—Two masked burglars broke into the town jail at Warrior Run, Pa., near here, yesterday, and bursting open the door of the cell in which Stanley Jandus, the only prisoner, was confined, robbed him at the point of revolver of $20.

Perjury Charges Dismissed.

Chatham, Feb. 16.—Late yesterday the Rothwell perjury trials were finished before Magistrate Houston, who dismissed both Mrs. Duncan and Daniel Matthews on the charges preferred against them by John G. C. Irving, Baptist preacher of Rothwell. Irving charged the parties with falsely swearing to property qualifications. In both cases it was proved that the defendants had voted in good faith, and that their names appeared on the voters' lists at the time of the election. Mrs. Duncan and Matthews were summarily arrested on the charge, along with Robert McNeill, who was dismissed in the morning. The cases arose out of the local option campaign in Rothwell last January, in which local option was defeated by a straight majority.

M. E. Nichols, managing director of The Winnipeg Telegram, and a former member of the Parliamentary press gallery, is a son-in-law of the afflicted Senator.

Nearly Perished In Fire.

Chatham, Feb. 16.—At 3.30 yesterday morning Gasparre Favata's fruit store on Queen street was totally gutted by fire. The stock was not large, and there was some insurance.

Favata and his wife and family were sleeping above the store and they did not get out until after the firemen arrived.

Tea Time Talks
Tea Spoils with Age

No tea is fit to drink after it is two years old. That is the age limit of tea quality and benefit. The best tea is the freshest.

"Salada" Tea owes much of its world-wide reputation to its sale fresh from the plantation. The leaves are fresh picked every week the year 'round; then dried, sorted and packed in air-tight lead packages. Every five weeks a new picking of "Salada" comes fresh from plantation to purchaser.

Bulk teas, carried year after year, lose their freshness.

THE INFLUENCE OF THE BIBLE UPON LITERATURE

Some Thoughts Suggested by the Tercentenary of the Founding of the English Bible---English Literature is Far Richer on Account of It---Will Be Celebrated Monday Night.

Three hundred years of the English Bible suggests to us its great influence. Wherever this book has gone it has inspired new ideals of civilization, new models of character, new conceptions of virtue and hopes of happiness. What a wonderful power the Bible has exercised in Literature and Art. Were we to lose such works as owe their thoughts, emotions and visions to the Bible, then all sculpture like Donatello's 'David' and Michel Angelo's 'Moses,' all paintings like Raphael's 'Sistine Madonna' and Murillo's 'Holy Family,' all music like Bach's 'Passion' and Handel's 'Messiah,' all poetry like Dante's 'Divine Comedy,' and Milton's 'Paradise Lost' would have to go.

It is marvellous how its imagery suits every age and every land. Born in the East and clothed in Oriental form and symbol, the Bible walks the ways of all the world with familiar feet and enters land after land to find its own. Into every condition and scale of life it goes and takes with it a necessary message. Thus entering into every phase of life, it is scarcely to be wondered at, that the Bible has exercised an extraordinary influence in literature. It has called into being tens of thousands of other books. English literature is far richer to-day because of three hundred years of our English Bible. Even before it appeared in its present form it was the inspiration of the masterpieces. But in its present form it has had a wonderful influence. This is partly due to the simplicity of its language. Henry Van Dyke describes it as "a monument of English prose in its prime." It uses a vocabulary of only 6,000 words, yet it is a book which, as Macaulay said, "if everything else in our language should perish, would alone suffice to show the whole extent of its beauty and power."

The Bible has had a preservative influence upon our language, keeping it as pure as we find it to-day. It has furnished us with a great number of phrases that are current everywhere. A long list could be given and in it such phrases as "a good old age," "a mother in Israel," "the valley of decision," "thou art the man," "No discharge in that war," "A drop in the bucket," and scores of others would be found. Direct quotations from the Bible are found in all sorts of books. One of the latest novels, "The Rosary," has many such. Tennyson has over 500 in his works. Shakespeare clearly reveals the strong influence of the Bible in the description of his characters, and uses many passages and references. Browning is crowded with Scriptural phrases, references and quotations. In his longest poem there are over 500 Biblical references. Scott, Ruskin, Stevenson and Kipling use its phrases with great effect. Some works of English literature, since the sixteenth century, are altogether Biblical. "The Pilgrim's Progress," "Paradise Lost" and "Paradise Regained" are among the number. To these should be added Browning's "Saul" and "A Death in the Desert."

The largest and most important influence of the Bible in literature is not in its language, but in the power of the Book to nourish and inspire and guide the inner life of man. "It finds me" said Coleridge.

"The Bible," said Huxley, "has been the Magna Charta of the poor and the oppressed."

"New light has broken from it" says Van Dyke, "to lead the upward struggle of mankind from age to age. Men have come back to it because they could not do without it. Now will its influence wane, its radiance be darkened, unless literature ceases to express the noblest of human longings, the highest of human hopes, and mankind forgets all that is now incarnate only and forever in the central figure of the Bible."

No wonder then there should be a desire on the part of all who appreciate literature, who love liberty, and who crave for righteousness, and who strive to live the life of the pure, the true and the good, to meet together and express their gratitude for what 300 years of the English Bible has brought to them of these unpurchasable possessions.

WANT CLEAR GLASS IN BAR ROOM WINDOWS

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, FEB. 16.—Clauses to be recommended to the Government, with a view to abolishing secret drinking were given considerable consideration at the Dominion Alliance meeting to-day. "That we request the Government to further amend the license law, making it unlawful ot obstruct doors of bar-rooms with screens and that license holders be forced to put a clear glass in the windows," was the resolution carried. As a final method of getting after the keepers of blind pigs, the Government will be asked by the Alliance, "that any one arrested for drunkenness in a local option municipality shall be required to divulge under oath the source from which the intoxicating liquor was obtained."

GREATEST MEDICINE ON EARTH

A prominent citizen of Evansville, Ind., writes:—"I was ill for five months with a pulmonary trouble, and had the best of doctors;— had hemorrhages and was in a very bad way. Through the advice of a friend I tried Vinol, and I feel that it saved my life. It is all you recommend it to be, I believe it is the greatest medicine on earth. I have advised others to try Vinol, and they have had the same results." (Name furnished on request.)

We want every one in this vicinity who is troubled with chronic colds—coughs—or pulmonary troubles — to come to our store and get a bottle of Vinol.

If it does not go to the seat of trouble—heal the inflammation and stop the cough—we will cheerfully return every cent paid us for it. This shows our faith—and proves that you take no chances. Do we mean it? Come and see. McDermid and Jury, corner George and Charlotte streets; also Parnell's drug store, corner George and Simcoe streets

How to Have the Best Cough Syrup and Save $2, by Making It at Home.

Cough medicines, as a rule, contain a large quantity of plain syrup. If you take two cups of granulated sugar, add one cup of warm water, and stir about 2 minutes, you have as good syrup as money could buy.

If you will then put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a 16 oz. bottle, and fill it up with the Sugar Syrup, you will have as much cough syrup as you could buy ready-made for $2.50. It keeps perfectly.

And you will find it the best cough syrup you ever used—even in whooping cough. You can feel it take hold—usually stops the most severe cough in 24 hours. It is just laxative enough, has a good tonic effect and taste is pleasant. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

It is a splendid remedy, too, for hoarseness, asthma, chest pains, etc.

Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, rich in guaiacol and all the healing pine elements. No other preparation will work in this formula.

This recipe for making cough remedy with Pinex and Sugar Syrup is now used and prized in thousands of homes in the United States and Canada. The plan has often been imitated but never successfully.

A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

STIFF SENTENCES METED OUT TO BAND OF BOYS WHO PLEADED GUILTY TO THEFT

One Gets Two Years in Central, Another Six Months in the Same Institution, and the Third Goes to Kingston for Twenty-five Months.

SENTENCED TO-DAY

Fred Roy, alias Fred Raymond, and Clement Gougon, alias Clement Lafreneer, and Bruce Roy came up for sentence in the Police Court this morning on the charge of breaking into the store of Wm. Scott and Co., also breaking into the store of Mr. Laundry. Clement Gordon was sentenced to two years less one day on each offence, in the Central Prison, Toronto, sentences to run concurrently and Bruce Roy to six months in the Central Prison, and Fred Roy was sentenced to twenty-five months in the Kingston penitentiary, the sentences in both cases to run concurrently.

Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for the defence, and made the following statement: "These boys are charged with this serious offence, and one is sixteen and the other two eighteen years of age. They were over to East City and saw the window open and it tempted them. It was fortunate for them they were not detected. On account of their youth, I would ask your Worship to deal lightly with them The fact that they had arms in the house is shown, but on account of their youth they cannot understand the seriousness of the act. They are simply youthful dare devils. They were led into doing these things by reading bad literature. They boarded at Powell's, and at first sometimes bought stuff, and brought it there. Afterwards they got another way of getting it. But I would ask your Worshi pto deal lightly with them on account of their youth."

Mr. R. E. Wood, K.C.: "It is all very well to deal lightly with people, but this is too serious to be dealt lightly with, and the crime is too serious to let them go on suspended sentence. They had the revolvers with them the night they were at Scott's. Suppose they had been caught in the act, we might have been trying them for murder now. To say that they are 16 and 18 is wrong. Roy's father says that he is 20, and that the younger Roy is 18. Gougan has a bad record, and if he is only 18 he has made remarkable progress in the criminal line. They also went under fictitious names so that they would elude the authorities. I submit that it is not a case for much leniency. The Provincial Government is trying to reform young men, and they will have a better opportunity at reforming if these young men are sent down. They are taught morals and moral training there, and I think that they would benefit by being sent to Central Prison."

His Worship Magistrate Dumble then expressed his sentiments on the case as follows: "This is a most unfortunate thing to find these young men in the box, charged with house breaking and stealing. They are evidently a band, and have organized themselves to lead an unlawful life. I would rather find three old and hardened criminals here than these young men. Because old criminals are afraid of their neck, and will not shoot unless they have too, while these young fools are reckless. To deal lightly with them, would be wrong, for they have set themselves to a life of crime. The lesson they will get may do them good. To let these men go, would be holding crime at a premium, so I will deal with them accordingly." He then passed sentence.

Robt. Powell, with whom the boys were boarding, was next called. He was charged with receiving stolen goods. He pleaded not guilty, but later the evidence was so convicting that his counsel, Mr. G. N. Gordon, changed the plea to guilty. The accused was let go on suspended sentence, and will have to report to the Chief once every month.

Mr. Scott of the firm of Wm. Scott and Co., was then put into the box and stated as follows: "They broke into my inner safe and strewed the papers all around the floor, but there was no money in the safe. They broke the lock on my desk and broke the lock on the book-keeper's desk. They took a case of eggs, valued at $7.50, also a turkey valued at $2.50. They broke four panes of glass, also the sash out of the window, to get in."

Gougon, was then called, and stated as follows: "We saw the broken window and went in. We took a case of eggs and a turkey. Fred and Bruce Roy were with me. I think it was about 11.30. The five chickens were not stole on the same night. We killed them at the place where we got them. We carried them to the house and put them in the summer kitchen. Fred Roy pulled the feathers off them."

"Did you have any fowl to eat at the house before?" asked Mr. Wood.

"I don't remember; we had meat. Do you remember what you had for dinner last week?"

Mr. Wood: "Yes I think I could. Prisoner: "Well I couldn't."

CITY'S PRIVATE BILL WAS WELL RECEIVED

Clause in Regard to the Bonner-Worth By-law Was Passed by the Committee—Other Clauses Were Successful, Not One Application Being Refused.

The members of the deputation from the City Council, which waited upon the members of the Private Bills Committee of the Ontario Legislature yesterday morning to further the city's legislation before that committee returned from Toronto last night highly satisfied with the reception accorded the bill. Not a clause was turned down, although two were amended and one laid over for further consideration.

The deputation consisted of his Worship Mayor Morrow, Ald. Graham, chairman of the Legal Committee; Ald. Duncan, City Solicitor E. H. D. Hall, City Clerk Armstrong, Industrial Commissioner Duggan, Rev. Father McColl, Messrs. D. O'Connell B. F. Ackerman, Thomas Fortye and R. H. Leary.

The first clause, which asked for authority to expend $4,000 that had been raised for work on certain bridges and culverts and not spent, on other bridges and culverts in the city, was approved of by the committee.

The second clause in regard to the Peterborough Cereal Company was also passed without opposition. Some time ago the city gave the Peterborough Cereal Company a piece of land at the foot of Simcoe street, then under water, on the conditions that they should erect building and employ a certain number of men, or in the event of their failing to carry out these conditions they were to be given permission to pay $1,000 to the city and get the land. The Company has carried out the conditions, but they were desirous of paying $1,000 and obtaining the land, so that they could sell a portion to the Otonabee Power Company for a sub-station. It was not clear in the by-law whether even on payment of $1,000 they could carry out their transaction with the Otonabee Power Company, so the city placed a clause in the bill to make it clear and the clause was passed by the Committee. The clause confirming the Bonner-Worth by-law was also carried, after a short discussion in the course of which Mr. Fisher the member for North Brant, paid a very high compliment to Messrs. Bonner and Worth, the heads of the company. He stated that he knew both gentlemen well, was satisfied that they knew their business thoroughly and were thoroughly fine men. His only regret was that the conditions were not such as to lead them to start their factory in Paris. He congratulated Peterborough on their coming to that city and would not be greatly surprised if their enterprise turned out to be one of the city's best industries.

The clauses asking for confirmation of the by-laws, fixing the assessment of B. F. Ackerman & Co., at $15,000 and the Peterborough Lock Manufacturing Company at $25,000, were passed with this amendement, that there will have to be a vote of the ratepayers taken upon them and the measures must receive the consent of three-fifths of those who vote.

The clauses dealing with the proposed agreement between the city and the Protestant Home and House o fProvidence were laid over for further consideration and will likely be taken up on Thursday of next week. There was no opposition to the clause confirming the by-law granting a gas and oil franchise to C. E. Dittman.

Nearly All Subscriptions To Chimes Are Paid Up Progress Of The Fund

Since the announcement on Saturday in regard to the enlargement of the People's Chimes, $75 has come in in new subscriptions, with many encouraging expressions of opinion, and it is evident that the people of Peterborough will see the enterprise through to a satisfactory finish. Old subscriptions are also being paid up and only thirty-six remain unpaid. Out of town donations have been received from Mrs. Ketchum (Miss M. J. Davidson) of Toronto, and from Mrs. Gossage (Miss G. E. Davidson), of Gravenhurst. The cash receipts to date amount to the handsome sum of $5,438.59, including $300 for one of the extra bells. The whole cost will be about $6,100. This difference between cost and the actual cash on hand should be easily met by unpaid subscriptions and prospective subscriptions from the public. The matter of assisting the People's Chimes enterprise is under consideration by several fraternal bodies. In a letter received from a lady residing in a town possessing the chimes, she says, "It is beautiful to see here on a summer evening old men and women sitting on their steps listening to the bells. Sick people have told me that their cheerful message helped them wonderfully."

DATE OF MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS.

The legislation now being discussed by the Ontario Legislature proposing to change the date of holding municipal elections, depends for its value upon its exact requirements. It goes without saying that the present date in the height of the holiday season does not tend to a concentration of popular interest upon the issues involved. Nearly everybody except the candidates, is thinking of almost everything else than municipal politics. This is one cause of the generally ineffective representation and administration in connection with civic matters in general. The utter indifference, which the public as a rule feel the year round is, to a large extent, continued during the election fortnight because public attention is concentrated upon the festivities of the season. Thus to a considerable degree civic representatives are elected at random; their past services, if old candidate offer, either good or bad are not canvassed, and no adequate inquiry is made as to the capabilities of new candidates. For these reasons if, for no other the date of the elections might well be changed. Anything that will tend to arouse a deeper interest in municipal matters, especially as associated with the choice of representatives should be encouraged. As to the dates to which a change might be made with advantage, some suggest the middle of January—after the accounts for the year have been closed and the municipal balance ascertained. Others propose the middle of December, arguing that it would be a good thing for the new council to take office at the beginning of the calendar year. However the date is a matter of easy arrangement. It is subordinate in importance to the removal of the date of elections from the height of the holiday season.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

With half a continent of virgin watershed to draw from Ottawa is drinking in disease and death in the form of witches' broth pumped through her water mains. With millions spent on a water works system, Toronto has to depend for a cup of cold water upon the water skins of a few nomads.

A man in the United States, named Champ Clark, who is pulling wires for the presidential nomination, declared in the House of Representatives, "We are preparing to annex Canada." If he finds it as hard to get elected president of the United States, as to annex Canada, he will long remain the wind bag and blatherskite his unfounded and bumptious utterances pronounce him.

THE BRITISH PREFERTNCE.

(Montreal Witness)

The best way to test the loyalty of the flag wavers who are slandering the government and the majority of the people by accusing them of not being true to the British empire, is to try them with another reduction of our tariff towards Great Britain. We have always presumed that such a reduction was behind this reciprocity movement. It was indeed implied in the assurances given to the country that nothing would be done that could lessen the British preference. The extremely disloyal, vicious and wicked attack that has been made upon all true Canadians by the organs of the intrests seems to call for an immediate challenge. You want trade to flow east and west, do you? So do we. Then let us remove the shackles that you have imposed on our trade with England. Let us by all means have another slash at the anti-British duties.

THE MEANING OF FREE TRADE

(Toronto Star)

President Taft has repudiated the annexationist utterances of Mr. Champ Clark. Mr. Clark is welcome to beliefs which will never be realized, but he voiced them at an ill-chosen time. By doing so he left the unfortunate impression that Americans see a close connection between reciprocity and annexation. This is far from being the case. It was the very height of the United States tariff which at one time caused some Canadians to talk annexation. They saw no other means of reaching the United States market. But now Canadians are to have the United States market without yielding one whit of their independence.

To the situation which arises from Mr. Clark's outburst, the comparison of the ugly fence between adjacent properties may again be applied. Such a fence is the tariff. The owners of both properties agree that part if it should be removed, and they accordingly take it down. Their action has not the slightest effect upon the question of ownership. It does not signify a merging of the two lots. It merely means that an unsightly and unnecessary fence is being taken away. In one of the lots, however, a little boy looks across to the next yard, and makes a boy-like boast that "Pa's going to own that, too, some day." That is Champ Clark.

But if he made a dozen such boasts it would not alter the fact that the taking down of the fence has nothing to do with the ownership of the properties.

HOLD DOWN THESE STOCKS.

(Globe)

The Montreal Star has been making an appeal to Sir Wilfrid Laurier, "the one man who can save Canada." A month ago, according to the Star, certain very foolish, if not, indeed, treasonable, members of his Government went down to Washington and were given a present of "a Trojan Horse." The Star feels certain that reciprocity horse will bring ruin upon us. Listen:—"If we turn the swollen stream of our food exports away from the west-east lines that carry it to the British market and send it along north-south lines to the American market—or, rather, the American 'middleman'—we will utterly shatter the costly steel framework of this nation and debase the Dominion to a string of subject Provinces serving the convenience of the nearest American centres. The 'bridge' over the wilderness north of Lake Superior will be broken. Confederation will be cut at a half-dozen vital points."

That is a very lamentable prospect. For a few days after the Star's prophecy business men held their breath awaiting the first tremendous crash of "the costly steel framework of this nation." But a curious thing happened. The C. P. R. is, of course the most important part of the costly framework." On the day upon which the "Trojan Horse" was turned over to Canada—that is to say, when the reciprocity agreement was signed—C. P. R. stock sold at 209½. Yesterday, after all the talk of ruin to our railways, as a result of the "breaking of the bridge" over the wilderness and the cutting out of the east and west haul, C. P. R. sold at over 212. If there are any patriots among the operators in C. P. R. let them keep both hands on the stock. Should it go up any higher its flight will indicate all too plainly that there is not a bit of real apprehension of injury to Canadian railways as a result of freer trade with our neighbours.

Take the canners' case also. The canners are still protesting that ruin stares them in the face. Yet the price of Canadian Canners common, which was 48 when the agreement was made, has already advanced to 57. The holders of the stock are thinking of memorializing Mr. Fielding to send on some more canned ruin and lay in a stableful of Trojan Horses.

THE EDUCATIONAL BUNGLING OF THE WHITNEY ADMINISTRATION

(London Advertiser)

The scarcity of teachers in Ontario is becoming so serious as to make the problem of increased supply one of the first importance. The thick-and-thin supporters of the Hon. Dr. Pyne's administration are trying to rest the blame on the alleged emigration of Ontario teachers to the western provinces. This explanation of the scarcity comes from ignorance or insincerity. Why should there be more emigration of teachers from Ontario now than formerly? Dr. Pyne boasts that he has greatly increased the salaries. Naturally when there is but one qualified teacher for every two or three schools, the salaries will go up. If salaries were low and teachers had difficulty in finding vacant schools, then there would be reason in the claim that teachers are seeking schools outside of the Province. Further, the western provinces are getting their school systems and training methods completely organized. Formerly they depended on the east for their supply of trained teachers, and as they offered larger salaries, the westward emigration of our teachers was greater some years ago than now.

Examination of the published official reports shows the real reason for the scarcity, and that is the abolition of the county model schools — a change that deprived the poor man's child of the chance to teach, and enormously increased the cost of teacher-training to the Province.

The official report for 1906 is at hand from which we quote the last full model school statistics, showing that 369 males and 1,361 females—a total of 1,750—were enrolled in the model schools of the Province for that year. Turning to the latest report of the present Minister of Education, we find that the total number enrolled in all the Normal Schools was only 121 males and 1,042 females—a total of 1,163. But only slightly more than half of these are recruits; the remainder have taught before. That is, instead of the 1,750 entering the profession there were scarcely 600 in 1909.

To particularize for Southwestern Ontario, the year-book quoted above shows that in 1906 there were in the model schools of the district now served by the London Normal School 352 students, distributed as follows: Middlesex 86, Lambton 34, Goderich 44, Kent 78, Essex 47, Ingersoll 19, Elgin 44, total 352. But this year at the London Normal School there are only 105 recruits to the profession—not one-third as many as five years ago. There were then two-thirds as many male teachers going into teaching as both sexes now entering upon the work. Sir James Whitney, when in Opposition, bemoaned that the schools were passing into the hands of girls, whereas now you do not hear a wail out of him, although there are to-day fewer young men going into teaching than ever, all over Ontario.

The truth is clear that it is not the emigration of teachers to the west that is causing the scarcity, but the incompetent management of the Hon. Dr. Pyne and his advisers. Neither of them had any experience with rural school conditions. If the hydro-electric commission had selected a pair of train despatchers to engineer the electrical construction works, it would have but been imitating Sir James Whitney's method of administering the provincial school system.

If all this disturbance, deprivation and increased cost resulted in higher efficency, it might be some consolation. But consider that when the Hon. Dr. Pyne took office the training given a second-class teacher consisted of three months' training in a county model school, and return, after some actual experience, for a full ten months' term at a normal school; whereas, now the whole training is put into a term of nine or ten months in a city normal school. Surely no one will say that the teacher-training inc is equal now to what it was years ago.

In spite of lessened emigration and increased salaries, the recruits are only about one-third what they were five years ago. This is the obvious glaring fact which explains the scarcity. So much for the cause. The result is that a vast amount of inferior teaching is now being done: 1,008 inferior certificates have been extended by the Government in its desperation. Some are teaching without any professional certificate, and some even without a non-professional certificate!

The Government's model school policy is as bad as its premier. Send it to school somewhere.

Burn Caused Open Sore

Zam-Buk Worked a Wonderful Cure

Sometimes a bad burn, a deep cut, or some similar injury, sets up a more permanent injury, in the form of an open discharging sore. In such cases Zam-Buk will be found of unequalled value.

Mr. J. Nixon, of 901 William Ave., Winnipeg, a blacksmith at the C. P. R. shops, had his foot badly burned by some molten metal falling upon it. He says: "The burn was a very bad one, and after the first few days it left an open sore, which showed marked signs of blood-poisoning. It discharged freely and caused me terrible agony. For three weeks I suffered acutely and could get no ease. At last I obtained a preparation from the doctor, which seemed to stop the discharging and made me quite hopeful, but finally the wound became as bad as ever.

"I was then advised to use Zam-Buk, and from the first application the balm gave me relief. The inflammation was thoroughly checked, and the poisonous matter cleared away in a very short time after beginning with Zam-Buk. Healing then began, and in less than two weeks the wound was thoroughly healed."

One of the main lessons of this case lies right here—try Zam-Buk first for any injury, sore, skin disease or wound. It is equally good for piles, blood-poisoning, festering wounds, chaps, cold sores, children's eruptions, scalp sores, varicose ulcers, chilblains, etc. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. box or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, upon receipt of price. You are warned against harmful substitutes and inferior preparations, which yield a bigger margin of profit and are sometimes pushed as being "just as good." Nothing is just as good.

INTERESTING LECTURE

There was a large attendance at the Forester's hall last night, when the Rev. Joseph Northey, of Belfast, Ireland, delivered an interesting lecture on "Derry, During the Siege and After." The lecture was illustrated with a splendid collection of lantern slides, many of which were taken from drawings of topographical sketches of the besieged city and its surroundings, its different points of strategy, and its forts. There were many slides taken from sketches of celebrated pictures, showing the old cathedral of Derry. The early part of the lecture was descriptive of the slides, showing the maps of Derry, Loch Fyle and the different points of interest. The walls were 24 feet high, six to ten feet thick, constructed of stone and clay. Around them was a ditch. When the tide was in the ditch was full of water. The city was a mile in circumference, with the market in the centre, and four streets running in four directions from the centre to the walls. A view of the old English Church cathedral with the guns on the top was most interesting.

The lecture was most enjoyable. Rev. Mr. Northey is a facile, interesting speaker, and we listened to with much pleasure.

Makes Hair Grow

The Tully Drug Store has an invigorator that will grow hair or money back.

The time to take care of your hair is when you have hair to take care of.

If your hair is getting thin, gradually falling out, it cannot be long before the spot appears.

The greatest remedy to stop the hair from falling is SALVIA, the Great American Hair Grower, first discovered in England. SALVIA furnishes nourishment to the hair roots and act so quickly that people are amazed.

And remember, it destroys the Dandruff germ, the little pest that saps the life that should go to the hair from the roots.

SALVIA is sold by The Tully Drug Store under a positive guarantee to cure Dandruff, stop Falling Hair and Itching Scalp in ten days, or money back. A large bottle costs 50c. The word "SALVIA" (Latin for sage) is on every bottle.

three glass jars and a wooden pail with water. Everyone in town was excited over the ice-pond water, and quite naturally, the Dean, being a man of science, would want someone to analyse it. But it did rather astonish the gardener when the dignified head of the college sent for the man to come to his study and said confidentially:

"I wish you would run down to the inn and see if there's some sort of story going the rounds about Dan Hawkins—the blind musician—seeing a ghost or something. I would like to know, because — for personal reasons."

"Yes, sir," said the gardener. "If I find Hawkins, I shall bring him up here."

"No," said the Dean. "I say, though, you might ask him to call at my house to-night, about 7 o'clock. You needn't say why. And you may as well take that water to my house, too."

Nothing else of importance happened during the day, and the Dean went home at his usual hour. He had his supper, and then retired to his study to await the arrival of Detective Sullivan. Had the detective been prompt to his appointment, he would have seen an interesting picture in this room. The Dean sat at his desk, which was piled high with heavy volumes, all dealing, to judge from their titles, with radium and its kindred elements. On the floor near him reposed several fruit jars and a large bucket filled with water of a muddy hue. Opposite him sat Dan Hawkins, staring with sightless sockets, straight ahead, and chafing under the silence imposed upon him by the Dean, who had asked him to refrain from repeating his wonderful story until another guest should have come. Now and then the Dean looked at his watch and wondered what was detaining the detective.

As a matter of fact, Sullivan had been in Graydon for some time previous to this. When he had been able to collect himself sufficiently to reason clearly, after sending the telegram to the Dean from Stamford, he found that the train would not stop at the junction where connections could be made for Graydon. Therefore, he would have to go on to Boston, and would not be able to get to the college town that night. This would not do. By further inquiry he learned that he could get off at a stop within forty miles of Graydon, and, by careful manipulation of the trolley schedule, not only reach his destination as quickly as though he had been able to make the railroad connection, but a full hour sooner. It would require a walk of a little over a mile from the end of the trolley, but he did not mind that.

A few minutes before six, therefore, found him approaching Graydon from a direction opposite to the railroad station. His road would take him past the college grounds and down the hill into the village. The college was silent, the last person having left it for the day. Sullivan looked at the building and his manner resumed the fierceness that had come over it at the moment he had found that Gordon and Ernesta were not aboard the train. His lips were still swollen from the blow which the young professor had struck him, and his eyes

BY RIDA JOHNSON-YOUNG

But he was too late. Already her glance had fallen upon the coupons, and from each one her own name stood forth in glaring distinctness. She sprang to her feet and faced the woefully embarrassed youth.

"Why, Jack Wright!" she flared; they're every one of them in my name! Every one of them. You dared? You dared do such a thing!"

Before he could reply or interfere she was down upon the fallen coupons, angrily, fearing them to fragments.

"Don't, Helene! Don't!" he entreated.

"Good Lord! There go all my lunches for the last two months."

"Lunches?" she echoed, amazement momentarily overcoming wrath. "Do you eat them?"

"No, I don't eat anything but my own words for lunch nowadays. Oh," he added, bitterly, "I might have known I was buying coupons for a girl who would not marry me, even if she got the lucky number."

"Marry you? You dared to think it for one moment. You placed me on a level with those horrible button women—those souvenir fiends! Oh, I'll never forgive you! Don't speak to me again. I cannot—"

Her half-tearful tirade was drowned below. A window smashed. Then another. A roaring chorus of high-pitched cries filled the air.

Mrs. Wright, Mrs. Peyton, Lizzie Roberts, Foxey, and one or two scared-looking servants dashed excitedly into the room.

"What's up!" queried Jack, in amaze.

Without replying, Foxey jumped to the telephone and called up police headquarters.

"Send the reserves—the mounted cops—anything you can spare—" he ordered, "to clear the street in front of my house."

From outside the noise was redoubling. Another window pane on the ground floor smashed.

"Jack!" almost wept Mrs. Peyton; "I do wish you'd stay home when you're going to do a thing like this. There are thousands and thousands of crazy women filling the whole street. They're trying to break in. They're the Lottery competitors, and somehow they have learned you are here."

"Go to the window, Jack and make a speech!" urged Foxey. "That may hold them till the police come. Go ahead! They'll be in here in another minute if you don't."

He half dragged, half shovedJack to the long window overlooking the street. At sight of the Lottery Man the mob outside set up a rapturous roar. The falsetto cries mingled with the tinkle of broken glass.

"Ladies!" shouted Jack, hoarsely, leaning far out, "Ladies—be gentlemen, I beg. "No, no, I don't mean that! I—"

"Brace up, you idiot!" urged Foxey.

"Brace up, you idiots," orated Jack, in full obedience. "When I gaze down upon the sea of upfaced turns—upturned faces—er, of so distinguished a—Ladies, in fact I may say—I am a believer in the rights of man, but I think no women should get off. I—"

The ring of the telephone broke off his idiotic words. He turned back into the room. Foxey had picked up the receiver.

"That you, Maguire?" Peyton was saying. "What's that? The lottery number's drawn? What is it? Say it again. Oh, 1323?"

"The Jonah number, coupled with the getaway sign," growled Jack, glancing surreptitiously at such coupons as he had saved from Helene. His mother and Foxey and Mrs. Peyton were also busily consulting their own heaps of coupons. One by one they laid down the bits of paper with hopeless shakes of the head.

"What did you say the lucky number was?" asked Lizzie Roberts.

"Thirteen twenty-three," answered Foxey. "And I haven't got it I wonder who—"

"I have!" cried Lizzie, in wheezy triumph, waving a solitary coupon. "The Lottery Man is mine! Oh, Jack, this is so sudden! I always knew I'd be married one of these days."

CHAPTER VIII.

The Winner and—A Loser.

No one, afterward, could remember just what happened when Lizzie threw that verbal bombshell into Jack Wright's air castles. There was some dim memory of her dry voice raised in an account of how she had "bought just one coupon, because she couldn't resist the temptation of trying to make dear Mrs. Wright happy." There was also a horrible recollection of an attempt on her part to sink gracefully into Jack's protecting arms.

Then Helene had suddenly vanished from the room and had been seen no more that day. Mrs. Wright had dragged the dazed Jack home, and Mrs. Peyton and Foxey had exhausted their combined efforts on keeping Lizzie from following the dimly retreating form of the man she had won.

Next morning Mrs. Peyton descended to the drawing room to find Lizzie seated majestically in the centre of the apartment, glancing over the contents of a wastepaper basketful of letters. It was Lizzie's custom to wake her employer each morning and to read the papers aloud, as, Mrs. Peyton dressed. This morning, the once obsequious companion had not been at her post.

"Why, Lizzie!" exclaimed Mrs. Peyton, in surprise, "what are you doing?"

"I am glancing through my correspondence," said Lizzie, with lofty aloofness. This morning I have received no less than 700 offers of marriage through the mail. If I refuse to marry Jack, you know, I will still have half his $300,000."

"And you will refuse him?" begged Mrs. Peyton, eagerly.

"Oh, no!" simpered Lizzie with an air of coquetry that suited her queer personality about as well as a diamond tiara would adorn a moulting hen. "I shall follow the dictates of my innocent young heart." Then, in calm dignity: "May I trouble you, to close that door behind you, Mrs. Peyton? The draught distresses me."

The utter change in her recently cringing companion robbed poor Mrs. Peyton of speech and of will power alike. Meekly she closed the door as she was commanded and sat down staring at Lizzie The latter was again opening envelopes.

"Some of these proposals are very ardent," she purred; "but I am not surprised. My personality has ever held a subtle charm for men. I shall keep the best of them and print them in my autobiography."

"In your what?" gasped Mrs. Peyton.

"My autobiography. The Examiner has offered me $1,500 to write it I think I shall entitle it 'Up from Bondage!'"

Mrs. Peyton could only gasp in horrified fascination. Foxey broke the spell by hurrying noisily into the room.

Vigorous Veteran

Mr. Sheafer, 74 years of age, is a hale and hearty old gentleman. His fine condition is entirely due to Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey.

He writes: "I have lived a life of continuous exposure. Ten years ago the many hardships I had endured began to tell upon me and I became very weak and run down. A friend recommended Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. I began to use it faithfully, and to-day, at seventy-four, I am hale and hearty and my good health and bodily strength are due to the regular use of this great tonic." A. M. Sheafer, Liberty, Ind.

"THE INNOCENT MURDERERS"

By Wm. Johnston and Paul West

"Let us find der body!"

"What!" Rice and Snyder spoke in unison, but their word was in the manner of an exclamation, not an interrogation. They both caught Fischer's meaning at once.

"I mean," the German continued, "as long as somebody has got to find it, let us. Let us lead a searching party. Let us, as scientists, volunteer to find out vot rod strange glow Dundeden—vell?" He waved his hand as though dispelling every cloud that now dimmed their horizon, and sank back into his chair with a sigh of satisfaction.

"Fischer," said Rice, "you have solved it! You have solved it!"

"You have saved our lives," declared Snyder.

"Ugh!" said Fischer, trying to look modest.

It was agreed then, that that was to be their method of procedure, and they went about their day's work with the lightest hearts they had known in many hours. Dean Quimby noted the change of demeanour in his associates, and was at a loss to account for it. Had they heard from Hopkins? Was the wandering scholar coming back? What was it? He wished that Sullivan were in Graydon so that he could confer with him.

During the day the Dean received two very important communications. One was from Professor Gordon, and was dated New York and sent by special delivery. It ran as follows:

"My Dear Dean,

I am writing to beg your pardon for my sudden departure from Graydon yesterday. It was entirely unexpected and I cannot fully explain it in this letter. I assure you, however, that it was absolutely necessary, as I shall convince you upon my return.

"I say 'upon my return', but I do not know whether I shall return. At least, I cannot say with absolute certainty when it will take place. I am undergoing a course of severe mental torture, the nature of which I cannot confide in you. The result may be that I shall return to-day; perhaps not for some days. Perhaps, but I trust not, never.

"In any case, I beg that you will believe that anything which I have done, anything that you may hear that I have done, has been done for the best motives. Furthermore, if I may speak for another, let me assure you that the disgraceful gossip concerning an estimable young lady of the college and Professor Hopkins is with absolutely no foundation.

"I beg your pardon for this unmanly effusion. I wish I could say what is in me to say, but I cannot. Whatever happens, my esteemed sir, I thank you for your many kindnesses to me, and beg to be allowed to sign myself,

"Yours sincerely,
"Geoffrey Gordon."

When the Dean had read and reread this letter half a dozen times, he wiped his glasses, sighed and said:

"I really do wish that detective were here."

As the next best thing, there came a telegram from Sullivan. It said:

"Get samples of ice-pond water. Investigate story of Dan Hawkins about seeing ghost. Have books on radium ready for me and watch Fischer, Snyder and Rice. Astounding developments in Hopkins case. Will arrive six forty-five."

"Bless me!" exclaimed the Dean. "What's the matter? Watch Snyder, Rice and Fischer! Good Lord! What a marvelous man, to know already that there is a change in those professors since yesterday! Where was the telegram from? Stamford, Conn. He must have travelled further than he expected. And Gordon's letter from New York! Maybe Sullivan—Pshaw! This is no matter for me to try and figure out. I simply cannot! Oh, I wish that he would arrive!"

But he followed out Sullivan's request—or instruction—to the letter, and obtained from the college library all the literature on Radium that it contained. He even asked some of the professors if they had any volumes on the subject. When he chanced to meet Snyder in the hall and asked him, the Dean was surprised at the other's actions. Snyder came along the hall looking quite cheerful, for him. Certainly he appeared to be in a better frame of mind than the Dean had seen him during the first part of the week. He greeted the Dean with a cordial "Good-morning," and was about to pass, when the Dean said:

"Oh, by the way, Professor Snyder, do you happen to have any books on Radium in your room?"

Snyder's face turned the colour of parchment. He looked at the Dean with glassy eyes. He stammered something to the effect that he didn't know anything about the new metal, and fled precipitately, leaving the older man looking after him in open-mouthed wonder.

"Watch Snyder!" said the Dean to himself. "I should think he ought to be watched. He's insane!"

It did not surprise the gardener to have the Dean direct him to go over to Quimby's ice-pond and fill two or

INFANTILE PARALYSIS

A Germ Disease Which is Baffling the Doctors and Alarming the People Generally

It may be said that doctors are only agreed on two points regarding this much dreaded disease.

First, that it is a germ disease, and, second, like all germ diseases can only be fought with pure, rich blood.

Prevention is always the better way and that is why we are always talking about the wisdom of keeping the blood pure and rich and the nerves healthy and strong by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Rich, red blood is a deadly foe to disease germs whether they are germs of infantile paralysis, of colds, of consumption or any other disease.

Don't let the blood get thin and watery. Don't let the nerves get exhausted. The risk is too great. Every dose of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food goes to the formation of a certain amount of pure, rich blood. For this reason you are certain to benefit by this treatment.

You need not wait until you have some form of paralysis before testing this great medicine. Be warned by headaches, sleeplessness, irritability, failing memory and power of concentrating the mind. Restore the system while still you have something to build on.

Get new energy and vigour into the system by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. 50 cents a box, 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

HAD KIDNEY TROUBLE.

COULD NOT CROSS THE FLOOR PAIN WAS SO GREAT.

Miss Hazel Hess, Winchester Springs, Ont., writes:—"I was troubled with my kidneys for five years. They were so bad, at times, I could not cross the floor for the pain. The doctor could not do me any good and a friend advised me to use Doan's Kidney Pills. I bought six boxes and now I have been cured for over four years. I will recommend them to every sufferer."

No woman can be strong and healthy unless the kidneys are well. When the kidneys are ill, the whole body is ill, for the poisons which the kidneys ought to filter out of the blood are left in the system. Then how important it must be to see to it that this system of sewerage be not clogged up.

Doan's Kidney Pills are a purely vegetable medicine, realizing quick, permanent relief, without any after ill effects. A medicine that will absolutely cure backache and all forms of kidney and bladder trouble.

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c. per box or 3 for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

If ordering direct specify "Doan's."

FAIR DIRECTORS DISCUSS THE QUESTION OF PURCHASING PERMANENT SHOW GROUNDS

Many Good Suggestions Were Made During Discussion That Followed an Informal Banquet Last Night---Board is Unanimous That Grounds Should Be Bought.

The Peterborough Industrial Exhibition Board held a supper and meeting in Hooper's palm parlours last evening, and a very enjoyable as well as profitable time was spent. A very sumptuous supper was served, after which the question regarding the Exhibition grounds was discussed. Mr. R. Leary, President of the Board, was in the chair, and other able speakers were also present. Mr. Leary, in speaking of the social part of the evening, said: "If we had more of these little social events, we would be drawn closer together, and it would be for the better of the Fairs of the Province. I think that we should hold a banquet similar to that of the Canadian Club, and send out invitations to speakers to address us, and in this way we will increase our knowledge on the subject, and in some future time we will get grounds of our own. It surprises me, gentlemen, to find out the amount of good the Fairs are doing. Regarding stock breeding, there is a shortage of Holstein cattle in Ontario, and they are at present in great demand. From 1909 to 1910 the amount of increase was over $10,000,000. Talk about reciprocity, and the fact that horses will come here from the other side; well there is a shortage of horses here, and the horses have got to come from some place, for we have not enough here. It is up to the people of Ontario to produce horses, and the Fall Fairs are a great help to them. However, gentlemen, the main object of our meeting this evening, is to talk over the improving of the conditions of our Fair grounds. There are a whole lot of things that we have to learn, and we must meet to discuss them, and now is the time to do it. You are all alive to the conditions of our grounds. Our lease runs out in another year, and the present intention of the Board is to go on another year, and as they are, it is almost impossible to place exhibits. We agreed to put up $10,000 worth of buildings if the Council would purchase the ground. It would be a shame to let the Fair go down and the money go to the Provincial government, after us striving to get it, but we cannot go on in the old building. The present intention is to hold a banquet in the middle of March, and have all the business men and farmers attend, and discuss the business. We have a verbal option of $30,000 on the grounds.

Mr. V. Eastwood, in expressing his sentiments of the case, said: "It might be advisable to have five or six options on different properties before the banquet is held. I suggest that a committee be appointed to get the option on the lands for the Fair Grounds."

Mr. Leary said that there was no land suitable except at the south end. Mr. Collins made an offer yesterday of $10,000 for twenty acres on Mr. Hetherington's farm; there are also several others. These lots are situated just south of the present grounds and west of the range of lots this side of the cemetery. Then there are twenty acres of the Hurley estate and ten acres of Mr. Jackson's farm, and ten acres south of Mr. Hurley's, belonging to Mr. Lavassieur. The necessity of having the car line to run near the grounds was also taken into consideration."

Mr. Geo. M. Elliott: "A grand stand will not cost less than $5,000. We need this, and if we had it, we would have the best fair between Toronto and Ottawa. When we hear of Lindsay and some of the northern towns speaking of having as good a fair as ours, it is time for us to get busy. We need the new buildings to have a good fair."

Mr. J. J. Turner, Sr.: "I am in favour of purchasing the present grounds. There is no better grounds, or situation in the city. Then the race track is one of the best in Canada, and the street cars run right to the gate. People have got a habit of going down there, and I would like to see the grounds bought, for I don't think they will be bought for $30,000 in a few years. I will be willing to put my share in. In a few years, I know we will be able to have a week's show, and I am in favour of the present grounds, and would like to take action at once. I think it would be a mistake to sell any of the grounds. If we had those grounds, we would have heart to go ahead. Our stores and manufactories are going ahead, and our Fair should be in keeping with the rest. None of us are making any money out of it, but we should all be willing to do our share to help in the building up of the Exhibition. People say that we should not have a midway, but I differ from that. Everybody does not want to look at horses and cattle. The merry-go-round, and railway were quite an attraction last year. People are beginning to recognise Peterborough exhibition as being important.

I think tenders should be let for people to put up dining booths and tents, and we should advertise for responsible people to do this, for good meals on grounds are an attraction. I am sure that this year, we will be better than ever. There are a great number of merchants who will come and we need them bad. I hope and trust that this Exhibition will grow and grow fast. We have a good President at the head and I am proud of him. He was elected 2nd Vice-President of the Fairs Association, and I felt satisfied that he would win out in the election as he was the best looking man there. Mr. Collins was also elected one of the auditors."

Mr. Wm. Collins: "I am as much stuck on the present grounds as Mr. Turner, but all we want is the money and we will soon get the ground. Wet weather does not affect the present grounds. The fence costs considerable too. It will cost $340.00 to rebuild the fence that was burned down."

Mr. J. H. Garbutt: "A gathering like this tends to strengthen the interest in these matters. The purchase of grounds is a matter of much discussion, and the directors felt quite a responsibility in purchasing buildings. A fair brings stock together and thereby increases the output of stock, because they know where the standard brands are located. The Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association is establishing a Cow Testing Association. I do not know that I can say anything regarding the purchasing of grounds. I would rather have the opinions of others.

Mr. Conway, Finance Minister: "I might say that the receipts last year were $600 over the year before. It does not show on account of the additional expenses, but we were all of the opinion that the east gate took the most money, but the horse gate in the west almost equalled it. I think the west gate will be better in future. $7200 was the receipts last year, and the year before they were $2600, so you see the increase. Many people had meals on the ground last year, but we had not accommodation for them all, and we suffered at least to the extent of $100. In 1909, the grand stand receipts were $300 and in 1910 they were $400, and that with the old grand stand. If we had a new grand stand, look what the receipts would be. Mr. Turner might cover the top of it with canvas — as a gift to the Exhibition."

Ald. Buller: "I do not know that I can say anything further than has been said. I always tried to push forward the Exhibition, and I think that the present grounds are best for all purposes. If a by-law was passed to gaurantee a bond for these grounds, I think that more interest would be taken in the matter, and something might be accomplished. I cannot understand why the Board does not go to the County Council for money; they should give something. Organize a good strong committee to look after that part of it. I am willing to do anything that I can at any time to help the Society."

Mr. Leary: "It would require three-fifths of the people who vote to carry such a by-law, but I think it would go through. Lindsay is buying this year an acre and a half, with a brick house on it, to add to the seventeen acres they have already. We do not want to be put in a position like that. If we had ground and ten thousand dollars worth of buildings, we could hold a week's fair. Advertise and you can bring the people in in trains, loads, but you want to have something to show them when they come. We should not sell any of the ground; we will need every foot. Move the grounds farther south and the receipts will fall off. One thing that we need is an attraction at the east entrance. You would be ashamed to acknowledge to your friends that that is all we have here. We spoke of the leak at the gates other years; we need turn stiles, and a grand stand would also pay."

Moved by Mr. V. Eastwood, seconded by Mr. G. Elliott, that the committee to get the before mentioned options on all the desirable property be, Mr. Leary, President, and Ald. Buller. Mr. Leary asked that Mr. Eastwood also be on the committee. — Carried.

Mr. Robt. Fair: "I am much impressed with the question discussed regarding the grounds. I am also in favour of the attractions. I feel that the city council would be safe in guaranteeing the bond. We might arrange with the city council to put their grant in the form of a bond. We might get ground at $15,000 or $20,000, but as a citizen I would take pleasure in promoting a scheme of purchasing the present grounds."

Mr. Leary: "We got $100 from the county and $400 from the city. I wish our city fathers would come forward as they do in other cities and give us, say, $1,000."

Mr. Elliott: "We have been successful in establishing a system of giving fair prizes, and that is a great drawing card. I suggest that you get either city or county to guarantee bonds, and I don't think it will to sell any of the land. In the matter of getting bonds, you might get up against something over which the county council has no power."

Mr. G. A. Gillespie: "The March meeting is to be held principally to discuss the advanced state of cow testing. I think that cow testing will be quite a big thing in the next nine or ten years. I suggest that a prize be given for the best herd or any herd that goes into cow testing work. It would be worth while for the Association to grant a prize. I am quite in favour of purchasing the present grounds.

Mr. Collins: "I forgot to mention that the present buildings are worth probably $5,000, and I want to state that I am as much in favour of purchasing the present grounds as any man here."

Mr. Scott: "I am in favour of purchasing the present grounds and will do all I can to help. I suggest that a subscription be taken up among the prominent farmers; there are lots of ways of getting the neccessary money."

Mr. F. H. Dobbin: "If there were 60, 70 or 80 samples of wheat and a variety of other such stuff, it would be better. The only way to make a Fair successful, is to get the exhibits and not the attractions. You should not look at the 25c. you get, but you should try and give the man the value of it. Your committee should consider what you are going to keep the building and grounds remunerated with. There must be a good fence, and the ground will not hold a fence. It keeps heaving out and leaning over; besides, the cost of such a fence is expensive. In financing, you will probably need to make it a stock proposition. It is better to get the ground now before the price advances."

Mr. Denne and Mr. Young, of Ennismore, also spoke and expressed their pleasure at the opinions, and Mr. Denne suggested that they hold an Old Boys Re-union on the First of

FAIR DIRECTORS MEET

July. Mr. Leary agreed with this proposition; he thought that they should try and confine the amusements to the city and not spend their money in other places.

Ex-Ald. Phelan thought that it would be advisable to get the grounds at once. He thought to get grounds further out of town would be a great disadvantage. He said that he was not a member now, but all he could say was, 'to go right after the Finance committee.' He also told them that they could rely on him for assistance.

Mr. Conway said that the surplus last year was $100 and that they should aim at economy, and try to have a surplus this year of $3,000.

Dr. King and other speakers also expressed their approval at the nature of the opinions that had been expressed, and hoped that things would turn along the line now aimed at.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

THERE is a certain variety of coward quite common in modern society whose cowardice is of such a peculiar sort that he doesn't often hear it called by its proper name.

So I am going to give him a chance to enjoy that unusual sensation to-day.

The coward I refer to is the person who writes anonymous letters.

Don't you agree with me in the name I give him?

Just a few days ago I heard of a case where a whole family's peace and happiness were almost entirely destroyed by one of these attacks in the dark.

An anonymous letter came to the elder of two sisters telling her that her younger sister was saying very terrible things about her behind her back and was trying to win her fiance away from her.

Of course the girl should have known enough to show the letter to her sister at once but unfortunately she didn't.

Instead she brooded over the accusations until she began to believe them true, and—like all jealous people—found plenty of confirmation of her suspicions in the behaviour of her sister and fiance.

The result was a bitter quarrel, passionate accusations and recriminations, a broken engagement and a family feud.

The older girl, still unconvinced of the untruth of the communication, has left her home refusing to live under the same roof as her younger sister.

The man, who really and truly loved his fiancee, appears to be on the high road to the bowwows.

I wonder if the person who wrote that letter is satisfied. As trouble of some sort was what he—or more likely "she"—was probably looking for, I presume.

I wonder also if there is an especial circle in Hades for this kind of person. If there is any Hades at all, I suspect so.

Myself, I receive many anonymous letters because of this column. Some are from people who tell me such private matters that they do not give their names for fear they might be published.

I can thoroughly understand their attitude although I am glad of this opportunity to give them my word of honour that I will never publish a name if asked not to.

Others—and it makes me proud of the American public to say that they are very few comparatively—get under cover of anonymousness to throw stones of abuse at me. I truly like open criticism but I must say I haven't any use for these people—and I could put it more strongly if urged.

Perhaps someone may remind me that anonymous letters are sometimes written in a spirit of kindness and with intent to help.

I can see how that might be, but my advice in that case is: If you want to write an anonymous letter to help someone do so by all means ONLY—sign your name to it.

THE SOUTH END RESIDENTS WILL MAKE A PROTEST

Against Closing of Four Streets as Proposed by the C. P. R. Railway---Mass Meeting Was Held at R. C. Braund's Store Last Night.

A mass meeting of the indignant residents of the south end was held in Mr. R. C. Braund's store last night for the purpose of framing a resolution protesting against the closing of four streets in that section by the C.P.R.

The meeting was opened by Mr. Braund. He said that the meeting did not concern the C. G. E. siding whatever, as a great many people were led to believe it did. The C. P. R. made an appeal to the old Council, to the effect that they be permitted to close four of the streets including Chamberlain street, and they would put all sidings west of Chamberlain street. Mr. Braund said that if the railroad were permitted to take that route it would prove to be a detriment to those living in the south end. He said it would have a tendency to drive away prospective manufacturers, as at present there were a lot of choice selections for industries of all kinds. That could not be said of other sections of the city, as the best of the sites had been taken up. Mr. Braund proposed that the railroad be compelled to build as many subways as streets they close. He said that he was right in the centre of conflict. Should he move south he would lose the north half of his business, and vice versa. His property would be ruined.

There were two councillors present—Ald. Buller and Ald. Morgan. Mr. Braund here called on Ald. Buller to give his version of the case.

In his opening remarks, Ald. Buller said that he was pleased to meet so many voters of the South Ward. He always entertained a kindly feeling towards this ward because his home was there. In referring to the question in hand he said that last year the C.P.R. came to an agreement whereby they would construct a subway at Mervin's. The matter then remained quiet for some time. Later they were notified by the Railway Commissioners that they intended to close the streets in question. He said that he had always been ready to oppose any cutting up of the streets or putting in sidings. He cited another case in which he had been put to a great expense in going to interview the Railway Commissioners, in regard to the construction of some sidings. The Commissioners eventually overruled him and gave the G. T. R. permission to put in their sidings. He said that on the 24th of this month, the Mayor, accompanied by another representative, would have a chance to go to Toronto and meet the Railway Commissioners and demand that a siding or subway be put in at Mervin's. It would be a hard proposition, for the Government itself had no power over the Railway Commissioners.

Mr. Braund had a rough plan of the district, showing the streets that were to be closed.

Ald. Morgan said that the plan was more intelligible than the one produced by the Company's engineer at the Council meeting. He advocated that Mr. Braund go with the Mayor and see that he (the Mayor) does what he is sent to do.

Mr. Braund said that that was his intention, and he was prepared to go at his own expense, if it would only do some good. He had spent about $25.00 over the matter already.

After a little more discussion had taken place it was decided to hold another meeting next Wednesday, to decide whether it would be advisable to send a resolution to Toronto.

"MY CINDERELLA GIRL"

A Special Musical Play, Secured for the Hardware Men's Convention

One of the most important theatrical offerings in sight for the remainder of the season is "My Cinderella Girl," the musical farce which broke all records for attendance and receipts at the Whitney Opera House, Chicago, during the past summer.

The play is from the pen of Richard Walton Tully, who is best known as co-author with David Belasco of "The Rose of The Rancho" and also for his dramatization of "The Firing Line."

The many tuneful musical numbers in "My Cinderella Girl" were composed by William Frederic Peters, who is also responsible for the score of "The Mayor of Tokio" and other notable comic opera successes.

It has been artistically staged by William Norris, the famous creator of "King Dodo," "The Burgomaster" and other successful comic opera characters, while the chorus evolutions were originated and rehearsed by Herr Augustus Sohlke who is responsible for the staging of the many musical productions produced at the La Salle and other Chicago theatres devoted to musical comedy.

"My Cinderella Girl" will appear here with the Chicago cast practically intact, assisted by a chorus of unusual beauty. It should and probably will prove one of the very best attractions which we have ever had.

Some of the many song hits are "Put the Ball over the Fan McCann," "Will All My Dreams Come True," "I'd Rather be a Friend of Yours Than Someone Else's Dear," "Won't you let me creep into your Heart, Captain Mutt' and "Just Get Me Right."

The locale of the comedy is the mythical Siwash College which has been exploited largely by the Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post. It is supposedly a co-educational institution and consequently the many pretty girls appearing are legitimately introduced.

The engagement is for one night only, Wednesday, Feb. 22. The sale of seats opens on Monday morning.

YESTERDAY IN HOUSE

Debate on Reciprocity Still Goes On With Conservative Speakers Occupying the Floor of Commons Nearly All Day

PROPHESY DISASTER

Ottawa, Feb. 17.—The orators to the left of the Speaker took up most of the time yesterday picking holes in the tariff argument. H. Lennox declared that the whole thing was a conspiracy on the part of Asquith, Laurier and Taft, to destroy Imperialism.

Continuing the debate on the reciprocity agreement, Haughton Lennox (South Simcoe), said that it could not be stated with truth that no interests had been sacrificed, in view of the representations made to the Government by the fruit growers. He criticized the Government for having made the agreement without consulting Parliament and without having a mandate from the people, and said that Canada now has an order-in-council Government.

Referring to the argument advanced by Hugh Guthrie on Wednesday, that it was not wise to ignore geographical conditions, he would remind Mr. Guthrie and the Government that the United States had insisted for forty years on ignoring geographical conditions.

Mr. Lennox did not believe that there was any reason to believe in view of the fact that the price of wheat was fixed in Liverpool, that there would be any substantial increase for the Canadian farmers. The wheat would, however, find it way to the market via American routes. Mr. Guthrie had dilated on the immense benefits which would result to Eastern Canada should one million more farmers settle in the west. It would not do Canada much good if their products were shipped to and through the United States.

A considerable list of articles which Britain could supply had been placed on the free list, and, owing to the longer haul from the Mother Country, the U. S. would have a distinct advantage. This was discrimination against Great Britain.

A. B. Warburton (Queen's, P.E.I.) took up cudgels on behalf of the island province. He did not believe in placing the tariff altogether under the control of a permanent committee, because it would abrogate the duties of the Ministers of the crown. In all matters of fiscal policy, the Government should assume full responsibility. He did not agree with the argument of the Opposition that Canada should leave well enough alone. That would eliminate any question of future progress.

In reply to Mr. Lennox's statement that the U. S. would receive an advantage over the Mother Country regarding goods on the free list by reason of discriminatory rates, due to the longer haul, he said it costs us more to bring freight from Halifax to Prince Edward Island, than from Liverpool to Halifax; and so it likewise cost more to bring goods from New York than from both ports.

J. E. Armstrong (E. Lambton), prefaced his remarks by drawing a scheme for imperial trade. The meaning of Confederation was the welding together of the British Empire. Everything a nation needs was grown in the British Empire. Canada had the grain, minerals and lumber. Australia produced meat and wool. India and Egypt provided the cotton, and Britain herself was the manufacturing clearing house. This was a combination that could not be beaten. Reciprocity with the U. S. was the first step towards empire disintegration.

Picturing an era of trade depression and financial ruin in Canada when the railways would be without tonnage and the great lake ports would be without cargoes. Mr. Armstrong charged that the Finance Minister, in his local campaigns in Nova Scotia, had preached secession. He feared direct taxation would follow. There was no object in offering amendments to the deal; an amendment would void the whole agreement.

Additional light was thrown upon the agreement by answers by Mr. Fielding to questions put by S. Sharp (North Ontario).

In the case of a few articles which are not to be found in the French treaty, the favored nation countries will be entitled to receive the concessions on the same terms as the United States, but France will not be so entitled. Although not arising from any agreement, in no case has any advantage been granted to any foreign country that did not extend at the same time to all parts of the British Empire. In the few cases to which the rates to be established are lower than those already enjoyed by British countries, the reductions will apply to such countries.

Mr. Sharp asked if, at the recent conferences at Washington, any understanding was reached that the Canadian tariff on articles not specifically mentioned in the treaty would not be included.

Mr. Fielding replied: "There is no understanding of any kind except what is found in the correspondence and schedules already before the House."

Helpful Hints On Hair Health

Scalp and Hair Troubles Generally Caused by Carelessness

Dandruff is a contagious disease caused by a microbe which also produces baldness. Never use a comb or brush belonging to some one else. No matter how cleanly the owner may be, these articles may be infected with microbes, which will infect your scalp. It is far easier to catch hair microbes than it is to get rid of them, and a single stroke of an infected comb or brush may well lead to baldness. Never try on anybody else's hat. Many a hat band is a resting place for microbes.

If you happen to be troubled with dandruff, itching scalp, falling hair or baldness, we have a remedy which we believe will completely relieve these troubles. We are so sure of this that we offer it to you with the understanding that it will cost you nothing for the trial if it does not produce the results we claim. This remedy is called Rexall "93" Hair Tonic. We honestly believe it to be the most scientific remedy for scalp and hair troubles, and we know of nothing else that equals it for effectiveness, because of the results it has produced in thousands of cases.

Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is devised to banish dandruff, restore natural colour when its loss has been brought about by disease, and make the hair naturally silky, soft and glossy. It does this because it stimulates the hair follicles, destroys the germ matter, and brings about a free, healthy circulation of blood, which nourishes the hair roots, causing them to tighten and grow new hair. We want everybody who has any trouble with hair or scalp to know that Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is the best hair tonic and restorative in existence, and no one should scoff at or doubt this statement until they have put our claims to a fair test, with the understanding that they pay us nothing for the remedy if it does not give full and complete satisfaction in every particular. Two sizes, 50 cents and $1.00. Remember you can obtain Rexall Remedies in Rochester only at our store, —The Rexall Store. McDermid and Jury, corner George and Charlotte street.

McKEOWN YIELDS

Withdraws His Bill to Abolish Church Exemptions—Bread Legislation Discussed

THE LEGISLATURE

Toronto, Feb. 17.—Church exemptions, increased indemnities, and school holidays afforded members of the Ontario Legislature material yesterday afternoon upon which to dilate, while considerable progress was made with a number of consolidation measures. The latter included the second reading of Hon. W. J. Hanna's bill to place the control of costly local improvements under the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board, which is strongly opposed by the Toronto city law department.

Hon. Mr. Hanna's announcement in regard to the bread bill was another feature of a laborious and progressive afternoon. The Provincial Secretary said that there would be no need of bread legislation this year, because the Court of Appeal had upheld the Government's measure of last year. Big loaves would prevail.

W. K. McNaught, North Toronto, made a spirited protest against the requirement of two years' residence in Canada of aliens, before being entitled to qualify as stationary engineers. He considered six months ample, but was willing to compromise at one year.

The suggestion of the member for North Toronto was accepted.

A. Studholme argued for a requirement in the bill that two certificated engineers should be required in case of mills and factories which worked day and night.

Sir James Whitney took the view that the statute, if enforced, would suffice, as the employment of a fireman who acted as engineer even in the latter's temporary absence, was prohibited under a penalty.

C. R. McKeown, Dufferin, moved the second reading of his bill to abolish exemptions on church lands, and the sites of religious and philanthropic schools. It was unjust that Havergal Hall, the Loretto Abbey and Bishop Strachan School should be free from taxation while the home of the poor wicked was taxed out of due proportion in consequence.

Hon. Mr. Hanna said that in view of the fact that the bill would be overwhelmingly defeated both in the committee and the House, it should be withdrawn, as it was a few years ago thoroughly discussed in committee.

Mr. McKeown said as a loyal Conservative he would withdraw his bill.

Mr. Bowyer's bill to amend the Public School Act, so that the summer vacation in rural districts would be extended to two months, as maintains in urban localities, was given its second reading and was referred to the committee on education.

Hon. A. G. MacKay was opposed to it and would advise hesitation until the returns for August were shown, to see if the attendance was short.

Hon. Dr. Pyne, in closing the debate, stated that in August the schools were poorly attended, and he advised that the motion go to committee.

Sir James Whitney's bill to have laundries, Chinese et al., put under factory inspector regulation, received its second reading.

A. Studholme said the principle was O. K. from labor's point of view, and the leader of the Opposition didn't object to it.

The bill of Mr. Ferguson (Simcoe) to restrain traction engines from running on roads in May and December, because of the damage they wrought in soft weather, was read a second time.

Hon. Mr. Hanna opposed it, saying there had been no demand made, and while it might be necessary in a few isolated instances, it would hardly do to tie up the whole province.

Mr. Eilber's bill to do away with arbitration troubles and expense in respect to snow fences, by recognizing a simple agreement between the person owning the property affected and the local council, was given its second reading.

The House went into supply on the supplementary estimates, and passed a number of items.

The vote for the statute revision commission, $9,545.50, was challenged, and was allowed to stand for further information.

W. F. Nickle, Kingston, moved that the item of $42,400 to increase the appropriation to $1,400 per member, be struck out.

Mr. Studholme agreed with Mr. Nickle.

Sir James Whitney said that the item would not be withdrawn. In introducing the proposal he had assumed the usual responsibility of a Government. He did not desire to shift its responsibilities to anyone else's shoulders.

Veto Bill Has Clear Track.

London, Feb. 17.—In the House of Commons yesterday, after a nine hours' debate, Premier Asquith's motion appropriating the whole time of the House until Easter to the veto bill, in order to get through before the coronation, was carried under closure, 196 to 138.

During the course of the debate the Prime Minister said he expected that the veto bill would be sent to the House of Lords early in May, and that the Lords would give their decision thereon before the coronation. This optimism on the part of Mr. Asquith is interpreted in some quarters as indicating the possibility of a compromise being arrived at, as it is contended that otherwise it would be vain to hope that the bill could be disposed of so quickly. Thus far, however, the Unionists give no sign of relenting.

Given Penal Servitude.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 17.—The sensational trial of Count Patrick O'Brien De Lassy, Dr. Pantchenko and Mme. Muraweff, charged with the murder of Count Vassili Bouturlin, came to an end last night, when a verdict of guilty was returned by the jury in the case of De Lassy and Pantchenko, and not guilty in the case of the woman. De Lassy was sentenced to penal servitude for life, and Pantchenko to fifteen years' imprisonment.

GRAFT IN SCHOOLS

Pittsburg Voters' League Uncovers Terrible Conditions—Personnel of School Boards Attacked

PICNICS WERE ORGIES

Pittsburg, Feb. 17.—Graft in the Pittsburg school boards, as exposed in a bulletin issued to the public by the Voters' Civic League yesterday, has not yet received official notice from the district attorney, who, after reading the bulletin, said he would wait to ascertain if the league would make informations, and take up the prosecution of the alleged offenders as it did in the councilmanic graft cases last spring.

The personnel of the school boards of the individual wards is attacked, the charge being made "that the majority are gamblers, bartenders, saloonkeepers, political employers, placed on the boards to control votes, mill workers and laborers, with inadequate education to govern the instruction of children," and a score of more characters of men, equally objectionable in the judgment of the voters' league.

A few cases cite that as low as $25 was paid board members and as high as $1,000 for votes to place contracts. On one contract of $200,000, it is asserted that one-third of the amount was paid to the school board members in graft.

"Teachers have been forced to pay for their appointments, janitors and truant officers held up, and when everything failed the grafting directors can always borrow money from agents of the contractors who do business with the schools. The money is never returned," says the report.

"Some of the school picnics have been nothing more than drunken orgies for the directors and their dissolute and disreputable friends. Children have been taken to picnics with men and women of the underworld. They have been drunken women from the tenderloin on the dancing platform, and gamblers playing their vocation on the grounds."

Relations Are Strained.

London, Feb. 17.—The relations of Russia and China are strained to the breaking point. Russia yesterday notified the Governments of Great Britain, France and Germany of her intention to make a military demonstration on the Russo-Chinese frontier owing to China's persistent violation of the St. Petersburg treaty of 1881.

Russian troops will be sent forthwith to the district of Ili.

The extent of the demonstration, it is added in the diplomatic note, will depend entirely upon the attitude assumed by China.

The vital questions involved are free trade in Mongolia; the extra territorial rights of Russians in China, and the establishment of a Russian consulate at Kobdo, Mongolia.

National Breeding Bureau.

New York, Feb. 17.—At the Horsemen's dinner held here Wednesday night August Belmont announced that he would offer to the Government six stallions to start a National Breeding Bureau following the lines of Canada, France, Germany and other countries. Included in the six are "Henry of Navarre," which once brought $30,000 at auction, and Octagon, the sire of Beldame, winner of a suburban handicap.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

THE PROFESSIONAL GAME WAS A SORRY EXHIBITION

Slow and Listless at All Times With Slashing and Tripping Substituted for Good Hockey---Thirty Penalties Were Inflicted---Port Hope Won on the Bit by 15 to 5.

Twenty goals, thirty penalties, and five hundred disgusted spectators, were some of the features of the professional hockey game at Brock St. rink, between the Port Hope pros. and the Trenton-Belleville-Picton-Galt team last night. It was the first professional game that Peterborough people have seen and it left such a bad taste in the mouths of the fans that it is safe betting that it will be the last. The Port Hope team won by 15 to 5, leading at the end of the first twenty minute period by 4 to 3, and at the second by 11 to 4. There may have been worse exhibitions of hockey witnessed at Brock Street rink, but not many. Never at any stage did it approach the standard set in the series between the Peterborough and Trenton O. H. A. teams, or even in some of the junior games. Listless, an utter lack of team work, slashing, tripping, even such childish stunts as throwing the rubber with the hand—these were some of the things that got the goat of the spectators. Two O.H.A. referees, Harvey Sproule, and F. C. Waghorne, were in charge of the game and tried to hold the players down to O.H.A. rules, with the result that no less than thirty times were players waved to the side. The crowd evidently wanted to see the teams mix it up, and as a result the officials got in wrong when they refused to allow the gladiators to hoist each other up to the rafters. Letting them go might have added a little to the excitement, but it would not have improved the style of hockey any, although to tell the truth, it could not have made it much worse.

Port Hope had easily the better team and won as they pleased. Their forwards were faster, had more speed and checked back better, while their defence had no trouble in holding out the Belleville line. The combination team looked very weak. Their forwards lacked the speed and never checked back, while their defence, consisting of two forwards, Lane and Doherty, were easily drawn out. Neither team, however, played hockey as it should be played. The men did not play their positions, roamed all over the ice, bunched so that they were in each other's way, and played the man altogether too much. At times the games was as slow as the city council is in raising the firemen's salaries, and as listless as a fat man on a hot day. Port Hope looked as if they could have uncorked more speed, but they did no need to while some of the aggregation which wore the blue and white sweater of the Peterborough intermediates, had as much trouble in moving fast as a woman in a hobble skirt. The only interest the crowd seemed to take after the first few minutes was to encourage the players to "get" each other, and when the officials refused to stand for this, to pan Messrs. Sproule and Waghorne, the former getting the lion's share of the crowd's attention and there was a howl of delight when he was bowled over on his back by one of the players in making a rush. At that Sproule was only trying to make the teams play hockey.

If last night's game is a sample of what has been handed out in the Lakeshore League it is a wonder that Buck Irving's hippodrome lasted as long as it did. The reputation of some of the players would lead one to expect a better exhibition than was given here last night. However, the players are not to blame. They have found the professional game a snare and a delusion, and most of them would be glad to be back in the amateur fold, instead of chasing the rubber around for a salary that, in nine cases out of ten, is not forthcoming.

Our old friend, Ken Randall, erstwhile of the Lindsay Midgets, was about the best man on the ice, and showed that he has lost none of his old-time skill. Several of his rushes were beautiful exhibitions of stick-handling, and although he received a severe gruelling he kept boring in and the losers could not hold him out as he always kept coming back for more. On one occasion, in the second period, he took the rubber through the whole line-up of his opponents, and caged it neatly. Manson, a slim youth, who hails from Cornwall, showed lots of speed and nice stick-handling, and Rowden, who is a Port Hope home-brew, played a good game at left wing. Andy Kyle, of Parkdale fame, did not come up to his advance notices, although he checked well. Old Bobby Mercer, the hero of a hundred battles, is as cool and reliable in the nets as he was ten years ago.

Baker, the goaler for Manager Nolan's team, pulled off some good saves in the early stages, but had not much chance later on, as he was left alone by his defence the greater part of the time. Doherty was a disappointment to the fans who remembered his neat stickhandling and sensational rushes as a member of the Norwood team in the City League. His professional training seems to have taught him nothing, but the ability to mix it up and his vigorous tactics, while they appeared to please the crowd, earned him eight trips to the timers. He wielded his stick with a will and four times stopped rushes by the simple expedient of chopping in two the stick of the man carrying the rubber Bill Lane, rover of last year's senior Parkdales, played with the handicap of a broken hand, and did well under the circumstances. Ben Dusty played the first period, but had to retire on account of the injury to his shoulder sustained last week. He did not have much chance to shine, but showed as much class as any of the rest of the bunch. Crossett, the little Tilsonburg player, at left wing, was the hardest worker and most effective man on the forward line. Carmichael, who replaced Dusty, showed occasional flashes of brilliancy. Chipchase was an ideal centre, in one respect. He was always on hand to face off, but that let him out. Charlie Lightfoot is not the man he used to be but he worked hard which is more than can be truthfully said of some af the rest.

A detailed account of the play would be wearisome. A glance over the appended summary will tell you all you need to know about the travesty.

SCRATCH TEAM WENT DOWN

The Peterborough Junior O. H. A. team have defaulted to-night's game against Kingston, but there will be a game just the same. The Kingston team asked the locals to send a team down anyway and rather than disappoint the Easterners a seven was gotten together last night and left on the 8.20 train this morning in charge of Trainer Breen. Among the players were Patterson, McMartin and Heferman of the Grillers, Giroux of the Intermediates, Short, the intermediate spare, and Curly Elliott of the Montreal Bank League team. The rest of the Grillers found it impossible to get off work now, that there is no chance of wanning out.

CURLING

Five rinks of the Victoria Club, Toronto, arrived to-day at noon. They will play the Peterborough rinks this afternoon and evening. The skips for the afternoon on the Peterborough side were as follows: Messrs. Waddell, McIlroy, Greer, Matthews, Morrow. The games commenced at 3 o'clock.

SOME HOCKEY HAPPENINGS

Most of the professional hockey players in the Eastern Ontario League are bitterly rueing the day they were led astray from the amateur ranks. The gates all over the circuit have been poor, salaries have been conspicuous from their absence and in the case of the Belleville team the last straw came last night when the gate receipts of the game with Port Hope were garnisheed at the instance of parties in Belleville, to whom a board bill was due. "Wasn't I a fool to jump into this League," asked Bill Lane, the ex-Parkdale rover last night. "Here I am down here with no salary in sight, my hand broken, my job in Toronto gone and I might have stayed with my old team, the Parkdales, and been on the amateur championship team." I wish I was back playing in the City League" was the way Fred Doherty looked at the matter when some one mentioned the days when he played with the Norwood team.

Herb. McMillan, Len Dobson, Charlie Ray, Fred Kelly and other Peterborough players, who, from time to time during the season have received tempting offers to jump into the professional ranks, thanked their stars as they watched last night's game, that they had sense enough to turn a deaf ear to the offers.

Ben Dusty has the edge on his team mates. His home is here.

A practice of the Intermediates is called fo rthis evening. All the players are asked out, as an important game is in sight.

POST CARD COLUMN

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—Would you kindly allow me, through your valuable paper, to contradict some of the statements made by Alderman Kerneghan at the meeting on Monday evening, the 13th inst., of the Peterborough Fire, Water and Light Committee.

Such ridiculous statements are calculated to give the outside public a false idea as to the management and efficiency of the Fire Brigade, and also have a tendency to destroy the good feeling and mutual respect which should exist between the citizens and members of the Fire Brigade of this city.

In the first place, Mr. Kerneghan states that hose was left in the street for twenty-four hours after Mr. Murphy's fire. This is, Mr. Editor, a direct misrepresentation of the actual facts. The alarm was sent in about two o'clock, and before the first shift went to supper at half-past five, all the hose was back in the fire hall. This can be vouched for by any man who was on the brigade at the time.

Secondly, the worthy Alderman seems to have a doubt as to whether the drivers know the city, as he alleges they went the wrong way to the above mentioned fire, I can assure him that both drivers and assistant-drivers know the city thoroughly. In fact, one of the drivers probably knew the city before the Alderman was born.

Thirdly, the statement that hose is left lying about the fire hall for the men to trample on is another rash statement. I have been seven months on the Fire Department and only once in that time has any hose been left lying on the floor at all, and this was a case of necessity. If Mr. Kerneghan visited the fire hall regularly he would very soon find out that everything is kept spick and span. Disorder and untidiness will not do at the Peterborough Fire Department at all events. Again, the statement that hose is left in the streets for vehicles to run over is far from the actual truth. After a fire, unless the weather is frosty, the hose is rolled up, and put on one side until everything at the Fire Hall is ready for action, and then it is brought in, washed and hung up to dry.

In conclusion, Mr. Editor, I might say, that firemen are only human, and as such dislike false statements made about them, as any other members of the community. We would strongly recommend Alderman Kerneghan to read the 5th Chapter of the Acts of the Apostles. If it does him no good, it cannot do him harm. I remain, Sir,

"A Fireman and a Lover of Truth and Fair Play."

Her Face and Body Were Litterly Covered With "BOILS."

Burdock Blood Bitters Cured Them.

Mrs. John H. King, Johnston, N.B. writes:—"Last summer I was very much troubled with boils, and my face and body were literally covered with them A friend advised me to take Burdock Blood Bitters. I got three bottles, and before I had taken all the first one my boils began to go away. I had just taken a few doses out of the last one when they all disappeared. My husband has also used Burdock Blood Bitters with much benefit."

Boils in themselves are not a danger, ous trouble, but still, at the same time, are very painful. They are caused entirely by bad blood, and to get rid of them it is necessary to put the blood in good condition, and for this purpose there is nothing to equal that old and tried remedy, Burdock Blood Bitters.

PERSONAL AND SOCIAL

Mr. John Guerly of Warkworth is a guest at the Snowden House.

The many friends of Mr. Herb Main will be glad to learn that his little son, John, is recovering from an attack of pneumonia.

Word was received to-day by friends in town from Port of Spain, Trinidad, from Mr. R. J. Munro and Miss Irene who are spending a holiday in the West Indies.

The Misses Ennis and Armstrong have closed their millinery parlours for the next two weeks as they are visiting the Toronto and New York millinery centres.

Mr. R. Trenwith of Minneapolis is a visitor to the city after an absence of 27 years. He is accompanied by his sister, Miss J. Trenwith. They are registered at the King George.

Mr. Dick O'Brien, after three years absence in the wilds of New Ontario is home enjoying the hospitality of 520 Gilmour street for a few days. Mr. O'Brien has of late been in the Porcupine gold fields and to judge from his prosperous appearance some of the quills of the "fretful-fruitful-porcupine" must have stuck.

STIFF SENTENCES METED OUT TO BAND OF BOYS

Gougon also went on to state that they had told the people at the house that they had bought the chickens.

Fred Roy: "What Gougon said about the eggs was true as far as he knew. I put the eggs down in the summer kitchen and then burnt the case in the stove. When we came from Montreal, I had between $8.00 and $10.00. I never told Powell that the stuff was stolen. I burnt the feathers of the chickens in the coal stove. We did not let them see all the eggs at once, we only showed a little bag full."

Chief Thompson: "On Saturday morning about 11.00 o'clock I took Detective Newhall with me and went to Powell's house with a search warrant, for the purpose of searching for the eggs. The boys had pleaded guilty at that time .On entering I asked Mr. and Mrs. Powell where the eggs were. The reply was that the boys had brought some eggs there in a paper bag, and also some in a basket. I informed them that I had a search warrant and that they had better tell me where the eggs were. Powel replied that we would have to find them. I sent Newhall up stairs to the boys' room with Mrs. Powell and I went down to the cellar with Mr. Powell. I found the turkey hanging in the cellar and asked him where the turkey came from. He replied that he had bought it two weeks ago on the market from a farmer. We searched the rest of the house. Then he admitted afterwards, when he found out that his wife had told me, that the turkey had come the same nigt as the eggs. After I had been at the home I asked the boys about the eggs, and they all admitted that the eggs had been removed from the case. Newhall got upon the loft, where the eggs were and found two bags, containing about 18 dozen. I enquired from Mr. Powell if he knew where the revolvers were. He assured me that he knew nothing about them. Bruce Roy said that his revolver had been left in his overcoat pocket when he was arrested. We made a thorough search of the boys' room, and upset the mattress and looked all through the room, but found nothing. The revolvers could not have been in the mattress when we searched. Detective Newhall gave evidence similar to that of the Chief.

At this stage, Mr. Gordon, the prisoner's counsel, changed the plea to guilty, and asked that the prisoner be let go on suspended sentences as he was in poor circumstances.

HThe request was granted as stated before.

Henry Hodder brought a claim on James Rose for wages. He stated that he had worked for Rose for 20c. per hour and then quit for a month. He was taken back again, as he thought at at the same wages, but no arrangements had been made, and Rose only paid him 15c. per hour. Rose, however, agreed to pay the difference, which was about $2.00, and the case was dismissed.

A NEW LINE

MONTREAL, FEB. 16.—The rumour is revived here of a Canadian Pacific Railway line paralleling the Grand Trunk to Toronto. Part of the big expenditure in Toronto is said to be called for on account of this. The new line will commence at Bathurst, ten miles west of Smith's Falls, and proceed south westerly to Belleville. The whole of this line, it is said, will be double-tracked, and as the line between Smith's Falls and Montreal is double-tracked already, the C. P. R. will have a double track all the way between this city and Toronto, and an alternative route between Smith's Falls and Toronto will reach all the important industrial communities between Montreal and Toronto now served by the Grand Trunk alone. Work will commence, it is said, in the spring.

A PUBLIC MAN OF LOCAL INTEREST

The Toronto Saturday Night has been publishing a series of articles on Toronto millionaires, which prove very interesting reading. Last Saturday's issue dealt with a review of the business life of Hon. Senator Cox, a former citizen of Peterborough. A few of the many references to Senator Cox's successful rise in the financial world as are follow:

Seven years he was Mayor of Peterborough; convincing proof that even in his young days the Senator did not lack public spirit. Peterborough was a cordwood town then. The market square was the forum. Can't you imagine George A. Cox, tall and swift, of a Sabbath morning, before the first sleigh-bobs came jingling in with buffalo robes and pea-straw and a load of church folk—hustling past the market up the street to the Methodist Church to see that the big box stove in the corner had plenty of wood. There he would sit while the fire burned up and talk to the folk that came in—not precisely about religion—but practical matters such as the state of the roads, the price of logs, the condition of the bush, sale of hogs and the prevalence of whooping-cough. The Mayor of Peterborough from 1864 to 1871 was a practical man. He was also a temperance advocate, a non-tobacco user, and in most respects practised all the abstinences that make average good copy for newspaper biographies of a moral turn.

However, when he got enough of the chief magistracy in the cordwood-cattle town, George A. Cox took a shy at the Legislature. He was defeated. A a political figure he does not seem to have been quite so popular in the present city of electric factories and breakfast foods as J. R. Stratton: for twice again he tried to break into the House of Commons, failing the last time by the narrow margin of sixteen. Years before that however, he had begun to demonstrate that he could manipulate and organize and promote outside of politics. Seven years after he quit the mayoralty of Peterborough, he became President of the Midland Railway, which in those days was just about next to the headship of the Grand Trunk. There was no C.P.R. then. The Grand Trunk was the only real railway system in Canada; and it apparently became obvious to Senator Cox—who forty years later gave birth to the Grand Trunk Pacific motto, "Cox can't wait"—that the Grand Trunk ought to justify its name. Anyway it was Mr. Cox who engineered the amalgamation of four little jerkwater lines into a system which with its enhanced operation value was sold to the Grand Trunk; about which time Mr. Cox set his eyes on the West, and joined a syndicate that tenderd for the construction of the C.P.R.

From that era of expansion down to the present, Senator Cox has concentrated his energies on straight finance. One of the most practically commercial men in Canada he had a brain that was able to think in clearing-house dimensions. Before the C.P.R. was finished he was President of the Central Canada Loan and Savings Co., and a director of the Western Fire and Marine Insurance Co. But this never interfered with his agency of the Canada Life. Twent yyears then he had been an agent. Oh, the policies he wrote off in those days when he knew almost eevry man in Peterborough, and most of the farmers within forty miles of the town! Hard at it and always at it, constant in season and out of season—advising men to insure their lives, himself one of the finest risks in life insurance that ever lived. There was no time or place except the church and the Mayor's chair and a man's own parlor, that wasn't suited for the purpose of writing policies. The only drawback at all was the fact that in those days fountain pens were not popular.

As a life insurance agent Senator Cox has a fifty-year record unparalleled on the American continent. He has never got so high in millionairedom and management of financial companies that he couldn't stop to conquer a man that seemed diffident about insuring his life. The number of policies written by the Senator's own hand from 1861 until now, if laid end to end, might reach from Peterborough to Toronto—the track he took in 1888 when it became evident that the factory town of eastern Ontario, though quite interesting enough for Mr. Cox to live in the rest of his days, was no place for a centre of financial systems. They say that down in Ottawa the Senator still keeps a vigilant eye on the insurance interests of his friends. He is a plain, practical man. No talent of his was ever wrapped in a napkin. He believes in work. As a worker he has been and still is a marvel to other financiers. His grip of finance has in it a good deal of what is called wizardry; but the magic of the thing is never far removed from the personality of the Senator. Had he gone into politics on the Commons end he might have been a powerful minister; but he might not have had either the record-breaking career from depositor to shareholder, director, and till two years ago President of one of the greatest banks in Canada. He was made a director of the bank in 1885, Vice-President in 1888, and President in 1890, which in the story of banking careers in Canada is perhaps without parallel. But his connection with the Bank of Commerce was merely a side-show to his half a century of constructive statesmanship in the Canada Life—with the Central Canada, the Canadian General Electric, the Toronto General Trusts, and the National Trust Co., as links in the chain.

STRENUOUS TIMES IN NORTH COUNTRY

They are having a rather strenuous hockey season in the northern Townships, and the rivalry appears to be very keen. So keen has the competition become, in fact, that the supporters of the respective teams have taken to play the games over in the newspapers. Kinmount and Haliburton appear to be deadly rivals, and the way one team roasts the other through the columns of the local papers makes delightful reading.

The other evening the Haliburton team went down to Kinmount to play a game with the team of that village, and as is usual on such occasions, the home team was victorious. And as is also usual on such occasions, the visiting team has a kick coming. The manager of the Haliburton Hockey team has broken into print, and tells the harrowing details of the visit of the Haliburton hockeyists and their supporters to Kinmount.

* * * * *

"Will you kindly allow me a small space in your widely circulated paper to state a few facts re the hockey match played at Kinmount on Saturday night," says the manager of the Haliburton Septette to the Editor of the Minden Echo. Continuing, he says: "This was the return match between the Haliburton and Kinmount teams, to which your Kinmount correspondent referred in a late issue of the Echo. His account of the game contains at least one truthful assertion, that is, "That we were beaten and fairly beaten." Had he stopped here I should have made the erroneous mistake of dubbing him a gentleman. He says, "A large crowd came from Haliburton to play Kinmount on that eventful night," but fails to note the reception which was meted out to the crowd, more especially to the ladies. With your permission, sir, I shall as briefly as possible deal with thi phase of the case. On our arrival in Kinmount, the ladies, some 25 in number, consisting of the wives, sisters, and lady friends of the gentlemen portion of the crowd referred to, proceeded at once to the hotel to warm and refresh themselves. They immediately immediately and unceremoniously walkd into the sitting-room as they had done on previous occasions, but they were at once doomed to disappointment by being promptly ordered out. It is a fact a couple (shall I say ladies) appeared on the scene, and in very pointe dlanguage gave our ladies to understand that nothing shor tof their exit would quell the ire caused by their entrance. For the remainder of our stay the ladies were obliged to walk back and forward on the ice and snow, in order to keep from freezing. This fact calls forth the sneering remark from your correspondent when he says, "After the game the parties from Haliburton looked very blue." How else could they be expected to look, after spending so long a time on the ice in the cold? He talks about chronic kickers, and sports with side jams, but those boys are thankful they were early taught their duty to their fellow-man and not allowed to grow up in ignorance in spite of age and experience. After the game we took our places on the train, and after the sonorous voice of Conductr Bewhey called out "All aboard," and as Engineer Ralph wa moving forward his ponderous steed, we were actually asked to wait for supper. Ye gods and little fishes! And no supper in sight! Contrast, if you please, the above treatment with the manner in which our team treated the Kinmount boys when they played the match at Haliburton, when we paid for their supper, bed and breakfast, and also settled the broken window pane at the Lucas House.

The Manager of the Haliburton Hockey team does not end here, however, in his scathing remarks about the Kinmount team and its supporters. He bursts into poetry. Before doing so he remarks, "I shall now close by giving the following advice to our brother sports

In sailing o'er the sea of Life,
My brothers, do not think
If you should leave the progress craft
T'd go to wreck and sink;
Don't feel that you possess the earth
And all that in it lies,
And hold a chattle mortgage
On the planets in the skies.

You are but a tiny, single drop
Of water in the sea
Of all the great and active tide
Of live humanity.
And you should always bear in mind
The smallness of your might;
The earth will spin on just the same
When you drop out of sight.

* * * * *

The Manager of the Haliburton team, who, in his official capacity, hands out, both in prose and poetry, a lecture to the Kinmount "sports," is not the only person who draws the attention of the public to the alleged ill-treatment of the visitors at Kinmount. Another writer to the Minden Echo, signing himself "Onlooker," does not spread himself at any great length. What he says is short and to the point. He says:

To the Editor,

Haliburton Hockey Club admits that if Kinmount had played a clean game they could have won just as easily as they did, and with honour to themselves. As it was played, it was simply a game of butchery—a disgrace to the name of hockey. Kinmount will find herself cut out of the game altogether if hockey is not played.

It would certainly appear that they play the strenuous game in the Kinmount district.

LA GRIPPE RAVAGES

The Trouble Sweeping Over Canada is an Epidemic

Weakened and Broken Constitutions Left Behind—How to Regain New Health and Strength

La grippe is one of the most dangerous diseases that annually sweeps over Canada. It starts with a sneeze—a slight cold — and ends with a complication of troubles. It lays the strong man on his back; it tortures him with fevers and chills, with headaches and backaches. Its victims are left low-spirited and depressed, and an easy prey to bronchitis, pneumonia, rheumatism and often that most dreaded of all diseases — consumption. You can avoid la grippe entirely by keeping the blood rich and red by the occasional use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The trouble takes as its victims those whose blood is in a poor condition, and its after-effects are more dangerous and more lasting than the trouble itself. For the after-effects of la grippe there is absolutely no other medicine can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Every dose helps to make rich, red blood that drives disease from the system, and makes weak, despondent men and women bright, cheerful and strong. If you have suffered in any way from the epidemic of la grippe that has been sweeping over Canada, give this great health-restoring medicine a trial, and it will not disappoint you. Here is proof of the wonderful power of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills over the after-effects of this disease. Mr. P. E. Paulin, collector of customs at Caraquet, N.B., says: "A few winters ago I had a severe attack of la grippe, which completely broke me down. I had to take to my bed for several weeks, and although during that time I employed a doctor I did not seem to recover from the trouble. I was left terribly weak, did not sleep well, had night sweats and little or no appetite. I was really a physical wreck. On a former occasion I had used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for general debility with such great success that I decided to try them again. I sent for a half dozen boxes and began to take the Pills at once. When taking the second box I began to feel quite a change in my condition. I was able to walk about the house and my appetite was improving. From that on I gained strength every day and before the six boxes were done I was able to return to the office and attend to my work. I have since enjoyed the best of health, and think Dr. Williams' Pink Pills the best medicine for trouble of this kind."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills not only promptly cure the serious after-effects of la grippe, but they make well and strong all persons suffering from any form of debility or general weakness. These Pills have no laxative or purgative action; their mission is to make new, rich, red blood and thus fortify and strengthen every organ and every part of the body. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all medicine dealers, or sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by addressing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

WOMEN MAY AVOID OPERATIONS

By taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The following letter from Mrs. Orville Rock will prove how unwise it is for women to submit to the dangers of a surgical operation when it may be avoided by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She was four weeks in the hospital and came home suffering worse than before.

Here is her own statement.

Paw Paw, Mich.—"Two years ago I suffered very severely with a displacement. I could not be on my feet for a long time. My physician treated me for seven months without much relief and at last sent me to Ann Arbor for an operation. I was there four weeks and came home suffering worse than before. My mother advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I did. Today I am well and strong and do all my own housework. I owe my health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and advise my friends who are afflicted with any female complaint to try it."—Mrs. ORVILLE ROCK, R. R. No. 5, Paw Paw, Michigan.

If you are ill do not drag along until an operation is necessary, but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for women's ills, and has positively restored the health of thousands of women. Why don't you try it?

"THE INNOCENT MURDERERS"

By Wm. Johnston and Paul West

gleamed with a bitter hatred from under the brim of a hat much too large for his head, which he had borrowed from a brakeman.

"I've got them! I've got them dead right!" he muttered; "and I'd like to clean the job up to-night!"

A ray of the setting sun fell upon the diamond in his scarf and for a moment he imagined that once more the jewel was under the influence of the strange power that had made it shine out in the woods on Monday night. He soon realized that this was not so, but the incident recalled to his mind the fact that he was only a few rods from the ice-pond. As he was ahead of his schedule he thought he would go off his course a little and make a personal inspection of the water about whose strange actions he had read in the morning paper.

So he turned to the left and traversed the short tract of woods until he came out upon the pond at a point near the ice-house. The grass showed evidence of having been tramped by many feet, and broken bottles and empty tins scattered along the bank told the story of events of the past few hours. The detective noticed all this, and dipped his hand in the water. To the touch it was just like any other water, and he could not detect any strange tingling such as the paper had described.

As a matter of fact, the conditions had worn off by this time, and Bradleys ice-pond was the same as of old. Disappointed, but more eager than ever to find out some clue that would lead to the consummation of his efforts to solve the mystery, Sullivan stood up and looked about. The ice-house caught his attention.

On entering, almost the first thing to meet his eyes was a pile of boards in one corner, about which was sprinkled a good deal of sawdust.

"Aha!" said he, thinking of the few grains of the same material which still remained in his vest pocket. Behind the boards, as he pulled them away from the wall, he found a quantity of strange bluish paper, and a lot of string, knotted and tangled, evidently the covering taken from some bundle. He pulled the paper out on the floor and spread a piece of it flat. It was still light enough in the ice-house to detect on the surface of the paper some peculiar markings, blurred and indistinct, but suggesting a photographic imprint, though of what object he had no idea. Suddenly one spot on the paper made him gasp. It distinctly resembled a human eye! Frantically he examined all the other pieces of paper and found them all more or less marked with these same blurrish spots. What he imagined them to be he could not himself have told, but he was certain that they told some story if he could only unravel it. He gathered the sheets of paper together, and rolled up the twine, which he stuffed in his pocket. Then he hurried out of the building with the paper shoved up under his coat which he buttoned tightly.

At the foot of the college hill he encountered Mrs. Hopkins. The woman was walking like a person asleep, her hollow eyes looking straight ahead, but seeing nothing. Her gaunt, haggard appearance betokened the loss of sleep, and hours spent in mental suffering. At first she did not see the detective, and would have passed on, but he spoke to her. She stopped, gazed at him in a dazed way, and then, suddenly recognizing him, flew to him with a cry of inquiry.

"Oh, Mr. Sullivan!" she exclaimed. "Where have you been? And what have you found out? Where is he? Oh, where is he?"

"Calm yourself, madam," said Sullivan; "I have been away on mighty important business. As to where your husband is——"

"Tell me, tell me!" she pleaded.

"Well," he was obliged to confess, "I can't, that is, exactly. But I can assure you, madam, that he isn't so far off, and you may get word of him most any time now."

"Oh!" she cried, eagerly, "he is coming back! He is coming back! I shall see him again!"

All traces of resentment against her husband, however cruelly he may have treated her, had vanished. All she thought, of now was to have him with her again. She would forgive anything. She even found herself taking the blame for the whole unfortunate affair. It had been her lack of sympathy in his work, her coldness, that had driven him away. She would be a different wife to him from now on. But Sullivan, though he did not tell her so, did not believe that she would ever see the professor alive again. In response to her hopeful exclamation he said:

"Well, madam, let us hope, let us hope. Anyway, I can't tell you more at present. I would advise you to go home and wait. I will see you later in the evening, and perhaps we can clear up everything to-night. Only be prepared——" he was about to add "for the worst," but changed his mind, and said "for disappointment."

"More!" said Mrs. Hopkins with a bitter smile. "I can't stand very much more. Not very much."

Sullivan watched her go toward her home. Then he turned and hurried to the Dean's house.

It was late when he came out again. In the meantime he had heard the story of Dan Hawkins, and made the blind fiddler swear to what he had seen. Sullivan sent him away under a pledge of secrecy to tell his story to nobody else. Then he and the Dean went over the entire case thoroughly.

"I've got here what I think are clues," said he, taking the batch of newspaper clippings out of his pocket. "The reason I think so is that they are all about this new thing they call radium, and I've been told that Professor Hopkins was some daffy about the thing himself. Let's look 'em over."

As a result of this looking over, they learned enough to make them sit staring at each other in dumb amazement.

There was an account of an experiment by Dr. Emil Javal, a distinguished Parisian scientist, blind from birth, who had succeeded in making the blind see by means of radium barium carbonate, the ordinary radium of commerce.

"Read that again," cried Sullivan, when the Dean had made him acquainted with the facts of this report. The Dean did so. "By Jove," said Sullivan, "don't it look like this blind man's story might have something in it?"

"It certainly does," assented the Dean. "Radium does many strange things. Its effect on diamonds, for instance——"

"What's that," demanded the detective, putting his hand unconsciously on the gem in his scarf. "What does it do to diamonds?"

"A diamond placed under the effect of radium rays," said the Dean, "takes on a strange effulgence that is imparted to nothing else, except, in rare cases, to certain kinds of stone. The diamond glows, seems to throw out living rays, and acts most peculiarly."

"And how long does this last?" demanded Sullivan breathlessly.

"A very short time after the influence of the radium rays is removed," said the Dean. "Why?"

Then Sullivan went on to tell him of the affair in the woods on Monday night, when his diamond behaved so peculiarly.

"You must have been in close juxtaposition to some radio-active substance," was the Dean's conclusion. "I wonder what it was."

"I'm going to find out, and mighty quick," said Sullivan, with an odd look in his eye. "And now, Dean, here's something else."

From under his coat he took out the sheets of paper which he had found in the ice-house.

"What's that paper" he asked. "Use any of it around the college?"

"Why, yes," said the Dean. That's blue-print paper—a sensitised paper used in photography. Where did you get it?"

"Never mind, just yet," said Sullivan. "What I want to know is, isn't there something among those clippings about a man taking photograph with radium?"

"I think we ran across it," said the Dean, rummaging among the papers again. "Yes, here it is. It is a report of a Mr. Skinner, made to the British Physical Society, in June, 1907, concerning the Becquerel Rays. Professor Henri Becquerel of Paris, placed an aluminum medal in a blank paper envelope, and covered this with a card on which were pepper, and the effect of the crystals. The card was made of a sensitised paper, and the effect of the cyrstals was to imprint upon it, in spite of the thickness of the black envelope, a distinct radiograph of the coin."

"It would be called so," said the Dean.

"And could radium, or something like it, make a photograph on this blue-print paper?" The Dean nodded. "Then," said Sullivan, "I bet we've got the end of the Hopkins case right here!"

He laid the paper on the floor and tried to piece the various sheets together. The Dean watched him for some time in silence. At length he asked the detective:

"May I inquire what you are trying to do?"

"I'll tell you," said Sullivan. "I found this in the ice-house, and it's been used to wrap something up in. I think more than likely it was around whatever caused my diamond to glisten so. If that's the case, these markings may show what was in the bundle. Look at that spot, now. Don't it look like a human eye?"

The Dean examined the paper. "I am afraid I haven't your imagination," he said.

"Well, it does to me," said Sullivan. "And I'm sure the whole thing, if I could put the pieces together just right, would show us a face."

He went at his task again, re-arranging the various sheets, but his success was not apparent. Suddenly he stopped, with a laugh.

"I've got it," he cried. "Watch now."

He saw that his error had been in not accounting for the overlapping of the edges of the sheets, supposing, of course, that they had really formed the wrapping for a bundle. On some of the pieces the marks were faint, on others much more definite. Sometimes a strong marking became dim right in the middle of a sheet. With pins and a pot of paste he now began rearranging the sheets of paper and fastening them in place. After half an hours work, he stood up and looked at the result.

It showed a figure of some sort, but not like anything which he could recognize. Certainly not a human being. In a fortunate instant, however, a thought came to him that brought a startled exclamation to his lips.

"There it is," he shouted. "There it is! It's the figure of a man photographed from all sides at once—the picture of a man rolled out flat!"

"Goodness!" cried the Dean, "How did they roll a man out flat?"

"They didn't," said Sullivan. "They rolled the paper around him. Don't you see? Look!" He formed the mended wrapping in the shape that it would naturally have taken when tied around a body. Then he held it up so that the light of the study lamp illuminated the interior. "Look inside!" he cried, to the Dean, holding the pipe-shaped object before that individual's astonished eyes. The Dean looked. The paper trembled and shook in Sullivan's excited grasp, but the Dean could see. He fell back with a sob of startled conviction.

"Good Lord of heaven!" he cried. "It's Hopkins!"

DEARER TEA

Is Likely—Rubber Monopolizing Attention in Ceylon

There are distinct signs which point to a rise in the price of the cup that cheers but does not inebriate. In the first place, the use of tea in foreign countries is rapidly increasing, the result being a bigger demand on the resources of the tea plantations of India, Japan, China, and Java. Last year, for instance, there was altogether an increase in the shipments of tea to foreign countries of 14,000,000 pounds as compared with 1909.

On the other hand, there was a decrease in the shipments from India to the United Kingdom of over 9,000,000 pounds last year, which is partly explained by the greater demand for tea abroad; and, although Indian production has shown a good increase during the last two years, apparently it is not sufficient to meet the steadily growing demand, and one really short crop in India might make tea dear for years, so closely are supply and demand now adjusted.

Some of the Indian companies hold much spare land, and some of it is suitable for tea, but they have been, and still are, deterred from extension by difficulty in getting labor. Then, again, for increased production growers have mainly to rely upon good weather. There is always the risk of hailstorms and floods, blight and drought, which have to be faced, while working expenses are likely to increase by degrees, owing to the difficulty of finding all the labor for the various branches of tropical agriculture now being developed in the East.

There is another reason why the supply of tea is only just enough to equal the demand. In Ceylon, for instance, only 10,000 acres have been added during the last four years, rubber having monopolized attention. And rubber estates are competing with tea for the coolies of India that both need. Moreover, the yield of the plantations is beginning to diminish by reason of the rubber trees interplanted amongst 75,000 acres of tea. It is now proved, says an expert, and recognized that the heavy shade of rubber trees amongst tea is seriously affecting the output of the latter product, and as time goes on a sharp shortage in the output of tea so situated must be looked for. This would mean an increase in price to the consumer.

AGED TWINS

Two Brothers Celebrate Eighty-First Birthday Anniversary

The other day two brothers, John and William Austwick, of Selby, Yorkshire, celebrated their eighty-first birthday.

The brothers were born at Burn, a village three miles to the south of Selby. They are the sons of a farm laborer, and were christened at Brayton, near Selby. They are twins, and are two of eight children, four of whom still survive, the oldest being a sister aged eighty-six and the youngest another sister of seventy.

William Austwick has been a stone dresser and has worked all his life in the quarries. John was apprenticed to a tailor at Thorpe. He afterwards went to Selby, where for over forty years he has followed his occupation. He resided in one house nearly half a century.

Both brothers have married and have grown-up families—in fact, grown-up grandchildren. They are both now enjoying the old age pensions.

DICKENS AND THE GHOST

The eldest surviving son of the famous novelist, Mr. Alfred Tennyson Dickens, tells an amusing story in his lecture, "My Father's Life and Works," about life at Gad's Hill. It relates to a ghost which haunted a neighboring piece of waste land, on which stood a monument to a Cavalier named Charles Larking. As the maidservants all threatened to leave, Dickens, armed with a double-barrelled gun, and his two sons with bludgeons, set out to find it. Suddenly they saw a white object and heard an awful noise. Dickens cried, "Stand fast, or I fire!" It proved to be an asthmatical old goat.

FOR PIPE SMOKERS

M. de Watteville, of Paris, is a collector of pipes, and his study of the question has enabled him to judge people by their pipes. The pipe, he tells us, is characteristic of the race, while the cigar and cigarettes are cosmopolitan. The activity of a race is proportional to the length of the stem of their pipes.

The shorter the pipes the more laborious the people, and, inversely, the longer the pipe the more slothful the people. The more economic the people the shorter the pipe-stem, and, inversely the more prodigal the race—the more glutinous it is—the bigger is the bowl of the pipe. His last deduction regarding the smoking of pipes is perhaps the most assailable. It is:

No one who enjoys the old English or Irish clay will dispute this.

RAGING HEADACHE STOPPED AT ONCE

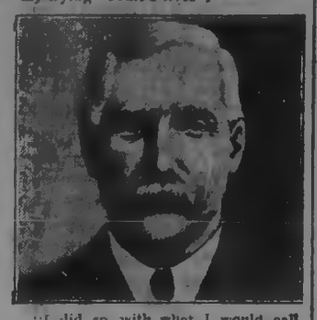
When He Took "Fruit-a-tives"

SHANLY, ONT., Sept. 23rd, 1910.

"You certainly have the Greatest discovered Headache Cure in the world. Before "Fruit-a-tives" came before the public, I suffered tortures from Headaches caused by Stomach Disorders.

"One of your travellers called on me when I had one of my raging headaches and had my head almost raw from external applications.

"I hated to see any person coming into the store (much less a commercial traveller) and I told him very curtly that I had a headache but he insisted on my trying "Fruit-a-tives".



"I did so, with what I would call amazing results. They completely cured me and since then (nearly six years ago) it is only necessary for me to take one occasionally to preserve me in my present good health. I was 65 years old yesterday and have been a general store keeper at the above address for twenty-five years". WM. PITT

Dealers everywhere have "Fruit-a-tives" at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50 or trial size, 25c, or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

A MILLIONAIRE'S ELOPEMENT

A Short Story

I.

A doctor's certificate is the best equipment for any pauper who wishes to see the world inexpensively. There are sick people everywhere, even in the Great Waste Lands, and the man who can diagnose is always sure of bed and board and pocket money. I don't know if it was this idea that led me to become a doctor, but on procuring a license to kill or cure, I utilized my profession as a means to explore our planet without dipping into a very ill furnished purse.

Thus it was that I found myself stranded in San Francisco towards the end of the century. Two years knocking about had accustomed me to adventure, so, when the tramp fruit schooner, whose crew I doctored, smashed on a South Sea reef, I waited philosophically in the Golden City for the next turn of Fortune's wheel. A trifle of money kept my head above water, and I haunted the Front assiduously, on the lookout for another billet. But luck didn't come my way for over a month, and I began to think of humping grain on the wharves for bread when the ace turned up, and it was an ace! I won wife, home, position, and fortune by that ace.

It began with my hearing the name of Inez Pancheo mentioned in Crazy Jimmy's Dive—a disreputable drinking-shanty, which I visited frequently on the chance of finding some captain in search of a medical man. But the skippers I spoke to didn't seem over-anxious to increase their salary lists, and my purse was well nigh empty before, as the saying goes, I struck oil. I was sittin grather dismally over a gin-sling, when I heard the name

And a dear name it was to me. A year previous, when sufficiently flush to stay at an expensive hotel without disputing the bill, I met the most charming girl in the world. She and her brother Manuel were in 'Frisco on law business, connected with the sale of their San Benito property. Hiram K. Dodge, a millionaire of shady antecedents, was in treaty for the land. As Don Manuel was poor and inexperienced and the soul of honour, the sharp-witted Yankee secured his prize for next to nothing. But when he added insult to injury, by making love to Donna Inez, she resented his impertinence. So did Pancheo, and the millionaire returned to his palace by Lake Michigan in the worst of tempers. It was at this point that the Spanish twins—for twins they were, and Spanish—came into my life; so I never set eyes on Dodge for many a long day. When I did, he—but that comes later.

Being young and inflammable, I loved Inez straight off, and I rather think she returned the compliment. As an experienced cicerone, I took her and Don Manuel under my wing, and for over a month we were daily in one another's company. But poverty prevented my wooing, as there was little chance that she would marry a pauper doctor. We met and smiled and flirted and parted. I never expected to see her again, yet the sweetest of memories kept her image in my somwhat battered heart. Whether Pancheo guessed my infatuation, I can't say. If he did, the weakness did not displease him, for we remained excellent friends. But, as he did not endorse his sister's invitation to visit them at San Benito, I fancy he must have suspected.

I was thinking more of my doubtful fortunes than of Inez, as I sat over the gin-sling, and the mention of her name in that blackguard bar, startled me not a little. The man who spoke was one of three, a hairy ruffian, roughly dressed and wearing blue spectacles. One of his companions was undeniably a sailor, red-faced, burly, and, as I judged, good-natured in the main. But the third man's looks surprised me. Tall, slim, carefully dressed, with closely clipped fair hair, blonde moustache, and eye-glass, he struck me as an aristocratic Englishman. His dandy looks, his educated drawl, and polished manners, contrasted markedly with the ruffianly appearance of his American friends. I wondered what this Beau Brummell was doing in such a nest and set myself to listen. Scenting danger to the woman I loved in that mention of her name, I had no compunction in eavesdropping. The triumvirate of rascals conversed in low voices, but my ears were quite sharp enough to overhear.

"Inez Pancheo," repeated the black-bearded man with the spectacles, "-that's her name, gents.'s, and I want her carried off slick. She camps out with a brother of sorts at a ranch thirty miles up coast."

"San Benito Bay," growled the skipper thoughtfully, "a darned risky job t' git th' barky along them narrers."

"Oh, I guess that yacht of the Colonel's 'ull swim through like a duck, Cap'n. An' it's twenty thousand dollars to you if pulled off"

The dandy they called Colonel reckoned this into English money. "Four thousand pounds. H'm! Cheap enough for such dirty work."

"I'll pay when the gal's aboard," cried the man whom I had recognized as Dodge. "Is it a deal?"

"Deal it is," assented the others, and the three lounged out.

Here indeed was danger to Inez, and it lay in my power to save her; but how to act! I had no money to strike out for San Benito. If I warned Manuel by letter, he might act rashly, being young and impulsive, and a hot-blooded Mexican. I had four and twenty hours to consider ways and means, and left the Dive with my head buzzing like a sawmill. All that night I wrestled with the prblem, and dangerous counsel came to me in sleep. Why not affiliate myself to the gang and take a hand in the kidnapping? I closed with the idea.

But to carry it out, necessity pointed to my boarding the yacht. Remembering the name of the boat, I sauntered down to the Front shortly after dawn, but with no coherent scheme in my head. As the French say, I went out to meet Monsieur Chance, and meet him I did, in a providential way. A few minutes' conversation with an old salt introduced me to the vessel I was in search of. She was a tight little craft, two hundred tons, Lloyd's measurement, schooner rigged fore and aft. Her funnel — she was screw-steam—was painted white, wih a scarlet top, and a lean ribbon of the same hue ran round her black hull. Pencilled against the green of the surrounding hills, her decks and spars looked delicate and graceful. She flaunted a red pennant with St. Andrew's cross, and was as neat a specimen of a gentleman's toy as I ever set eyes on. But what a yacht fit for Cowes should be doing in these waters puzzled me. My old salt could not tell me. She had arrived only on the previous day, and her antecedents were unknown.

Shortly, Colonel Sax, spotlessly dressed, came ashore in a smart gig. I deliberately threw myself in his way, risking all on one chance. He looked rather superciliously at my seedy kit, but pricked up his ears when I spoke.

"Public School?" asked Sax with interest.

"Rugby!" said I, seeing that he recognized the shibboleth.

"I'm Eton myself," he answered: "you seem down o nyour luck."

I nodded. "On the bed-rock, you might say. But if you want a doctor on board that boat of yours—"

"I don't know that I do," he interrupted crisply. "Hm! Anyone to speak for you, Dr. Ward?" for by this time, I had given him a name which was not my own. This deception was absolutely necessary. It so happened that I had a friend or two who knew me under the wrong name, as I fought shy of using my right one, owing to being in low water. I mentioned the references, and Sax scribbled them in his pocket-book. By the time we parted I was pretty sure of the billet and rather wondered at his readiness to trust me. His business was none of the cleanest, and demanded more caution in dealing with chance strangers.

However, to make a long story short, the recommendations of my friends did away with any doubts he may have entertained. That same evening I found myself on board "The Stormy Petrel," as she steamed north on her nefarious errand. Dodge was a passenger also, and I rather dreaded lest he should recognize me as having been at his elbow in the Dive. But he either had forgotten or had not noticed me, so I had no cause to be alarmed.

By this time his black wig and beard and his spectacles were cast aside in the saloon, and he appeared a light-complexioned, clean-shaven, bald-headed Yank, with keen blue eyes and a sharp way of speaking. Herry, who was the third of the trio, and the skipper of the yacht, sat down to dine with us, and as the champagne circulated everyone became lively. No disguise was made of the errand upon which the boat was bound, notwithstanding my presence. But, so far as the scamps knew, there was no chance of my betraying their schemes, until they were brought to a successful conclusion. Had they suspected me, I should have been dropped overboard without compunction. The conversation showed me that they were hardened ruffians, and that Sax, in spite of his refined looks, was the worst. Dodge seemed fairly crazy about Inez, and talked of her in such a way, and so incessantly, that I could have knocked the teeth down his throat. But caution prevented me making a fool of myself in that way.

At length the conversaton became too much for my nerves, and fearful of betrayng a dangerous honesty, I went on deck.

II.

San Benito proved to be a circular bay of no great size, with a narrow entrance through which the tide poured at the speed of a mill-race. A sandy beach sloped upward to mound-like hills, sparsely covered with vegetation; and—as I was informed by Ierry, who knew the anchorage—there was a sufficiency of water to berth the boat fairly near shore. Waiting for the ingoing tide the skipper swung his craft dexterously into the current, and she swept clean through the narrows without hindrance. It was a neat bit of business, which showed me that Herry was a thorough seaman. He had need to be, seeing the cargoes his boat carried on occasions.

"The ranch is over the hills two miles inland," exclaimed Dodge, when the anchor slipped overboard. "Herry can go up and ask for water. I guess hat 'ull bring the young greaser down with a run. He's as curious as a magpie."

This prognostication proved to be correct, for Manuel returned with Herry and the sailors in three hours. I was not there to receive my friend, as I dreaded lest he should recognize me, and thus awaken the suspicions of the gang. Making the excuse that I wished to stretch my legs, I went ashore, ostentatiously asking Sax to accompany me. He declined, and saw me leave the boat without suspicion, I climbed the sandhills, and made for the Pancheo mansion.

The first building I struck was an adobe church, like a barn, bare and cool, and furnished with a few rush-bottomed chairs. Candles were lighted on the high altar, and from a profusion of brilliant blossoms rose a glittering crucifix. The pale light of the candles faintly illuminated the building, but for the most part it was filled with a kind of brown twilight, accentuated by the glare outside. Before the altar knelt a woman, her face hidden in her hands. I knew who she was the moment she looked round at the sound of my footsteps; but who could have mistaken Inez for any other than her dear self.

"Don Ricardo," she said in her pretty broken English. "Ah Muzzer of God! you haf come at ze last, dear friend."

"On an unpleasant errand, Senora," I answered, kissing those dear white hands. "I can only stay for a few minutes."

She looked astonished, but not afraid, having a brave spirit of her own. There was no time to be lost, so I rapidly detailed the scheme of Dodge, and explained how I had come to hear of it. We spoke in Spanish, as I knew that tongue, and Inez was not sufficiently versed in English to follow a rapid narrative. She heard me in silence, only the flush on her face revealing her anger. "And I wish you to tell Manuel not to appear to recognize me," I finished. "When we are alone, we may hink of some scheme to baffle the scoundrels."

"That Senor Americano is bad—very wicked," said Inez passionately. "He has persecuted me for many months. I refused to become his wife."

"And why, Senora?" I asked, looking directly at her.

She laughed in spite of the agitation which the narrative caused her.

"Perhaps I like someone better," said she mischievously.

"Inez do you—"

"Ah, but no assuredly not," she interrupted; "but that month in San Francisco was very pleasant ,Don Ricardo!"

"I have never forgotten it."

As I spoke I made a step forward, but Inez moved away, shaking her head. "We must be serious, my friend," she said. "This wicked plan must be stopped. You will wait and see Manuel."

"No, I think not. Better let me stay on board the yacht to keep an eye on the scamps. They don't suspect me—as yet."

"Be wise, and they will not suspect you at all," she replied. "I will tell Manuel, and hen we shall see. Ah," she held out her hands to me with a pretty gesture, and a prettier blush, "ho wgood you are to be my friend."

"You have some plan?" I asked anxiously.

"Ah, but no. I am so surprised. My brother will think, and we will talk. It is good of you to warn us. Now go, my friend, and when you come again I shall think of you as a stranger."

"I should like you to think of me as something dearer, Inez."

She laughed and blushed, and again shook her pretty head. Then with a distracting smile she threw me a cardinal flower from her breast. I stooped to pick it up, and rose to find her gone; but I knew that she loved me, and walked back to the boat singing for sheer joy. The birthday of my life had come at last, and Inez—Inez, Inez! Oh, I could think of nothing but that dear name; but the sound of oars brought me down from heaven to earth. Peering over the sandhills, I saw Manuel come ashore with Sax. The two appeared to be good friends, and shook hands warmly. When Pancheo was out of sight I hailed the boat as it pushed into deep water.

"Where have you been?" asked Sax unsuspiciously. For a villain he was the most trusting person I ever met.

"Wandering about this dull country," said I cheerfully. "I hope you won't hang out here long, Colonel."

"Just long enough to transact business," said Sax as the oars dipped under and the boat moved towards the yacht.

"Well, I shan't go ashore again. It's a dead and alive hole."

"You must come with me to see the Pancheos, Ward. They have asked us to visit them to-morrow morning."

Next day with the Colonel I paid my visit. In the patio we were met by Manuel, who saluted me coolly and as a perfect stranger. Inez had told him as I knew by that salutation, and by the way in which his eyes flashed when they rested on Sax. He also looked puzzled, as though he found it difficult to comprehend how a gentleman could concern himself with such dirty work.

The patio was a square court of Moorish design with a fountain in the centre, and brilliant flowers everywhere; but the fairest flower was Inez herself. At least Sax appeared to think so, for he kissed her hand in his best and most deferential fashion. Donno Pancheo played her part so well, and was so attentive to Sax, that I was inclined to be jealous. Perhaps she hoped to make him ashamed of himself, and I think he was, if one could judge from the occasional flush that crimsoned his bronzed cheek.

"Ah, Senores, I am so glad you've come," lisped Inez, as we sat over coffee and cigars. "It is so lone. No fazzer, no muzzer; only bruzzer, and," with a gesture of despair, "he go away wiz himself ze long day."

"I haf moch works," explained Manuel. "My sister, she haf to amuse alone."

"Amuse," echoed Inez, with a wrathful flutter of her fan. "Holy Muzzer, wha' you say, Manuel. I do die for ze want of joy."

"Perhaps it would amuse you to see my yacht," said Sax, thinking to decoy his bird into the snare, and not guessing the purpose of this conversation. Inez clapped her hands.

"Aha. Zat would be real sweets," she cried.

14,000 MILE TRIP FOR SIX DINNERS

Chicago Student Will Come Very Near to Setting a New Mark in Travel.

JON'S LATEST CHAT

Some of the Topics That Have Made the Metropolis Open Its Eyes in the Last Week.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH.]
LONDON, Saturday.

MR. HARCOURT DIXON, of Chicago, who is entered as a student at the Inner Temple here, has just made a long journey in order to keep his Hilary term. Though born in England, Mr. Harcourt claims the Windy City as his home.

He arrived at the Temple last week, having crossed by the Lusitania, and he hopes to return by the same vessel. In order to be at the six dinners prescribed for every student who is not in residence at the university he will have travelled 14,000 miles before getting back into the familiar atmosphere of the stockyards and Lake Michigan. Mr. Dixon will undertake another excursion for the Easter term at the Temple.

Albert John Carolan, who described himself as "a master journalist and linguist," was sentenced to four years' penal servitude at Maidstone a few days ago. Mr. Carolan completely flabbergasted Judge Avory, of the Court of Criminal Appeal, when he asked the Judge to alter the sentence to one of one year's imprisonment in four different prisons in the district of Maidstone on the ground that a change of air would be beneficial to his health. When the Judge recovered from the shock he denied the application, but directed the medical officer to keep careful watch on the daily doings of Carolan.

Topical tunes on automobile horns produced by means of brass cylindrical records, such as are used for gramophones, are the latest addition to what you might call London street melodies—that is, if you don't care what you say. For some time it has been possible to get a testaphone, which will play four notes but the new automobile horn will play a whole series of tunes. I heard one a few days ago playing that charming tune, "Let's All Go Down the Strand," and live in hope of soon hearing an automobile horn record of the national epic, "Boiled Beef and Carrots."

WILL FLOAT OR FLY.

Mr. Samuel Saunders, who has built many successful motor boats and hydroplanes, is now at work on a boat which it is said will both float and fly, which can rise from the surface of the water, make an aerial voyage and descend to rest on the waves. This extraordinary looking machine, which was designed by Mons. Ravaud, a young French aviator, and has been built under his supervision, is on view at Cowes. Two flat floats on the water support a boat shaped hull overhead, with an aerial propeller driven by a fifty horse power engine at the stern. The rudder is at the bow. The boat, which is twenty feet long, will carry three passengers; in fact, Mons. Fabre, who owns this bird boat, says he is delighted at the success of the experiments.

Sir John Jackson, M. P., who has built important works all over England and India, has just signed a contract to construct a great dam at the Hindie section of the Euphrates for the Turkish government. The dam, which will be the most important work undertaken in Mesopotamia in modern times, will be of vast benefit to an enormous area of country which—and this will interest Americans—inxludes the site of the Garden of Eden.

Matthew Moulding, fifty-six years old, when charged in Marylebone Police Court with begging admitted that for thirty-six years dogs which he had taught to beg had been his only means of support. The constable who arrested him told how the man was seated in a bath chair behind which his wife stood and on the pavement beside them sat a little terrier with a money box hanging from its neck, and on its back a card bearing the words:—"Little doggie will be very grateful for any present given her to help her crippled master." The constable said that he was satisfied that the couple collected several pounds a day.

IMPROVING THE THAMES.

In five years' time, if the dreams of the Port Authority of London is realised, Mauretania and Lusitania, and even bigger ships, will be steaming up and down the Thames. At present the river is not deep enough, nor are there docks big enough to take vessels of more than a limited size.

"The port has really been derelict for twenty-five years," says Lord Devonport, the chairman of the Port Authority. "We want to make it so that it can take not only a Mauretania but any ship which may be constructed in the next thirty years. Apart from dock construction and improvement we are dealing with the river itself and increasing the depth of the water.

"We hope to have the improved West India docks open in three years and the new South Albert dock, big enough to take the finest ship afloat, open and working within five years."

The port has no idea of competing with Liverpool of Southampton in the matter of quick transit across the Atlantic, but the idea is that many people will prefer to steam straight from London on a six days' trip to America and save the railway journey.

New inventors are badly wanted in the Easter egg business. Already they are getting ready in the shops for Easter, preparations for the event, just as for Christmas, having to be made far in advance, and toy makers are sorely puzzled to the question of devising the novel

ONE MORE SALOME TWISTS IN LONDON

"An American First Nighter" Sends His Impressions of Her Efforts at Dancing.

(Special Dispatch.)
LONDON, Saturday.

YET another Salome dancer has come to town and to judgment. Ever since Miss Maude Allen three years ago shocked and attracted all London when she appeared clad in a bit of gauze and a few beads and started the Salome dancing craze the woods, or the London stages rather, have been full of her successors. They generally have been rather scrawny, seven-eighths naked young women who postured and called it dancing.

This newest comer, who appeared for the first time in England at the Hippodrome, is Sahary Djeli, described as "the rage of Paris." She was as undressed as any of her predecessors, more graceful than most of them, and as a female contortionist far surpassed all. She is said to have a fondness for snakes as companions.

Be that as it may, she gave abundant proof that she herself is about as spineless as any of her pets. She didn't dance, but she almost succeeded in tying herself in a hard knot and then rolled down a flight of stairs and died kerflop at the footlights. There was a large chorus of dancers and negro slaves for a background to her contortions.

Salomes seem not to have waned in popularity, for the audience applauded Mlle. Sahary Djeli most vigorously. She is even acrobatic enough to be able to pronounce her own name.

The Incorporated Stage Society has presented at the Aldwych Theatre three plays about which the censor had no say. They never had been presented to him and he had no authority over their production. That's what the society is for. Only members can attend the performances, given in a hired theatre, and so it's a private affair and nothing to do with the Lord Chamberlain.

In this case, however the censor could find no possible reason to object to any one of the three plays. They were as moral as a railway time table. Doubtless many in the audience were disappointed in consequence

The plays, however, were all so good that those who came to be shocked remained to be interested. The first was called "Pride of Life," by Ashley Dukes. It was a comedy of society life in an English manufacturing town, showing what weaklings a certain class of young English swells are.

The second, "The Little Stone House," was an extraordinarily strong play, with the scene in a cheap lodging house in a little Russian village. It was a grim tragedy of a mother's wasted love for a wicked son. A Russian princess who was present told me that the characters were very lifelike. The author was Mr. George Calderon.

The last play was the feature of the evening. It was entitled "The Passing of Talma" and was translated from the German by Henry Ainley. While he is unquestionably the best young actor in England he never did anything better than this part of Talma. He is really great. Sir Henry Irving could not have done it better. The scene was supposed to be the deathbed of France's leading actor in the early part of the last century. Even in death the self-control and mock heroism of the actor were superb. It was a wonderful blending of tragedy and comedy, the most difficult thing in the world for a playwright to accomplish. Mr. Ainley's impersonation kept the audience in alternate tears and laughter.

Here's a quiet tip to American managers:—Get the rights for these plays, especially the last two.

CANON GRENSIDE IS LINK WITH PAST

(Special Dispatch.)
LONDON, Saturday.

THE Rev. Canon W. B. Grenside, who has been vicar of Melling, Lancaster, for fifty-five years, has just completed his ninetieth birthday. In spite of his years he fully discharges all the duties of a parochial clergyman.

He possesses a wonderfully retentive memory, and readily recalls interesting dates and incidents from the time when he saw the Duke of Wellington and Sir Robert Peel going arm in arm to Westminster.

He is passionately fond of riding, and only a few weeks ago saddled for a meet of the Vale of Lune Hunt, and in the evening at a supper to parishioners contributed to the vocal entertainment.

He is not a teetotaller, his motto being, "Be temperate in all things."

NEW BRITISH MONEY ISN'T SATISFACTORY

(Special Dispatch.)
LONDON, Saturday.

The first samples of the new silver coinage are far from being satisfactory. The shilling is the chief coin just issued from the Bank of England, and there is only one bit improvement to be noticed. The lettering is more distinct than upon the King Edward money. In every other respect it is disappointing. It would appear that the die has been much too heavy. In fact, the impression of the King's head is seen quite distinctly on the reverse side. Nor is the milling as clean as it might be. It is said that the results may improve as the minting proceeds.

Brilliant Programmes Are Being Arranged for the Big Week in June.

(Special Dispatch.)
LONDON, Saturday

THE West End of London is beginning to wake up at last. Houses are being repainted and cleaned of their winter dirt and grime in anticipation of the entertaining for the coronation season, while others are already opened up.

There are three American duchesses in London with big establishments, and all three are contemplating a programme brilliant enough to do credit to the traditions of Anglo-American hospitality, which Londoners nowadays take as a matter of course.

The Duchess of Manchester has already appeared as a successful hostess at her house in Grosvenor Square, where the late Duchess used to entertain members of the royal family. The young Duchess' guests at the several dinner parties she has given of late have included some of the most prominent members of the brilliant circle that used to revolve round King Edward.

The Duchess of Marlborough will begin a succession of big dinner parties on her return from the Continent. She is, however, settled for a period at Lou Casteou, at Valescure, and is, according to letters received by friends in London, pleased with the improvement in the general health of her younger son, Lord Ivor Spencer-Churchill. She is entertaining numbers of friends on short visits.

The Duchess of Roxburghe, too, will before long be making her début as the hostess of Chesterfield House.

The Earl and Countess of Granard (the latter was Miss Beatrice Ogden Mills before she married Lord Granard, two years ago), who have been entertained by the King and Queen at Windsor, are now at their fine London residence, Forbes House, in Belgrave square, where they are giving a series of dinner parties. Forbes House was acquired by the Earl about eighteen months ago. It formerly belonged to the late Lord Penrhyn, when it was known as Mortimer House. It has been decorated and furnished most elaborately.

Lord Granard has the distinction of being one of the best judges of horses, and as master of the horse he has one of the royal carriages and a pair of horses always at his disposal for his private use. Four of the royal footmen are reserved entirely for attendance upon him—a privilege extended to no other member of the royal household.

BOY SCOUT RALLY FOR CORONATION

(Special Dispatch.)
LONDON, Saturday.

KING GEORGE has ordered a grand rally of Boy Scouts for his coronation week, and it will be on a much larger scale than the one planned by his late Majesty, as King George is patron of the Boys Scouts movement. The great feature will consist of a simultaneous concentrating rush from all sides of many thousands of cheering Scouts till they form a circle round the inspecting officers. Then they will sing their "Hail to the Chief!" and at once squat down, silent, to hear the words King George will address to them.

GEORGE MEREDITH HAD TO DIE TO WIN MEDAL

(Special Dispatch.)
LONDON, Saturday.

In literature sometimes, as in insurance always, you have to die to win, if the case of George Meredith can be taken as a criterion. The other day Mr William Meredith, son of the distinguished author, received the gold medal of the Royal Society of Literature "in recognition of the services" of his father. An English writer suggests that, to add the final touch to this post mortem praise, the poet laureate, Mr Alfred Austin, might be induced to write a poem of appreciation, the underthought, perhaps, being that this would reconcile the author to death.

SOLDIER DUKE IS A FRIEND OF INDIANS

(Special Dispatch.)
LONDON, Saturday.

As one result of the Duke of Connaught's appointment as Governor General of Canada the English newspapers are full of anecdotes dealing with the life and characteristics of this soldier Prince.

He is said to be not only well acquainted with Canada and Canadians, but a great favorite with the Indians, being a member in good standing of the Six Nations.

Over here they say he is "the only white man who enjoys this privilege" and is known to the red men as 'Cousin Arthur.'" In this connection one of the weeklies says:—

"A strange gentleman who will no doubt welcome the Duke of Connaught's appointment is an old Indian called Bill Prince. He is especially partial to royalty, and he never fails to put in an appearance when distinguished personages visit his province. His favorite pastime is to rub by the side of the royal carriage and shake hands with the occupants. In this manner he has shaken hands with both the present king and the late King Edward."

Coronation Will Be Very Gorgeous

Knights of the Thistle or of St. Patrick Will Wear the Robes of Their Order.

(Special Dispatch.)
LONDON, Saturday

EVERYTHING points to the coronation ceremony being a gorgeous spectacle, in some ways more so than the last occasion. It seems possible, for instance, that peers who are Knights of St. Patrick or of the Thistle will wear robes of the order to which they belong instead of the usual coronation robes, and this should give a greater wealth of variety and color.

At the coronation of the late King only the Knights of the Garter and peers taking part in the procession wore the robes of their orders. Besides making for picturesqueness, the new departure would be a compliment to Ireland and Scotland by placing the members of the orders of St. Patrick and the Thistle on the same footing as the Knights of the Garter.

After several assertions and denials there is now official authority for the announcement that the King and Queen will visit Ireland in the season. Their majesties' visit will lend a stimulus to the Dublin season which it at present badly needs, and will thereby conduce to the prosperity of the country among every section of the population. Furthermore, there is every reason to expect that if the visit proves the success that is anticipated it will be repeated and will tend to become, when their majesties' arrangements allow, a regular institution in future years.

Dublin appears to be in a whirl of excitement over the promised royal visit, and the brilliance of the functions during their majesties' stay in the Irish capital will be some compensation for the dulness of recent "seasons" in Ireland. Dublin will be full to overflowing during the royal visit.

Those who own houses within easy reach will have large house parties, among them, of course, Lord and Lady Powerscourt, at Powerscourt, and Lord Iveagh, at Farmleigh, and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Guinness, at Glenmaroon. Viscountess Iveagh, who is now resting at Valescure after a serious operation, will also, it is hoped, be well enough by that time to entertain. The Earl and Countess of Meath and Lord HolmPatrick are also, sure to be at their Irish seats for the occasion.

BIG TARIFF UNION A JAPANESE PLAN

Suggestion to Join with Others in Opposition to Germany's European Coalition.

(SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.)
TOKIO, January 19.

SUENOBU MICHINARI, the head of the Tokio Marine Insurance Company, has a striking article in the current issue of Industrial Japan in which he recommends that Japan should take the initiative in proposing the organisation of a great tariff union between herself, Great Britain, Russia, China and other countries, in opposition to the proposed European union undertaken by Germany, and also against the American tariff union.

"It is high time," says Mr. Michinari, "to encourage free trade among allied countries, and to oppose the unallied Powers by the force of this extended doctrine of protection."

The article is aimed directly against the latest Japanese tariff, which he condemns as bad in itself and calculated to imperil the continuance of the Anglo-Japanese alliance. Arguing against excessive protection, he points out that while America and Germany are protectionist countries in one direction, they are free trade in another.

"It must be remembered," he writes, "that the trade of America represents about half that of the whole world. In point of railway mileage, too, she has half the aggregate length of railways in the world. Her territory, moreover, is vast and broad, comprising forty States, some of which are larger in area than the whole of Japan.

"Thus it follows that America witnesses keen commercial competition between her various States, which follow free trade principles between themselves.

"The protectionism of America, then, is simply a policy against the other Powers. Germany, too, fosters the free trade doctrine among her united States, leaving her interstate commerce to free competition. This means that the protective policy of Germany is also directed against other countries.

"But even Germany is finding that her external protective policy is not an unmixed blessing and she is now enlarging the boundaries of her free trade sphere by including therein Austria-Hungary, Turkey and the Balkan States, and is also anxious to organize a commercial or tariff union between these countries. Signs are not wanting that Germany is determined to carry out this policy even at the terrible cost of a war."

The writer infers from these examples that the doctrine of protection in its narrow sense is only suicidal to a State's finance. Mr. Michinari admits, however, that owing to the load of debt, domestic and foreign, under which Japan is at present groaning, customs duties appear to be inevitable for revenue purposes, and he therefore suggests that a uniform duty should be imposed upon all imports without exception as the most simple and effective method of solving the problem.

SEEKS NEW LOAN METHOD.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

Tokio, Jan 29.—While British, American, German and French capitalists are successfully investing money in China, Japan, in the opinion of her leading financiers, lacks suitable organs for the proper handling of loans.

This want was felt more acutely than usual when the Far Eastern Industrial Company recently loaned the Hankow water works 1,200,000 yen, which amount could be furnished only after protracted negotiations with the creditors on the subject of terms.

The methods adopted by the Specie Bank and the Bankers' Syndicate in Japan do not allow them to act freely in transactions of this nature.

It is now rumored that certain business men and politicians are contemplating the increase of the capital of the Far Eastern Industrial Company, for which purpose, with the authorization of the government, loan bonds may be issued.

JAPAN'S CAVALRY TESTS ENDURANCE

(SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.)
TOKIO, January 23.

THE Eleventh regiment of Japanese cavalry, stationed in Manchuria, has been undergoing an endurance test which Japanese newspapers describe as unique. The test took the form of a long distance ride from Lairen to Kungchuling, a distance of five hundred miles.

According to one Japanese authority, the only previous cavalry feat at all comparable with this was the ride of Austrian troopers between Vienna and Berlin; but in the latter case not only was the distance smaller, but the climatic conditions rendered the test infinitely milder than that to which the Japanese horsemen have just been subjected.

Fifteen men were chosen and divided into three detachments of five each, commanded by lieutenants. The detachments set out on three successive days from Fushimi Park, Dairen, carrying with them an ample supply of ammunition for fear of attack from mounted bandits.

According to Japanese reports this precaution was justified, for one of the detachments was ambushed by desperadoes near the Shaho River, but after a brisk exchange of fire succeeded in putting the enemy to flight. The same detachment on the second day out strayed into swampy ground near Kaiping, and spent four hours in covering two miles. On the third day the second detachment overtook the first, and together they indulged in a rest of seven hours, for they had slept, on an average, only one hour a day during the first three days, and were on the point of breakdown. On the fourth day the two detachments crossed the Hun River and rode into Mukden amid loud shouts of "Banzai" from their compatriots.

Exclusive of the time devoted to rest, the winning detachment spent five days, four hours and forty-five minutes in reaching Kungchuling, and the slowest six days, one hour and thirty-five minutes.

PLEA FOR FOREIGNERS AND FAIR TREATMENT

(SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.)

Tokio, Jan 29, 1911.—That a feeling of virulent anti-foreignism is permeating Japan is the opinion of the Japan Herald, one of the leading foreign newspapers published at Yokohama.

Commenting upon a recent disgraceful assault committed by a Japanese man upon a foreign woman at the Yokohama railway station, the Herald says:—

"Insults to foreigners are of such common occurrence that something ought to be done to check what can only be regarded as a rising tide of anti-foreign feeling. Any person who has sufficient knowledge of the Japanese language can vouch for the disrespect frequently shewn to inoffensive foreigners, not only in the treaty ports, but in the country districts as well.

"This lack of courtesy is most apparent among school children and has on more than one occasion given rise to the opinion that the aversion to foreigners is not a spontaneous growth, but is the result of the inculcation by the teachers of exaggerated notions of loyalty.

"Some time ago it was pointed out in a semi-official journal that foreigners lost sight of the fact that they are really the guests of the Japanese nation, but in view of the incidents recorded above it would appear that many of the Japanese are losing much of the courtesy for which they were formally so justly famed."

American College Club of North China and Its Scope

BANQUET OF THE COLLEGE CLUB OF NORTH CHINA.

Organization Is Composed of Americans and Chinese Educated in America.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]
PEKIN, Jan. 27, 1911.

THE formation of the American College Club of North China, with a membership of 200 Chinese educated in the United States and American college men resident in Pekin and other North China cities, creates a valuable addition to the instrumentalities working for closer relationship between the two countries. The attendance was about half Chinese and half American. Dr. W. W. Yen, of the University of Virginia, presided and acted as toastmaster. Mr. W. J. Calhoun, the American Minister, sat on his right, and Mr. S. S. Knabenshue, Consul General at Tientsin, on his left.

The large dining hall was draped with Chinese and American flags and with a large number of college banners. There were excellent speeches, that of Mr. E. P. Allen, Yuntai Jung Tsung-yuen, Calhoun being particularly notable, and college songs by a Yale quartet, by groups of men representing other institutions and at times by the whole gathering.

The business portion of the meeting consisted in the election of the following officers:—

"Do not speke ze Americans, my sister," said Manuel sharply.

"Real sweet" was no doubt an expression used by Dodge. Sax guessed as much, for I saw him smile under his moustache. Then he repeated his invitatiaon. "You will come to luncheon to-morrow, Senora?"

"Ah, but no," interposed Manuel quickly. "It cannot be; it is not proper zat a Spanish lady should pay ze veesit."

Inez looked disappointed, and Sax swore under his breath; but Manuel sent his sister away pouting with her duenna, a scowling old creature, who crossed herself, and cursed Sax and me as heretics without lowering her voice. When the women disappeared Manuel made himself agreeable, and Sax, suppressing his disappointment, responded; but he kept close to me all the time, so I could not explain to the young Mexican; but when we departed, Manuel squeezed my hand to show that he understood.

Sax was in a bad temper when he got back to the yacht, and Dodge swore in his best fashion when he heard the news. "We must carry her off," said Dodge scowling. "I can't be cavorting about here all m' life."

"Oh, there ain't no difficulty about the kidnapping," said Herry, who had been making enquiries. "The gal goes every evenin' t' the adobe meetin' house where Father Pedro works the praying machine, and th' old woman runs alongside. I'll hide with a few shell-backs near at hand, and yank the gal aboard, afore the brother can git wind of the job."

"It's a whizz," agreed Dodge, and Sax nodded. He wished to get away from San Benito as soon as possible. I think in his own heart he was ashamed of the whole business.

With Herry, we went again to visit the Pancheos, and the Captain was—as he expressed it—knocked all of a heap when he saw the Senora.

"My stars," said he, "but she's a dandy angel, you bet-" and he drank her health more times than was good for him.

Being ashamed, Sax rather avoided Inez; but to give Manuel an opportunity of speaking to me, she insisted on showing him her private garden in the company of the indispensable duenna. Herry was left drinking at the table, and Manuel spoke with me in the patio. Our conversation was short and to the point, as we had not much time.

"Don Ricardo," said Pancheo, grasping my hand, "you have behaved like a brave cabalero. Inez has told me all. I shall never be able o reward you."

"I think you will, Manuel," said I significantly, and he knew what I meant.

"Why not?" he said laughing. "Inez has loved you ever since we met in San Francisco. At that time I did not approve; but now—yes, I think your service demands the reward you ask."

When he left the Pancheo mansion for the last time, Herry and Sax had quite made up their minds to abduct Inez the next evening. They explained their plans to Dodge, who approved. "An' if you kin shoot the young Greaser in the scrimmage," said he grimly, "I'll pile on another thousand dollars."

After that cowardly speech, I concluded to leave Dodge and Manuel to adjust their own affairs. It didn't seem to me that I was called upon to save the life of a man who was bent on murder.

III.

The next evening about sundown, Herry and Sax were summoned by the Angelus to their evil deed. They did not condescend to details, nor did they ask me to accompany them. I witnessed their departure in the company of four sailors armed to the teeth, and sat down to poker with Dodge. We played cards for quite three hours but my thoughts were less on the game than on Manuel. When we rose, however, I was winner to a considerable amount.

"I ain't got enough to pay up," said Dodge, feeling in his pockets. "You wait till we fetch 'Frisco. All I have is the bag of dollars for the business."

"Why don't you give Sax a cheque?"

"Not much sense in that, doctor. I don't want no one to trace my hand in this racket. Cash down is what I pay, and as soon as th' gal's on board Sax handles the dollars. Then we part."

"Well, Mr. Dodge, I tell you what," said I after a pause, "give me one of those handsome Derringers you have, and we'll cry quits. If it comes to a fight I may as well be armed."

The millionaire handed me a revolver with alacrity. "Here y' are," said he. "I guess brother Manuel won't let th' gal slip without a scrimmage. Shoot him if you can, doctor."

I felt more inclined to shoot the man for making such a proposition to an English gentleman, but restraining myself with an effort, I sought the deck, thrusting the weapon into my hip pocket as I went. It was loaded in all six chambers, so if Sax attempted violence, when he came to know what I had done, I was ready to meet him on equal terms. There was considerable excitement about the business, and as I paced the deck a body of men came scrambling down on to the beach. I heard the murmur of many voices, and shortly the gig shot alongside.

"Have you got her?" I asked, leaning over the side.

I quite expected to hear a volley of disappointed oaths, but to my dismay Herry sang out cheerfully. "You bet we have her," said he: "th' twenty thousand dollars is ours for sure."

I heard a chuckle from Dodge, who was peeping from the companion, and I could have stamped wih rage at thinking how the villain's plan had succeeded. It was plain that Manuel's scheme, whatever it was, had failed. Donna Inez was passed up the side, and although her veil was down, I could see that she was shaking with terror and shame. Sax hurried her down the companion with a murmured apology.

Presently Sax came on deck with

MODERN MARTYRS!

The age of martyrs is not passed. There are thousands of women all over the country enduring physical torture and mental anguish almost beyond description. They are not victims of persecution, like the martyrs of old; they are not called on to face the scaffold or the stake, but their sufferings—borne in silence and hidden from the world at large—are scarcely less intense.

These ladies, as a rule, are women and girls of refined and sensitive temperaments. Knowing that their sufferings are due to a disordered condition of the female functions, their native modesty deters them from seeking relief in the earlier stages; and when they do consult a physician, they usually get some drug mixture to take internally, which is not more effective for troubles of this kind than it would be for a toothache, a bruise, or any other strictly local ailment.

The seat of the trouble being in some one of the female organs, the remedy, to be effective, must act on this portion of the anatomy.

This is the secret of the success which always follows the use of ORANGE LILY in derangements of this kind. It is a strictly local treatment. It is absorbed directly into the parts that are inflamed and congested and its beneficent, soothing influence is noticeable from the start. The irritation of the delicate membrane is relieved, the congestion is overcome by the discharge of the watery matter which served to oppress the nerves and cause mental depression, the nerves are toned and invigorated, and the sunshine and joy of life again becomes part of her being. Read the following letters:

Archer, Ont., Feb. 1, '09.

Dear Mrs. Currah:—I received your kind letter some time ago, but was feeling so well and not needing medicine, that I neglected replying sooner. I must say I have more confidence in ORANGE LILY than in any other thing I have ever used. Before I knew or found out anything about this medicine, I doctored away hundreds of dollars, and when I thought I was dying with inflammation of the womb, a box of ORANGE LILY was sent me through the mail from a friend. The first suppository I used I was greatly relieved, and in a few months completely cured. That was nine years ago this winter, so you can imagine with what esteem I hold the ORANGE LILY. I am thankful there is such a relief for poor, suffering women, for I have been one of them and can sympathize with others. Your sincere friend, MRS. NORMAN WEAVER.

Trenton, Ont., Dec. 4th, 1909.

Mrs. F. E. Currah, Windsor, Ont.—

Dear Friend,—I feel it my duty to write you a testimonial as to what Orange Lily has done for me. Last winter I was feeling very miserable indeed. I could scarcely do my housework during my menstrual period, and for two months or more I was never free from pain in the womb and ovaries. The pain would run down the groin, so I would frequently nearly double up. Then the pain began going up the back of my neck to my brain until I hardly knew what I was doing at times. Life was a burden indeed. I finally could endure it no longer, so went to our leading town doctor and had an examination. He pronounced it (I forget the word) a rigid condition of the generative organs, produced by repeated attacks of inflammation. He said I would have to take a course of treatment, and if that failed to overcome the rigid condition I might, in time be compelled to have the ovaries removed. I objected to that, so filled out Dr Cooney's symptom blank and forwarded it to him, and he diagnosed the disease the same as my local doctor, so I decided to take Dr Cooney's Treatment. I have used two jars of Cerate Massage, two packages of Herbal Womb Tonic and six boxes of Orange Lily. It is eight months since I began the treatment but I feel like a new woman. I work right through everything now. Hardly know a pain, even during menstruation now. I often say, "I would not take $100 and be in the state that I was last March." I feel that Dr Cooney's Home Treatment is a Godsend to suffering womankind, and shall continue to sound its praises whenever I have an opportunity.

Yours gratefully, MRS T. H. HATTON.

ORANGE LILY as a remedy for these ills, as well as for leucorrhoea, painful periods, irregularities, cancers in their earlier stages, tumors, displacements, lacerations, and all ovarian troubles, has long since passed the experimental stage. So confident am I of this that I will send ten days' treatment, which is worth 25 cents, to any sufferer ABSOLUTELY FREE. The treatment is inexpensive, used at home, and no physician is necessary. Send at once for the a bland smile and his arms full of bags. For the moment I lost my temper, and scattered all prudent resolutions to the wind. "Has Judas received his thirty pieces of silver?" I asked with a sneer.

"What the—" he began, then broke off suddenly; "what's that?"

He might well ask. From the cabin came the wild shriek of mortal agony, the cry of a man struck down. Sax wheeled and whipped out his revolver, and Herry made for the companion; but before he could descend a slim figure dashed him aside. The next moment Don Manuel was before us.

He was dressed merely in trousers and shirt, and his face was pearly white in the moonlight. With eyes flashing like those of a panther, he glared at Sax and the paralyzed Captain. In his right hand he gripped a bowie knife, from the blade of which dripped blood. No need to ask whose it was. I knew that Dodge had paid the penalty of his evil deeds, and taking in the situation at a glance, I leaped to the side of my friend with my revolver poised. Herry and Sax faced us with their earnings at their feet, and the crew at their backs. And all this happened in a flash under the radiance of the tropical moonlight.

"Aha," cried Manuel savagely, "you looks at me, and at ze knife. Look well, oh you evil ones. I am Manuel, who wears ze dress of my sister, an' it is me—mine self you bring here. I see ze Americano, and behold—" he flashed the knife exultingly.

"You have killed him?" shrieked Sax, recovering his wits.

"He is dead—all dead. He did—"

"Here's a blamed evil," growled Herry raising his weapon. "Guess I'll lay tha Greaser longside Dodge. Hullo!" He recoiled before the barrel of my revolver.

"He's in it too—a spy—a traitor," cried Sax, and fired.

But Manuel was on him with a bound, as the shot whizzed past my head. The next moment Sax was tumbling on the deck, and I was shouting to the Mexican not to kill him. Herry got in a shot, and my left arm fell useless; but I could still use my right, and with it I dragged Manuel to the gunwale. The crew made a concerted dash, but we leapt overboard without thinking. Manuel gave a wild, strange cry as we struck the water. I thought he was wounded, but it was to bring help. A line of fire ran along the beach, and amidst the cracking of musketry we made for the shore. Manuel aided me, and shots from the boat dimpled the water like hailstones. The beach was thronged with peons, and Herry seeing this hesitated to lower the gig. He saw that help had come, and that the game was up. Sax leaning over the side swore at the pitch of his voice; but I cared very little, and Inez was safe. I hardly felt the pain of my wound, as Manuel hauled me on to the sands. With a triumphant laugh I shouted to the Colonel. "Sold, you blackguard, sold!" I cried and four or five shots came ripping past as Sax emptied his Derringer in impotent rage.

Whether Manuel intended to attack the yacht or no I can't say; but Herry was too far-sighted to give him the chance. A volume of smoke belched from the funnel, and the screw began to spin. With all speed, the boat surged for the entrance, amidst the triumphant cries of the peons. With that sound in my ears, with the sight of the flying yacht before my eyes, I fell on the beach faint with loss of blood.

When I came to myself I was in bed. Manuel was on one side of me, and Inez knelt on the other. Seeing that I had recovered my senses, Pancho did the very best thing to forward my recovery. He placed the hand of Inez in mine and left the room. Then we kissed, and thus we became betrothed. But she was a nurse for a long time before she became my wife.

We heard nothing more of the yacht or of Dodge. I expect the villains dropped the body overboard, an steamed into safer waters with their plunder. But they were wise enough not to return to 'Frisco, so it happened that no one ever knew what became of the millionaire. His strange disappearance was a nine-days's wonder; but he had covered his trail so cleverly that he could not be traced. Manuel held his tongue, as there was no need to make the business public; and after all the millionaire deserved his fate. But the irony of the whole business was that Dodge, not having revoked his will by marriage left the whole of the Pancheo property, out of which he had cheated Manuel, to Inez. She passed it on to her brother, but he insisted that I should become his partner in the wheat-growing business. I became so, after I resumed my real name and married Inez; and then, as the tale says, we were happy ever afterwards.

So that was how the ace came into my hand, and that was how I played it. And I must say that on losing the game Fortune paid up very handsomely.

Cobwebs in the Morning.

Cobwebs in the head on rising in the morning is the result of a Lazy Liver, one or two mornings in succession and sick headache follows.

Father Morriscy's Liver Pills will clear the Brain.

These Pills are a purely vegetable compound prepared with great care, and are without doubt the very best pills for general use, on the market. The greatest care has been given to selecting the ingredients, and being entirely vegetable, they act upon the liver and bowels in such a manner as not to disturb the other functions of the body as many pills do.

As a Liver Invigorator, Blood Purifier and General System Renovator, they are unequalled. Sick headache is invariably brought on by a sluggish liver, constipation or irregular bowels; these pills are a cure for sick headache in any form.

Pimples, eruptions and yellow skin are often caused by a lazy liver; one pill three times a week, will soon clear the complexion. Price 25c. per box.

Had a Distressing, Tickling Sensation in The Throat.

COULD NOT SLEEP AT NIGHT.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is rich in the lung-healing virtues of the Norway pine tree. It is a pleasant, safe and effectual medicine that may be confidentially relied upon as a specific for Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Hoarseness, Sore Throat, Quinsy, and all Throat and Lung Troubles.

It will stop that tickling in the throat which causes the dry cough that keeps you awake at night.

Mrs. J. A. Smith, Marshville, Ont., writes:—"I had a very bad cough and that distressing tickling sensation in my throat. It was so bad I could not sleep at night and my lungs were so sore I had to give up work.

"Our doctor gave me medicine but it did me no good, so I got a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and by the time I had used two bottles I was entirely cured. I am always recommending it to my friends."

Do not be humbugged into buying the so-called Norway Pine Syrups but be sure and insist on "Dr. Wood's." It is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; the price 25c.

O that a man might know
The end of this day's business ere it come!
But it sufficeth that the day will end,
And then the end is known.
Julius Caesar, Act., V., Sc. 1.

Every general has, like Brutus, on the eve of a battle longed in his heart to know what success would attend his efforts. It is well that the end cannot definitely be foretold. If any army were sure of defeat it would rush in a panic from the field at the approach of the opposing force. If it had absolute assurance of victory it would not put forth the effort that would make it strong for future battles. The battle will end, that is sufficient. Let every effort be put forth to win a decided victory.

Brutus is not the only individual who has longed for definite information with regard to the future. The desire to have accurate knowledge of coming events is universal. Witches, wizards and astrologers, professing to be able to foretell events, did a flourishing business in the pre-scientific age; and in modern times palmists and fortune tellers of various kinds still find their dupes. Curiosity with regard to the fate of one's business or life has induced many to seek those who profess to be able to look into the seeds of time and tell which grains would grow and which would not. This curiosity is a sign of weakness and impatience. It marks a tendency to lean upon others; the wise man can approximate at his own future. It denotes discontentment; the strong man is content with the present, while building on it for the future. The day will end; be ready for it. Every hour should be lived as though in the next the end would be known. There will then be no overanxiety what is or is not to be the ultimate outcome of present actions.

Would it be well if the future were an open book and the end known? No worse fate could befall mankind. It is a law of nature that many shall strive for the success of the few. A thousand acorns struggled to live their lives for every oak that grows confident of long life and that success of any one individual is in a sense the product of the efforts of hundreds who have seemingly failed. Let it be supposed that a man knew that on a definite day in a given year he was to die. What would likely be the effect on him? If he were a peculiarly strong man he would work with energy to complete as many tasks as possible before his death. The majority of men would, however, be enervated by the shadow of the day of doom. It would press upon their imaginations with unbearable heaviness. They would be like the condemned man from whom all hope has been taken, counting the hours till his execution.

The great beauty o flife is that the end of each day's business is concealed. With rare exceptions all men are confident of long life and that success will crown their present efforts. If it were not so effort would cease. The average man, if he knew that he had but a year to live, would fold his year he might accomplish something hand and cease toiling. Yet in that worth the whole of his previous existence. Again, if the ultimate fate of each individual were known, what unhappiness would be in the world! When incurable disease has taken hold of friend or kindred sorrow presses heavily upon the hearts of companions and relatives. Until the fatal hour arrives those in close contact with the victim suffer greatly from the mere knowledge of the inevitable. If the death hour of each individual were fixed in the calendar as are feast days, hope, which "springs eternal in the human breast," would be non-existent; and hope is the star that guides, the sun that brightens man in his journey through life.

Suppose, once more, that business success or failure could be accurately foretold. Would this knowledge be conducive of energetic action? What would be the use of toiling late and early, of studying and planning, if in the end failure for the individual was to be the result? It is well that a knowledge of their business future is concealed from men; All are confident that the end of the day's business will be success. It is this confidence that has made men great inventors and producers. Of the thousands who put forth effort but few are successful from the world's point of view. The wayside is white with the bones of those who have failed. And yet they have not failed, their efforts have encouraged others. The foundation stones of a cathedral are hidden fro mview, they attract no attention, yet they are vastly more important to the structure than the golden home which inspires admiration in the multitude. Every worker may be a humble stone in the foundation of some noble enterprise. Should he know that his ambitions would never be realized his heart would cease to hope and his hands to work.

It is a blessing that the future is a closed book; that the end of the day's business is concealed. The end is coming, and there is much to be done. The crown of successful achievement may be yours, but it will not be won by sitting idly by and awaiting the inevitable doom.

EXTENSIVE EXPERIMENTS

From Farm and Dairy.

Some extensive experiments have been conducted by the Wisconsin Experiment Station to determine the value of salt for milch cows and also the amount of salt that should be given. The following is a summary of their findings: In every case the cows exhibited an abnormal appetite for salt after having been deprived of it for two or three weeks, but in no case did the health of the animal, as shown by the general appearance, the live weight, or the yield of milk, appear to be affected until a much longer time had elapsed. This period of immunity varied with individual cows from less than one month to more than one year.

In every case there was finally reached a condition of low vitality, in which a sudden and complete breakdown occurred, from which recovery was rapid if salt was supplied. This stage was marked by loss of appetite, a generally haggard appearance, lustreless eyes, a rough coat, and a very rapid decline in both live weight and yield of milk.

The breakdown was most likely to occur at calving or immediately after, when the system was weakened and the flow of milk large. In general the cows giving the largest amount of milk were the first to show signs of distress. They all suffered less in pasture than when confined to the stable.

SUFFICIENT FOR DRY COWS

The behavior of the cows in these trials indicates that their food contained sufficient chlorine to maintain them in good health, while dry, for an indefinite period, and it seems probable that a dry cow or steer would suffer no great inconvenience if given no salt except that contained in the normal ration. It is calculated that the ration given in these experiments contained chlorine equivalent to about .75 of an ounce of salt per day, and it is assumed that this is the minimum amount of salt required per 1,000 pounds live weight to sustain an animal that is not producing milk. If this amount is not present in the food, it should be supplied directly. In addition to this a cow should receive enough salt to compensate for the chlorine contained in the milk produced. In general this will require about .6 of an ounce of salt for each 20 pounds of milk given. A slight excess will do no harm, and it is recommended that dairy cows be given at least one ounce of salt a day. Exceptionally heavy milkers will require more than this.

The uniform results obtained with all cows employed in these trials indicate beyond question that in Wisconsin, and in other regions similarly located, salt in addition to that obtained in the food is absolutely essential to the continued health of a dairy cow while producing milk.

HONEST SALOON-KEEPER

Frank Statement Issued by Man in Tombstone, Ariz.

Tomstone, Ariz., claims credit for the frankest saloonkeeper in the United States. He keeps the Temple Bar Saloon, and advertises his business with surprising frankness. "Allow me to inform you that you are fools" he says, yet his place is usually filled. He maintains that he is an honest saloon keeper and that it will not hurt his business to tell the truth about it. He has had printed an advertising card which would make an excellent manuscript for a temperance lecture. Copies are being circulated through the Western States, and are attracting much attention. The card reads as follows:

Friends and Neighbours; I am grateful for past favours, and, having supplied my store with a fine line of choice wines and liquors, allow me to inform you that I shall continue to make drunkards, paupers and beggars for the sober, industrious, respectable part of the community to support. My liquors will excite riot, robbery and bloodshed.

These will diminish your comforts, increase your expense and shorten life. I shall confidently recommend them as sure to multiply fatal accidents and incurable diseases.

They will deprive some of life, others of reason, many of characters, and all of peace. They will make fathers fiends, wives widows, children orphans and all poor. I will train your sons in infidelity, dissipation, ignorance, lewdness and every other vice, I will corrupt the ministers of religion, obstruct the gospel, defile the church, and cause as much temporal and eternal death as I can. I will thus 'accomodate the public' It may be at the loss of my never-dying soul. But I have a family to support—the business pays— and the public encourages it.

I have paid my license and the traffic is lawful; and if I don't sell it, somebody else will. I know the Bible says: "Thou shalt not kill," "No drunkard shall enter the kingdom of Heaven," and I do not expect the drunkard maker to fare any better, but I want an easy living, and I have resolved to gather the wages of iniquity and fatten on the ruin of my species.

I shall, therefore, carry on my business with energy and do my best to diminish the wealth of the nation and endanger the safety of the State. As my business flourishes in proportion to your sensuality and ignorance I will do my best to pervert moral purity and intellectual growth.

Should you doubt my ability I refer you to the pawnshops, the poorhouse, the police court, the hospital, the penitentiary and the gallows, where you will find many of my best customers have gone. A sight of them will convince you that I do what I say. Allow me to inform you that you are fools, and that I am an honest saloonkeeper.

A Model Woman's Prison.

"New South Wales is said to have the model woman's prison of the world. The cells are all well lighted, plastered and coloured light green. The bathrooms are supplied with both hot and cold water and each woman has a daily bath. All the wardresses are educated women.

"The women are known only by numbers, their names never being disclosed, so that no prison taint may cling to them after they have served their terms. While in prison they are divided into three grades; in the second grade they may have flowers, in their cells, in the third they may have pictures also.

"There are no positive punishments. Privileges are given as rewards for good work, and forfeited for misbehaviour. They grow their own vegetables, are taught to cut out and make plain clothes, and to cook and wash. A committee of Sydney women meets every week at the prison to talk to the women and arrange to help those who are leaving. The discharged prisoners are returned to their friends or sent to places of employment, which must be at least one hundred miles from Sydney.'

The above is taken from a Canadian daily in the Province of Quebec, and at this time of visitors coming from over the seas to implore for women suffrage on this side, it may, perhaps "give one to think" as the French say. New South Wales has women suffrage in part, if not in whole, and it is probably part of the women's work which has accomplished this great and piteous object.

But it is no new work. In the early part of the last century one woman, Mrs. Fry, of Yorkshire, a Quakeress, opposed to everything, both of her nature and religion, in the way of fighting methods, gained one of the most magnificent victories in women's work. She heard of conditions in the prisons such as are unknown now and boldly faced them first trying to help personally by visits to the most degraded women, and, with her Bible in her hand, in her simple, dull, Quaker garb, which she never laid aside, she gained audiences, from crowned heads to the plainest legislator.

Mrs. Fry inaugurated reforms of the most searching description in all women prisons; also visiting foreign authorities to gain information. Her simple, direct, and dignified way gained consideration which probably will never be shown to the present militant suffragette. Some years ago when staying at Lewes, in Sussex, where the third (I think) largest English prison is, I met a dear gentlewoman (how many seem, in these turbulent times, to have forgotten that name!) whose whole life almost was given up to visiting the poor degraded women prisoners; quietly, gently she did the Master's command, and many, indeed, were enabled to stand up and call her work a blessed one.

Though the wife of one of the representatives of one of the oldest Scotch titles, and almost broken-hearted by the death of her only son in the South African war, she let neither her social duties or her mother's grief ever interfere in her women's work in the great prison. And there was nothing of the suffragette in this!

PACKING ICE

From Farm and Dairy.

Ed. Lane, Waterloo Co., Ont.

I have had considerable experience in packing ice in all kinds of houses from air-tight ones down to those of most simple structure. I consider the following the best plan of house for a farmer:

Select a spot shaded by a tree in the middle of the day and away from any other building in order to have a good air circulation. Make the house 8 by 10 or 10 by 12, according to the amount of ice needed. The walls are made 10 feet high.

Put up scantling not more than two feet apart all the way around, leaving a doorway at one end. Board up the inside with good lumber. The roof should be shingled. Leave a wide cornice. An opening between plate and roof boards of at least two inches should be left on both sides so that air can circulate whichever way the wind blows. In the centre of the roof should be a ventilator.

AN OPEN SIDE

For easing on the outside use lumber six or eight inches wide. Put on the bottom board first. Let the next one lap over the first about an inch. Place a small block at every stud so that it will not touch the lower board by a half inch. Proceed in this way to the top. Such a wall will give better satisfaction than when made solid and filled with sawdust.

On the floor of the house place six inches of sawdust, then a close layer of old fence rails or straight poles, not over three inches in diameter, and then three or four inches of sawdust on top of the rails. On this lay the first layer of ice, packing the blocks as close as possible. See that no sawdust gets in between the blocks. Leave a space of six to eight inches between the ice and sides of the building if sawdust is used for packing. If straw is used the space will have to be from 10 to 12 inches. Do not fill the cracks between the blocks with snow or water. Take a carpenter's adze and level off all inequalities to make a level bottom for the next tier, and there will be sufficient to fill the spaces between the blocks. If straw is used for packing the sides it should be put through the straw-cutter. Pea straw is preferable.

HARVEST IN MILD WEATHER

Hard frosty weather is not needed when putting up ice. The best time is when the thermometer is a few degrees below freezing. One can then cut as much in half a day as he could in a whole day with the thermometer below zero. In addition, a great deal more ice will go in a given space. A cube of ice, 12 inches square, on a soft day, if transferred to a temperature below zero for a while, will be found to measure nearly 12½ inches square. We can get, therefore, a good many hundreds of pounds more ice in a small house in soft weather than in hard, frosty weather. I have seen ice packed in soft weather come out at the end of the summer with the saw marks in the blocks.

As soon as the weather begins to get a little warm it is a good plan to tramp the packing as hard as possible, especially around the sides. It is now that one will see the advantage of good short straw.

NEW ZEALAND CHEESE

From Farm and Dairy.

New Zealand cheese on the British market, coming as it does at a season when Canadian cheese is not being manufactured, has done away with the necessity of holding "Canadians" over for the season of non-production. As a consequence Canadian cheese shipped to Great Britain is consumed almost immediately. The consumer, therefore, is obtaining Canadian cheese in a condition greener than ever before. If Canadian cheese is to hold its reputation for quality on the British market, it is necessary that it be held for a longer time in the curing rooms of the factories. Otherwise it will reach the consumer in such an immature condition as to turn him against our cheese.

The temperature in the curing rooms of most of our factories cannot be controlled. Consequently the cheese is being shipped almost immediately it is made. We cannot expect the buyers to hold the cheese till cured. The remedy for this condition of affairs lies entirely with the patrons. We must establish cool curing rooms in all of our factories. According to Geo. H. Barr, Chief of the Dairy Division, Ottawa, a cool curing room will pay for itself in four years on the saving in shrinkage alone. An additional gain will be made in the marketing. Cool cured cheese will bring a higher price than the non-cured product if it is produced in sufficient quantities to command the attention of the buyers.

Owing to changing conditions in which have never been a very profitable investment, are becoming an absolute necessity if we are to hold our position on the British market. Should our future market for our cheese be in the United States, rather than in the Old Land, cool curing would still be an immense advantage in establishing a reputation for our cheese in the markets of that country and in holding that market. Patrons who send milk to cheese factories not equipped with cool curing rooms can increase their own direct incomes and put our cheese trade on a stronger basis by seeing to it that cool rooms are established in their factories before the commencement of another season.

"The Lottery Man"

BY RIDA JOHNSON-YOUNG

"Oh, here you are mother!" he began, "I was looking for you to—"

"Mr. Foxhall," interrupted Lizzie, plaintively, "may I trouble you to close doors more gently? The effect on my nerves—"

"Why, little Bright Eyes!" chuckled Foxey, "There was a match on the floor between us, and I never saw you. How is the heiress this morning?"

"I have just enjoyed a five-course breakfast,' answered Lizzie, "and I never felt better. In view of my coming marriage—"

"Your approaching marriage!" echoed Mrs. Peyton in despair. "Oh, Lizzie, you'll surely never hold Jack Wright to such an absurd bargain? The prospect of so much money has gone to your head. Refuse him and be content with the $150,000. After being penniless all your life, such a fortune would—"

"That's just it! Look at all the years I've been wanting a lot of things all these years."

"A woman of your age!"

"That'se just it! Look at all the years I've wasted. From now on I'm going to live. And I don't really think a temperamental woman like myself can live without love!"

"Murder!" groaned Foxhall, "Mother, can't you—"

"I can't do a thing with her!" lamented Mrs. Peyton.

"Well," said Foxey, "the thing's got to be decided to-day. You know that was the condition. Both parties were to decide by noon to-day whether it should be marriage or an equal division of the $300,000."

"You may think it bold of me," smirked Lizzie, "but I am quite content to abide by the terms of the contract."

"You're determined to marry Jack?"

"Certainly. No half-rates for me! I intend to accept his proposal. Should he be so bashful as to refuse to marry me, the condition of the contest gives me the whole $300,000 for consolation."

"And poor Jack will be dead broke?"

"Not if he marries me. And I can see he wants to."

"I can see his finish! muttered Foxey. "The poor old chap! And with that $150,000 he needn't have been afraid of Helen's wealth any longer. That's your final decision, Lizzie."

"Yes. You may tell him so if he is worrying for fear I may reject him. I will now go to my room and begin my autobiography.

She swept out with a grand duchess air that would at any other time have convulsed Foxey. But now he only looked after her in dumb perplexity.

"Can you beat it?" he murmered.

"It's all my fault," answered his mother, contritely. "I'm a selfish old woman. I can see that now. I've thought of nobody but myself. And now that I really want to help people, I can't. If only I could arrange it for Helene and Jack to—"

"Why, mother!" exclaimed Peyton, "I never heard you speak like that before!"

"You never hear me speak as other mothers do to their sons. We aren't close together, you and I, Foxey, as—as Jack and Mrs. Wright are, I—I wish we might be chums like—"

"We can!" he insisted. "I never knew you cared. Or I—"

"I care more for your love and comradeship than anything else in the world. And if you'll be chums with me, I'll try to forget all my silly 'cures' and 'treatments' and selfishness. Will you, Foxey?"

"Will I?" he laughed, stooping to kiss her, "It's a bargain. We're chums, henceforth and forever."

Scarcely had Mrs. Peyton left the room by one door than Jack came furtively in by another.

"Foxey!" called Wright, in a guarded voice, "Has she softened up at all?"

"Softened up!" repeated Foxed, his voice unwontedly tender. "You can bet she has. Why, Jack, she's a real mother, after all."

"A mother?" gasped Jack, in blank dismay, "Lizzie?"

"Oh, to blazes with Lizzie! I was speaking of—"

"To blazes with Lizzie by all means," cheerfully assented Jack; "but will she let us out of the bargain?"

"Not she. It's marry or stay poor, as far as you're concerned. She hasn't the heart to refuse you!"

"The heart? Lizzie? Why, Lizzie has no more heart than a gas trust. She'd make old Shylock with his pound of flesh look like the president of a humane society. To think of my having to marry that human handicap! Everybody'd think I was paying an election bet. And if I've money I don't ask—"

Helene came in from the breakfast room, checking Jack's wail of hard luck. Foxey tastefully took himself out of the way. Catching sight of Jack, the girl halted. Then, making the best of an embarrassing situation, she came forward and said with forced gaiety:

"How is the man who woke up to find himself famous?"

I didn't gloomily contradicted Jack, 'I found myself famous and then woke up.

"That is a sorrowful pose for a man to take on his wedding day," she commented cruelly.

My wedding day! Why, I — oh, well, why should I blame you? Even mother thought I might be going to marry Lizzy."

"And aren't you?" she asked, with charming innocence.

"You ought to know I'm not."

"Then why are you so unhappy?"

"Because if I don't marry her, I'm still penniless. And—"

"But no worse off than before?"

" Athousand times worse off. Because I love a girl who has money to burn. And I'm not cur enough to ask her to marry me when I haven't a dollar to my name."

"Jack!"

"I'm not going to tell you how I love you,' went on Jack, miserably. "I'm not going to tell you you're the star of my soul and the one girl on earth for me, and that I shall always be the better for having known and loved you. I'm not going to tell you any of these things. I'm going to be strong and leave you and never, never see you again."

Before either of them realized it, their lips had met in a long kiss. Then, with a little cry, Helene ran from the room.

"Yes," muttered Jack, sternly, as he flung himself into a chair. "I'm going to be strong. I'll never see her again. Never again. I—I wonder—if—"

A pair of hands closed over his eyes. Someone had tiptoed into the room and crept up behind him unobserved. With an exclamation of delight, all his good wishes hurled to the winds, Jack sprang to his feet, to face the newcomer.

"Helene!" he cried, utterly happy.

Then, he stopped short and stared down with amazed disgust at—Lizzie Roberts.

"I wanted to see you," she began, coyly.

"So you had to see me first," he agreed, finding his voice and his temper at the same time.

"Do you know," giggled Lizzie, "I fancied you were attracted to me the very first time we met. I—I came here to tell you I'm ready."

"To call it off and split the purse?" he cried, eagerly.

No, No,. you foolish, timid boy! To marry you!"

"I can't let you sacrifice yourself like that," said Jack, virtuously, I'm unworthy of you. You should marry some big, curly-haired fellow with long, lovely black whiskers."

No! she replied, coquettishly, "I'd rather have you. And I've picked out a dear little nest to live in. It's in the Bronx."

"At the Zoo! Just the thing. With a lot of creepy, crawly, slimy, slithery snakes and a few grizzly bears thrown in for good measure."

" Itold the decorators to come this afternoon, pursued Lizzie, unheeding, "and select the colour scheme for the furniture. I've thuoght of a lovely colour scheme—"

"Black," suggested he. "Jet black, With crape on the door."

"Crape?" she echoed, shocked, "What for?"

"For dead hopes," he returned, "It's a solemn thing to marry."

"It's a good deal solemner not to," she declared. "I know you've never been a companion to a woman who went in for beauty culture. This is my last chance of escape."

"Couldn't you escape as well on $150,000?"

"Then you refuse me?" moaned Lizzie.

"I do—not," he muttered, in angry irresolution.

"Oh!" she squeeled. "This is a proposal. An actual proposal from you. How heavenly!"

Before he could guess her intent, she had thrown herself bodily upon him in an adoring embrace. The door behind them was suddenly flung open.

CHAPTER IX.

The Winner.

"I beg everybody's pardon," remarked Foxhall Peyton, looking amusedly at Jack's wild struggle to free himself from Lizzie's clinging embrace. "I don't mean to butt in on a lovers' tryst."

"Cut it out!" snapped Jack. "You're a life saver."

For Lizzie had sidled coyly to the door and was vanishing. Peyton watched her out of sight. Then he turned on Jack in scarce suppressed excitement.

"I've got news," said he.

"I'm tired of news," protested Jack. "But let it go. It can't be any worse than the news that I've either got to marry that living skeleton or else go broke. Fire away!"

"How would you like to get out of the match and still have half the cash?" queried Foxey.

"How would I like to have the United States Sub-Treasury handed me as a birthday present," retorted Jack. "The one is about as likely to happen as the other. Don't pile on the agony, old man."

"I'm not piling it on. I'm trying to lift it off, if only you'll shut up and give me a chance. My man Hamilton's been talking to me."

"Deuced bad form to let one's valet talk to one," commented Jack. "What does he want ? To take Lizzie off my hands?"

"Yes. Exactly that."

"But you told me once he was engaged to your mother's maid, Noran"

"Will you let me explain?" ejaculated Foxey , impatiently. "Here's the idea: The servants, it seems, hate Lizzie. While my mother was taking that apple-and-cracker diet Lizzie got into the habit of sneaking into the pantry for secret luncheon. The grocer's boy had been giving Nora bunches of Lottery Man coupons. Hamilton declared Nora saw Lizzie pick up and pocket one of those coupons. Nora had dropped it on the pantry floor. And that's the 'Lucky Number coupon! The coupon she won you with."

"But—but—can Hamilton and Nora prove this " asked Jack, fearing to hope.

"No. They can't. That's just the trouble. It's only Norah's hunch.'"

"Then," observed Jack, "as a last resort we'll have to give Lizzie the third degree. Lizzie," he called raising his voice.

From the next room, where she was waiting for Foxey to depart and leave the field clear to her, Lizzie sidled playfully through the doorway.

"You called me, dearie?" she cooed coming up to Jack.

"Lizzie!" began Peyton, with cool, judicial sternness; "Lizzie, I—I—oh, I can't say it, Jack! You break it to her!"

"No!" sighed Jack, "I haven't the heart.'

"Why, whatever is the matter?" piped Lizize, anxiously.

"Be gentle with her!" Jack was imploring Peyton. "Don't let the police come up here—just yea!"

"The police!" squealed Lizzie. "Why, what on earth—"

"I fear it is my duty," meditated Foxey. "And yet—I suppose it is her first offense. You've never been arrested before, have you, Lizzie?"

"Me? Good gracious! Never.' What—"

'How about that coupon of Nora's that you swiped off the pantry floor?" thundered Jack.

"Hush, Jack!" commented Peyton. "We've no legal right to question her. Let the policemen downstairs do that. I'll send for them to come up."

"Very well!" snapped Lizzie, with quite an unexpected show of spirit. "Let them come up. I'm perfectly innocent. I never stole that coupon.

"We have a witness that can prove it," accused Foxey; "a witness who saw you take the coupon from Nora's pocket."

"I never took it from her pocket!" cried Lizzie, forgetting caution, in her eagerness at self-defense; "I found it on the floor of the pantry. I—"

She caught herself up. But it was too late. Jack sighed rapturously, as though the weight of the universe had been lifted from his shoulders. Lizzie looked at him in tearful despair.

"I didn't steal it," she quavered, "I just happened to find it. And when it proved to be the winning number, it—it seemed just providential."

"It's Norah's," asserted Peyton. "You have admitted that in the presence of witnesses."

"Come," said Jack, "Give it up Lizzie. And I'll stake you to that little house in the Bronx and throw in a little something every month to keep the wolf from the door."

"But—" whimpered Lizzie; "I'll be so lonely, there!"

"Not when it's known you've got a house of your own and a bit of income," soothed Jack. "You'll get a husband quickly enough then. The kind I told you about, perhaps. A nice plump man with lovely oiled hair and beautiful black whiskers And you can go out every morning and tame the wild flowers."

"Oh, well!" agreed Lizzie, with a sniff of renunciation; "here's the old coupon then. I'll just run up to the Bronx and close the bargain on that little house. Perhaps it is just as well, after all. So flippant a man as yourself could never wholly have satisfied my temperamental dreams.'

Jack looked after her. Then he glanced down at the coupon in his hand.

"I don't see, after all," said he, "that I'm as much better off than I was before. Norah may insist on marrying me."

"Not she," Foxey denied. "She and Hamilton were married secretly this morning. And I've got a written release from her. She gets half the $300,000. You get the other half and—where are you going?"

"To find Helene!" yelled Jack.

In the little morning-room downstairs he found her. The girl's eyes were suspiciously moist. Yet she forced a smile, as he came toward her. Jack, on the contrary, looked woefully solemn.

"I've come to confess," he said, sheepishly. "You were right in your judgment of me. When it came to the pinch, I decided not to give up all that money. The temptation of wealth was too great."

"What?" she gasped, shocked, incredulously. You mean that you actually going to keep the money by marrying?"

"Exactly that!" he confessed, "I am going to marry."

"Oh!" she exclaimed, in utter contempt, and you are the man I allowed to speak to me and—and to kiss me!"

"Quite right," he admitted. "And, lest there should be any doubt in your mind about it I am going to kiss you again."

"How dare you!" she panted, springing back—an instant too late.

"Oh, I am naturally brave," he said, complacently. "By the way, see the pretty wedding present Lizzie just gave me."

He handed her the coupon, Helene gazed at it in scorn—then—in wonder—then in dawning understanding.

"It's a booby prize, at least," he said, holding out his arms. "But—won't you make it precious by taking it?"

A Fruit, Cream and Chocolate Sandwich

Neilson's "Original Fruit Sandwiches" are a delight to candy-lovers. They are real fruit sandwiches with layers as clearly divided as a layer cake. A deliciously rich centre of pure cream and cane sugar —a layer of real fruit (Peaches, Pine-apples. Strawberries, etc.) —another layer of the cream and then the "Sandwich", enclosed in a thick coat of Neilson's incomparable chocolate. Just imagine the deliciousness of chocolate, cream, fruit and then more cream and chocolate. It sounds mighty good — and it tastes lots better than it sounds.

This is only one of the 33 different kinds that Neilson's make. If you can't get Neilson's "Original Fruit Sandwiches" in your neighborhood, send 65c for a pound box.

THE CONTINUATION OF THE INVESTIGATION INTO ORGANIZATION OF FARMERS' BANK

Technical and Documentary Evidence Submitted at Yesterday's Sessions—Travers in the Witness Box.

CASE ADJOURNED

TORONTO, FEB. 17.—Added interest was found in the Farmers' Bank case this morning when the hearing was resumed before Magistrate Denison in the conspiracy charges against the provisional directors, by the appearance of Jas. J. Warren and Jas. R. Stratton whose names have been added to the list of directors charged, since the opening of the investigation a week ago. The men charged this morning with having conspired to obtain the treasury certificate of the Farmers Bank by means of false returns to the Finance Department, were Jas. J. Warren, J. R. Stratton, Alexander Fraser, Dr. John Ferguson, John Watson and Alexander S. Lowne. The four directors previously committed for trial on the conspiracy charge of obtaining $10,000 of the bank funds occupied the witness room during the regular session of the police court, while Mr. W. R. Travers, who was brought up from the jail as one of the principal witnesses, was held in the office of the Detective Department all morning.

An Array of Books.

A formidable array of bank books was brought into court, there being thirteen in the pile.

Mr. J. J. Warren was represented by Mr. Matthew Wilson, and Mr. J. R. Stratton was represented by Mr. R. R. Hall, of Peterborough, and Mr. Grayson Smith.

Mr. John Knight, of Montreal, secretary of the Canadian Bankers' Association, occupied a chair at the side of Hon. J. R. Stratton, in readiness to testify for the Crown.

Mr. H. H. Dewart, K.C., sat beside his client, W. R. Travers, with whom he held occasional whispered conferences.

Assistant County Crown Attorney Monahan was present at the request of Mr. Corley to watch proceedings.

The charge read was that they "Did conspire, confederate, and agree together to obtain by false representations, deceit, or fraud, from the Treasury Board of the Dominion of Canada the certificate required in order to enable the Farmers' Bank of Canada to open for business under the provisions of the Bank Act."

Upon the reading of the charge the six in court pleaded not guilty through their various counsels. Mr. H. E. Rose represented the four provisional directors.

Inspector Duncan's Evidence.

"In this case," stated Mr. Corley, in opening the investigation, "it is necessary to call Mr. Duncan to connect these certificates with the case."

Inspector Duncan read an agreement by the board, dated Jan. 24, agreeing that no notes be issued instead of cash or stock, unless especially authorized by the board.

Other notes were read from the minute book

"Moved by Dr. Ferguson, seconded by Watson, that $10,000 of capital stock be paid to Mr. W .R. Travers. This was on July 4, 1906. All members present."

"On Oct. 8, 1906, a motion that W R. Travers be given the power of attorney with authority to sign the names of the board to all notes issued by the bank was passed," said Mr. Duncan.

Receipts and Checks.

Exhibit 2 was the provisional board's bank book on the Traders' Bank.

Exhibit 3, explained Mr. Duncan, was a receipt from the Trusts and Guarantee Company to W. R. Travers from Mr. J. J .Warren, referring to an $80,000 checks from the Trusts and Guarantee Company.

Exhibit 5, was the check dated Oct. 11, 1906, for $80,000, in favour of the Farmers' Bank, signed by J. R. Stratton, president, J. J. Warren, manager, and J. G. Ross, accountant, of the Trusts and Guarantee Company.

Exhibit 6 was a copy of the Trusts and Guarantee Company's ledger record of the $80,000 transaction. It specified a $1,000 bonus and interest at 10 per cent.

Exhibit 7, dated Oct. 23, 1906, was an Ontario Bank check from the Trust and Guarantee Company to the Farmers Bank for $20,000.

Exhibit 8 was an assignment of W. R. Travers, assigning over shares to various loan companies as security for the moneys received from the Trust and Guarantee Company.

Exhibit 9 was a record of the terms of the $20,000 loan with interest at 10 per cent. and a bonus of $500.

Exhibit 10 was a check, Oct. 23, 1906, from the Trusts and Guarantee Company in favour of W. R. Travers for $500, "the balance of the loan." The check was endorsed by Travers.

Cost of Organization.

Exhibit 11 was the report of the Provisional board of the Farmers Bank commending the energy and ability of Mr. Travers, and announcing that $479,900 of bona fide stock had been subscribed and $250,000 turned over to the Treasury Department at Ottawa. This report mentioned that the organization expenses had amounted to $44,403.65 and that a valuable franchise had been secured. The report was signed by A. S. Lown.

Exhibit No. 12 consisted of a list of the shareholders of the bank and the various amounts of stock paid in.

As the next exhibit ,the stock subscription book of the bank was itself produced.

Several letters and replies written by Travers to the Department of Finance at Ottawa were then read. The first of these was from the general manager, dated October 24, 1906, in which was enclosed a check for $250,000 to be deposited with the Government to the credit of the bank at Ottawa in order that the charter might be received.

The reply from the Deputy Minister acknowledging the receipt of the check stated that certain opposition had been filed in the department in regard to the granting of the certificate to the bank.

On October 26, 1906, Travers wrote to the Minister, stating that he could not understand what objections could have been raised, and asked that these should be made known to him. He believed that the bank had not deviated in any respect from the requirements of the Bank Act.

A later letter to Mr. Travers was from Mr. Fitzgerald, the chief accountant, stating that all the applications received at the office were in first-class shape, and enclosed three blank checks from the check book, in case the general manager should need them. A postscript was added to this letter written on November 29, '06, P.S. "Dr. Beattie Nesbitt has just called to see how things were going, and I have given him a gist of the proceedings."

Exhibit 16 was a check for $1,800, payable to Mr. Travers and signed by him. This was endorsed by Travers and also by A. R. Schaeffer, an accountant at the bank.

Says Statement Was Correct.

Exhibit 17 showed letters from the Financial Department suggesting that there was an evasion of the Bank Act with regard to the paying up of capital stock, and asking for an assurance to Mr. W. S. Fielding that there was no such thing in the case of the Farmers Bank .This was in November, 1906.

Travers' reply to this stated that the statement put in by him as to subscribed and paid up stock would be found to be absolutely correct. There was also a letter saying that the bank certificate was being enclosed to Mr. Travers together with a check for $245,000. There was also enclosed what purported to be the certificate.

Exhibit 18 showed a check stub book. One check, marked Dec. 6, 1906, was for $30,000, on the Traders Bank, payable to W. G. Mitchell and oC.

"That name hasn't came up before?" asked Magistrate Denison.

"He will be a witness. I propose later to show how the $30,000 was got back from the Trusts and Guarantee Company by the bank," said Mr. Corley.

Another dated Dec., 1906, for $25,631.81 was read as payable to the W. G. Mitchell Company and further checks, which the inspector stated totaled the $80,000.

The certificate was issued on November 13, 1906. A further letter dated Oct. 17, from the Finance Department, sent to Mr. Travers, was read by way of a protest against the issuing of the charter and signed by the Deputy Minister of Finance. And one on November 7, stating that this objection was withdrawn.

"No reason for this change, the withdrawing of the protest?" asked the magistrate.

"There is a letter," replied Mr. Matthew Wilson, counsel for Mr. Warren, "explaining this."

Mr. Corley, however, was unable to find a copy in his correspondence, but concluded with the remark that it would be produced later.

Regret Expressed.

A letter was read from William Laidlaw to W. J. Lindsay expressing regret for the publication of certain statements ascribed to him, and agreeing no further to hamper the business of the organizers of the Farmers Bank.

Exhibits 20 and 21 were the Trusts and Guarantee Company's record of the sum of $80,777.63, inclusive of interest at 3 1-2 per cent.

Exhibit 22, consisted of a number of checks ,aggregating $80,605.81, in favour of the Union Bank of Canada, and signed by W. R. Travers and his assistant general manager, P. H. Frayne. The Trusts and Guarantee Company was mentioned as the payer in each case.

Exhibit 23 showed a series of checks signed by the officers of the Trusts and Guarantee Company, corresponding to the checks shown in Exhibit 22. Mr. Corley explained that it was the custom of smaller trust companies to pay large checks drawn by themselves on their own banks. Mr. Matthew Wilson, K.C., representing Hon. J. R. Stratton, contended that these checks had absolutely no bearing on the case.

Exhibit 24 was a statement of the entries in the Trusts and Guarantee ledger with reference to the $80,605.

Exhibit 25 was a check, March 12, 1907, signed by W. R. Travers and P. H. Frayne, for $25,344.80, payable to the Trusts and Guarantee Company, and changeable to the Farmers' Bank trust account.

Exhibit 26 was a list of the returned notes held by the Trusts and Guarantee Company as security for the $80,000.

Exhibit 27 was a couple of checks from the Trusts and Guarantee Company bearing the same date, one payable to W. R. Travers and the other to the Bank of Montreal. The checks were for the same amount, $2,380.

Exhibit 28 was the minute book of the permanent board of directors and the shareholders.

Exhibit 29 was a check, of Oct. 16, 1906, payable to the Bank of Montreal for the credit of the Farmers Bank with the Finance Minister for $150,000.

Mr. Knight's Evidence.

Mr. John T. Knight, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Bankers' Association, living in Montreal, was next called.

"You came up shortly after granting of Farmers Bank certificate about the end of 1906, and had an interview with Mr. Travers," asked Mr. Corley.

"Yes, and met Dr. Beattie Nesbitt as well."

"What was said?"

"With my clients not present," interrupted Mr. Matthew Wilson, "this cannot count against them."

"Not unless there is a conspiracy proven."

The other legal gentlemen took the same stand.

"What took place?"

"I stated my object was to ascertain of Mr. Travers if a statement regarding the deposit was correct."

"What part of it?" asked Mr. Corley.

"In referring to the correspondence between the general manager and Department of Finance which gave reason to suppose the deposit was not made in accordance with the law. They showed me the figures said to give the names of the shareholders. Later I saw the stock register."

"Was there anything said about the $80,000?"

THE MAIN POINTS OF MR. TRAVERS' TESTIMONY

Mr. Travers stated that he applied to the Trusts & Guarantee Company for a loan through Mr. J. J. Warren, the General Manager; that he had nothing to do with Mr. Stratton, either before or after making the application.

The loan of $80,000 was an ordinary business transaction, borrowing money upon his (Traver's) own note, and giving as collateral security $100,865.00 of notes of financially responsible people. Mr. Travers stated that so far as Mr. Stratton was concerned, he was not consulted as to the object of the loan, nor was he consulted by him as to the purpose for which the proceeds of the loan were to be applied.

He also applied to Mr. Warren subsequently for a loan of $20,000, upon the security of certain stocks which he held in several companies. The Trust Company made this loan to Mr. Travers himself, and for the first loan charged him at the rate of ten per cent. per annum, and a bonus of $1,000. and for the second loan he was charged the same rate and a bonus of $500.00, and the Trust Company and a certain Insurance Company received the benefit of the interest and bonus of both loans.

He further stated he had not counselled with Mr. Stratton in any way in connection with the obtaining of the Charter or License from the Government, nor had Mr. Stratton assisted him in any way that he knew of in obtaining the License for the Farmers' Bank.

In reply to a direct question by Mr. Corley, the Crown Prosecutor. Mr. Travers stated that Mr. Stratton had not interviewed the Finance Department in his behalf, or on behalf of the Bank, nor had Mr. Stratton been paid any sum whatever, in connection with the organization of the Bank, or the obtaining of its License to do business, or for any other purpose.

Mr. Travers also stated that as to any statements he (Travers) made to the Finance Department he believed them to be true, and that in his obtaining the License for his Bank he was acting within his legal rights.

The Provisional Directors of the Farmers' Bank were not aware of the representations he had made to the Finance Department, and the only parties he had consulted were Dr. Beattie Nesbitt, Inspector Fitzgibbon and his own Solicitor, Mr. W. H. Hunter, and that he had consulted with no one else with reference to the details made to the Finance Department.

The Executive of the Convention is to arrive here Monday afternoon on the 5.30 G.T.R train and the convention is to be formally opened at 1.30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

Peterborough, Guelph, Niagara Falls and Toronto invited the 1911 convention, but the executive selected Peterborough, as no convention had yet been held east of Toronto. Elaborate arrangements have been made for the four-day convention to be held in the Armouries, at which between sixty and seventy manufacturers will make exhibits.

The Association is going to an expense of $1,200 in connection with the convention—erecting and decorating booths, engaging bands and entertainers, hiring door-keepers and other assistance and providing a luncheon open to all the trade on the closing night of the convention.

Peterborough hardware manufacturers are also arranging to entertain the visiting retailers by showing them the various processes which builders' hardware, shovels, auger bits, tents, saddlery, etc., go through before reaching the finished state.

All roads lead to Peterborough between Feb. 20 and 24, and it is safe to predict that the attendance at the sixth annual convention in the Lift-Lock city will break all former records. Visitors are expected from Quebec and the Maritime Provinces as well as from Winnipeg and other points in the West, a single fare being obtainable on all railways from points between Fort William and Halifax.

Speaking, editorially, about the convention, the Canadian Hardware and Stove Journal says: "There is every indication of the Retail Hardware Covention at Peterborough being the livest ever held in Ontario. Travellers calling on the retail trade and letters received from dealers intending to attend, give the information that a larger number of delegates than ever will go to Peterborough with a purpose in view—the discussion of some particular question in which they are deeply concerned. The Hardware and Stove Journal joins the executive of the Association and the exhibitors in inviting all retailers in Ontario and other provinces to attend the convention and in making it the greatest gathering in the history of the Canadian Hardware trade."

Monday, Feb. 20—

8.30 p.m., meeting of Executive Committee.

Tuesday, Feb. 21—

9 a.m., distribution of badges and payment of dues at the Secretary's office in the Armouries.

9.30 a.m. to 12 a.m., Hardware Trade Exhibition.

VISITS OLD HOME AFTER TWENTY-SEVEN YEARS

Mr. R. Trenwith Finds Peterborough Practically New---Tells an Examiner Reporter of the Difference Between the City of To-day and the Town of 30 Years Ago.

Mr. R. Trenwith, a former resident of Peterborough, is a visitor to this city after an absence of 27 years. He is visiting his sister, Miss J. Trenwith. Meanwhile he is registered at the King George hotel.

An Examiner representative took the opportunity of visiting Mr. Trenwith for the purpose of ascertaining his views concerning the city of the present day compared with 27 years ago.

Asked as to what he thought of the extensive changes which have taken place in that time, he said that according to what he had seen of it, it is practically new. The ground on which the old hoe stood and in which his father lived, is now occupied by Matthews' packing house. Nearly all of the land south of this, including the C.G.E. property, was not built up then with any buildings or houses of any kind except an old shack here and there. Nearly all the land to the west of the Aylmer street creek was in the same condition.

Mr. Trenwith also referred to the time when Phelan's Hotel was headquarters for a bank, commonly known as Roper's Bank, and the Oriental Hotel was known as the Huffman House. The principal industries in this part of the country in those days were lumbering. While in Peterborough a number of saw mills, planing mills, etc., were located.

Mr. Trenwith now makes his home in Minneapolis, although he spends a considerable portion of his time in the Canadian Northwest, in the Saskatchewan Valley, where he has some holdings. He has met a number of old friends and has enjoyed his visit immensely. He leaves for Toronto on Monday and intends to come back next summer and spend his holidays here, when he will be enabled to see the city to better advantage and under more congenial conditions.

PETERBORO' COUPLE WAIT ALL WEEK FOR HOMESTEAD

Ma. and Mrs. Wm. Faux, Formerly of This City, Spend Week at Door of Official's Office in Order to be Sure to Land Property---$3,000 Richer as a Result.

The Calgary Albertan says: — A bright faced young woman and a healthy looking young man were amongst the several passengers that stepped off the train from the north yesterday afternoon on its arrival here. Ten minutes after leaving the train the young couple, who are man and wife, were camped on the steps of the land office prepared to wait there until nine o'clock on Saturday morning, when William Faux, for that is the man's name, hopes to be the first to file his claim for a valuable homestead to be open for location there.

The young woman is Mrs. Faux, who will take her turn at the top of the steps during the long vigil before them. If Mr. Faux is successful on Saturday, he will be about $3000 richer than he is to-day for that is what the abandoned quarter section is valued at.

An Albertan reporter saw the couple last night standing guard at the door, well muffled up. "We heard about this homestead, and made up our minds that we would do our best to get it," said Mr. Faux.

"He wanted to wait until Thursday before he came, and I said 'No,' we'll go to-day," " rejoined the wife. "He said, 'No,' Thursday will do,' but I said again, 'We'll go to-day, and I'll go with you to keep you company,' and in spite of all he did to keep me home, here I am and here I am going to stay while he sleeps. I have got a room at a comfortable hotel," she continued, "and shall use it at nights."

CAME FROM ONTARIO

Then it was learned that they came from about 100 miles north. They have a good farm there which they bought two years ago. Mr. Faux is a tool maker by trade. He worked at it for several years ,first in Peterborough, Ont., the home city of his wife, then later at Schenectady, N.Y. He had heard glowing things of Alberta from his brother, who has a farm up north. The back to the land propositron appealed to both Mr. and Mrs. Faux; they had some savings, which were invested in an improved homestead. Last year the 160 acres yielded over 30 bushels an acre.

"Do you like it?" asked the Albertan.

"Indeed, I do," was the cheerful reply.

"Would you like to go back east, or live in the city again?"

"No, thank you, I am perfectly happy on the farm."

But the young man and his wife are lonely to a degree on their vigil for away there in that home on the prairie is a little dynamo of vivacity and mischief, their three year old boy. A stogy fellow he is, with a head of brown curls with eyes bluer than the sky. This description was not given all at once by the father and mother. First one thing was unconsciously volunteered then another. But this little fellow is in good hands. Mrs. Faux's mother and father, who have a farm near her, are looking after him. For over four days and a half the couple have decided to wait in order to be first to make application at the land office on Saturday morning at 9 o'clock. Here's hoping their patience will be rewarded.

SUCCESSFUL SALE

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Park Street Baptist church held a very successful sale of home cooking and fancy work yesterday afternoon and evening. The attendance was large and as a result a neat sum was realized. The pastor, Rev. W. C. Biddiford made a very efficient chairman. The programme was contributed by Miss Hill, Miss Hazel Gillespie, Messrs. Harry Hill and Harold Fallis.

DANGER OF UNIVERSAL WAR.

It is feared that the adoption of the trade agreement between Canada and the United States will lead to universal war. The Opposition orators who in default of argument, make appeals suggesting Dr. Johnson's opinion of prostituted patriotism, declare that freedom of trade will encourage the United States to force Canada into annexation. In the House on Thursday Hon. Mr. Fielding stated that the lower reciprocal rates granted to the United States extend automatically to twelve other countries. Now if enlarged freedom of trade reciprocally, extended by Canada establishes a claim to possession by the the country reciprocating, we shall have a dozen other countries besides the United States setting up claims and fighting for Canada's bones, and of course a billigerent embroglio of almost universal proportions will ensue. This is only mentioned to show how absolutely and absurdly ridiculous are the hysterics of partizan preachers of pessimism..

WHAT SIR JOHN THOUGHT.

Sir John Macdonald it worthily venerated by the members of the party he represented in his great life. This veneration reached almost the point of feeling that "the king could do no wrong." When the very name or idea of "reciprocity" throws some of the Conservative orators into hysterics, one might think that they had the authority of Sir John, for the tantrums they throw. Without saying whether or not Sir John was opposed to reciprocity, the tariff resolution moved by Sir John Macdonald in the House in 1878, and, by the way, the foundation stone of the "National policy"—is submitted:

"That this House is of the opinion that the welfare of Canada requires the adoption of a National policy, which, by a judicious readjustment of the tarif, will benefit and foster the agricultural, the mining, the manufacturing and other interests of the Dominion; . . . And moving (as it ought to do) in the direction of reciprocity of tariff with our neighbours, as far as the varied interests of Canada may demand, will greatly tend to procure for this country, eventually, a reciprocity of trade.

This does not look as if the old Chieftain regarded reciprocity as a greased highway to annexation or as a few tons of dynamite under the foundations of the empire. But Sir John is dead and his body buried; and it would appear that as far as some of his apostles are concerned, his spirit is buried also.

BRAVE WORDS.

A deputation, four hundred strong, waited upon the Whitney government on Thursday to ask for provincial prohibition and the repeal of the three-fifths clause. Though the proceedings were hot, the deputation got very cold comfort. According to reports the Provincial Secretary and the Premier did not quite exhaust the resources of courtesy in their attitude towards the deputation, and it must be said that some members of the deputation did not have honey under their tongues. The temper of the conference may be indicated by an incident at its close We are told:

"As Sir James Whitney concluded, a man stepped up and shook his fist in the Premier's face—

"I voted against Ross," he shouted, "and I'll never vote for you again as long as I live."

These are brave words; and at the moment the man doubtless meant what he said. But will he live up to his threat? When his temper cools, and the full force of his language comes to be presented to him in the light of his party allegiance will he sacrifice party to the principle, upon whose outrage, he assumed such strong ground? There have been thousands of men, who at one time, in all honesty and sincerity (for the moment), vowed to sacrifice party to principle and "vote for the right" though the heavens should fall; but when the heat of an election contest came on, when the fate of the party was considered at stake, they couldn't make up their minds to vote against the party, even though the sacred cause of temeprance was also at stake. It is to this attitude of professed temperance advocates, this blowing hot and cold, that a good deal of the lack of success of the temperance cause is held to be due. So long as temperance reform depends for success upon legislative enactment, so long will success be slow, if men do not "vote as they pray;" so long as they preach temperance and damn the three-fifths clause, between elections and meekly fall into line under the swing of the party whip and vote straight party, such results as come, are to be expected. Such men, such friends of the temperance cause, in so far as it may be represented by local option, are directly responsible for the retention of the handicap the three-fifths clause represents. The few who honestly stand by their professed temperance principles even if they have in so doing to ignore the claims of party, are so far outnumbered, by the men who permit their loud boasts of interest to be silenced by the still small voice of the party ballot, that in the final count their enthusiasm is swamped and becomes, of none effect, so far as practical results are concerned. Those who in these latter days elect to depend upon legislation as the best means of temperance, illustrate the saying that they who use the sword must perish by the sword. They depend upon the arm of flesh, so easily paralyzed by the grip of party.

ONTARIO'S PULPWOOD INTERESTS.

If the American tariff relief act operates prejudicially to the conservation interests of Ontario pulp wood resources a large share of the responsibility will rest upon the Whitney Government. Under this proposal paper and pulp made from wood, exportable without provincial restriction, enters the United States free. But such pulp and paper made from timber, subject to Provincial restriction as to export in the raw state, is subject to duty when entering the United States. The pulp concession granted to the "Soo Company" by the Liberal Government—7,400 acres for 200 miles, or a total of 1,478,000 acres, and described by Mr. Whitney, in his hyperbolic orstory, as "the most collossal steal," carried the government restriction that no pulpwood, cut upon the lands of the concession, should be exported in an unmanufactured condition. But in the much greater grant of pulp wood lands, the much more "collossal steal" made by the Whitney Government to Mackenzie and Mann—4000 acres for 500 miles, or a total of 2,000,000 acres, carries no restriction as to the export of pulp wood in the raw state. Therefore, pulp and paper made from timber cut on the two million acres granted by the Whitney Government to Mackenzie and Mann, will be admitted free into the United States markets, and not only that, but pulp wood logs may be exported from thes lands in the raw state. This is a very serious matter, especially when it is remembered that there is no restriction of export of pulp logs cut on private lands, or veteran grant lands. The export of pulp wood blocks grew from $1,397,000 in 1901, to $6,076,628 in 1910, but not one dollar of this came from lands under the "Soo" grant made by a Liberal Government, nor from Crown Lands protected by the restrictive policy of the Liberal Government. When we recollect that these six millions worth of pulp wood logs would, if converted into pulp, represent a five-fold value, the added value being due largely to the employment of Canadian labour and capital, we get some idea of the largely increased value—all the greater if the manufacturing process advances from pulp to paper—of our pulp wood resources if subjected to manufacture at home. And this will be promoted by the agreement with the United States. As pointed out by a good authority, with free entry to the United States "it will be much cheaper to use local water power and ship pulp and paper than to export pulpwood." At the same time the restrictions as to export will prevent our crown lands from being slaughtered in the interests of an export business in pulp wood.

BRITISH TRADE WITH CANADA ITS EXTENT AND IMPORTANCE

(Ottawa Free Press.)

The value of the Canadian preference to Great Britain; which is at the present time so important a feature of the tariff discussion in progress in Canada and the United Kingdom, is strikingly illustrated by the Trade and Navigation Accounts of the United Kingdom for the calendar year 1910, just received by Mr. John Bain, the Imperial Trade correspondent for the Ottawa district.

Our purchases of iron and steel and manufactures thereof increased from £1,831,000 to £1,854,000; we bought cotton piece goods to a value of £1,-684,000 as against £1,394,000 worth in 1909; and our imports of British made woollen and worsted tissues increased from £2,308,000 to £2,574,000. Our whole imports from Great Britain showed an increase of more than 25 per cent. in the year, totalling 19.7 (in million pounds) as compared with 15,7 in 1909. There was but a small increase in our sales to Great Britain but that was due largely to the poor season of the year 1908 and the growth of the home market, but any increase at all was gratifying under the circumstances. For instance, there was a decrease in wheat of nearly £600,000 in cattle of nearly £500,-000, and of £100,000 in cheese, so that the increase in flour, in bacon and hams, in canned salmon and in timber, indicate a growing market, which is unaffected by temhporary weather conditions.

Most significant of all the figures contained in the abstract is the proof which is given of Britain's continued prosperity, despite all the contentions to the contrary by the Protectionists of both Britain and Canada. The imports into Great Britain show an increase of 8.6 per cent. over the previous year, while the exports of Britain produce grew by 13.9 per cent.

As the element of price enters largely into a comparison of this kind it is important to state that, due allowance being made for price changes, both the imports and the exports of 1910 were greater, not only in value but also in volume, than those of any previous year, not excepting 1907.

Of the increase of £52,400,000 in exports of United Kingdom produce £20,000,000 represents the increase in consignments to other parts of the British Empire, raising the proportion of such exports from 33.6 per cent. Of the total in 1909 to 34.2 per per cent. in 1910.

The figures show that the imports into the United Kingdom in 1910 were valued at £53,700 more than in 1909. Of this total increase, no less than £41,100,000 were represented by the increased value of raw materials imported, and even when allowance is made for the exceptionally high prices of two articles of great importance, raw cotton and rubber, and for re-exported raw materials, the figures indicate a substantial increase in the supplies of the numerous materials of industry drawn from various parts of the world for use in the manufacturing establishments of the United Kingdom. More than seven-eighths of the increased value of exports of United Kingdom produce is accounted for by an increase in goods classified as "Articles wholly or mainly manufactured," thus proving most conclusively that the factories of the Mother Country are more busily employed and that the stagnation which we hear so much of in certain quarters exists only in the imaginations of the men who talk or write about it.

Old Britain is doing very well, when in a year of such political stress as 1910, with two general elections to dislocate business, it can present a record such as the one now reviewed.

INTEREST CHILDREN IN THEIR OWN HOME

From Farm and Dairy.

Mrs. M. Greydon, Peel Co., Ont.

The great question with the mothers to-day is how to interest children in their own homes that they may not seek entertainment and pleasure in questionable places.

I would suggest that parents manifest an interest in anything that interests the son or daughter, and do not turn a deaf ear to their enthusiasm. How much more enthused they would become if the parents or older sisters and brothers will give ear to them and help them plan a night's enjoyment instead of hearing them say, "Oh, I'm going over to Jack's; there's lots more fun over there." Recreation is always necessary to a full rounded manhood or womanhood. Take part in, and encourage, any form of recreation that will help the young people to be honest, manly and strong, and avoid that which is weak and debasing. Music, I think, is one of the first and most successful agencies in securing a love for home. What more pleasant evening could you wish than that of music by your own girls and boys. You have not much time to get lonesome or blue when you have girls and boys who are lovers of music.

If the home is kept well supplied with wholesome reading, including the latest works of good writers, our boys and girls will not poison their minds with trashy novels, but will appreciate that which is elevating and enobling.

It pays to have our homes attractive in appearance and surrounding. Don't forget "the boy's room" and use all your pretty fixtures for the girls. Make all the rooms attractive and comfortable. A word to the parents of the big sister. You should recognise her position in the family, as one to be respected. You must trust her, take her into your confidence, advise her, and let the younger members of the family know that she desires their consideration. Let it be known that she holds an office of consideration in the home. Be proud of her and she will not disappoint you. She desires your love, encouragement and sympathy, and I am sure you will get all that and a great deal more in return. Look how much more interested she will be in the home, if she knows she is doing part of the upbuilding.

NOT TOO WELL PLEASED

From Farm and Dairy.

Several of the members in attendance at the annual meeting of the Ontario Association of Fairs and Exhibitions in Toronto last week were not too well pleased with references made by J. Lockie Wilson, the superintendent of Fairs in his annual report. Mr. Wilson expressed his regret that many societies last year allowed wheels of fortune, pools, cointables, draw lotteres and other illegal games. Under the statutes the societies permitting such illegal practices shall forfeit all claim to legislative grants for the year ensuing. The members were urged by Mr. Wilson in the interest of the agricultural scieties both from a moral and financial point of view to see to it that the fairs of 1911 are run strictly in accordance with the act regulating them. Societies, which break the laws are in danger of loaing their grants.

During the past year the secretary visited a number of exhibitions in Great Britain and on the European continent. He found that Ontario farmers had much to learn from the methods of conducting these fairs The Midway was not in evidence there and educational features were everywhere prominent. Stock was judged in rings in front of the grandstands. Milking and horse-shoeing competitions were features at the Scottish fairs. Prises were also given for eggs.

The scheme that has been before the association in regard to weather insurance was endorsed. The total provincial grant to fairs this year is $75,000. It was urged that $10,000 more be asked of the Government in order to provide for more money for weather insurance.

Several important practical addresses were delivered before the convention. These will be published in part in subsequent issues of Farm and Dairy.

The officers elected were: Pres., J. A. Simmons, Frankford; 1st Vice-pres., John Cornell, Forest; 2nd Vice-pres., R. H. Leary, Peterboro; Sec., J. Lockie Wilson, Toronto; Treas., Alex. McFarlane, Oakville; auditors, R. Agnew, Meaford; Wm. Collins, Peterboro.

GOOD THINGS TO KNOW

From Farm and Dairy.

When the fowls are well cared for they represent a daily income.

Pullets and hens will lay just as well without the attention of a male bird as with one.

Keep your feed room clean and do not permit any filth to lay around that will taint the feed.

Air-slacked lime is a good disinfectant and will help keep the flock healthy if scattered around the houses and yards occasionally.

A semi-dark nest is preferred by the laying hens. A good many trap nests on the market just suit them on this account.

The dropping boards should be made solid and smooth, so as not to permit the droppings to fall on the chicken house floor and to make the dropping board easy to clean.

An egg contains 65 per cent water. In the laying pens the water should be furnished in plenty. If it is necessary to do so, supply them with fresh water three to four times a day.

Just carefully look over your birds; you may find some lice on them, even if it is cold weather. To get the best results from poultry they must be free from lice the whole year, and it pays to fight lice the whole year.

The more you understand trees the better you will prune them.

A heavy pruning is always followed by a heavy growth of suckers

THE CITY BEAUTIFUL

Peterborough Made Picturesque by Practical People

(By Roy Gilray)

Peterborough, the "Garden City" of the East! Is that too high an ideal? Not if every citizen determines that his home shall become as attractive as brains, muscle and nature can make it.

We look to our civic representatives to see that our streets are kept clean, that our public buildings are an adornment instead of an eye-sore, that our parks are properly maintained; but we do not have to go very far from our own fireside to discover the one who is responsible for the beautifying of the home.

To Adam
Paradise was home;
To his descendants
Home is Paradise.

If we cannot buy expensive furniture to fill its rooms, if we are unable to import costly draperies, or rare paintings to grace its walls, we can at least work a transformation through the aid of nature and its wonderful adornments in creating an environment so pleasing to the eye, so fragrant to the nose, so delicious to the palate, so energizing to the nerves, that our "little kingdom" shall become a "thing of beauty and a joy for ever."

Is there any sight more joyful and more uplifting than a rose garden on a morning when the dew bedecks each petal, leaf and tree, when the rising sun awakens the birds to sing their jubilant songs, when a thousand blooms of roses, of every color in the rainbow, meet the eye, indescribable in their beauty, and with a fragrance which baffles description. There must be a lack in the make up of a person who has no appreciation of such a sight, who does not thrill before a great picture or a glimpse of beauty in nature.

A few dozen hybrid tea roses, which bloo mfrom June until November, would so transfigure your back garden that your circle of friends would catch the rose fever—which, by the way, is very contagious—even your neighbors would become inoculated with the laudable desire to do likewise, and the ball, once started, would, like the endless chain, continue for ever.

"What is the best education?" some one asked Plato. "It is," he replied, "that which gives to the body and to the soul all the beauty and all the perfection of which they are capable." What an infinite satisfaction comes from beginning early in life to cultivate the finer qualities, purer tastes, more delicate feelings, and the love of the beautiful in all its varied forms of expression! The life that would be complete, sane and strong must be softened and enriched by the love of the beautiful.

Every well-ordered home is a well-balanced institution. On the husband's side, strength, protection, help and service; on the wife's, sympathy, encouragement, devotion and a due appreciation of the elements necessary in the creation of "Home, Sweet Home."

The woman, then, must be the leader in this movement for the beautifying of our gardens, our homes, our city. She may have a great love for flowers, yet be unsuccessful in growing them. She may have an artistic eye admiring their beauty as she sees them growing, yet be unable to properly group them in laying out her own garden. But, on the whole, women are a pronounced success at floriculture, due largely to their innate love for the beautiful. Her refined taste for coloring, her natural artistic sense of arrangement, combined with the gift of love of all that's attractive in nature, peculiarly fits her for this most delightful occupation.

The chief drawback to the pursuit of gardening by woman is the mistaken idea that to dig is ignoble. To the true gardener the earth is as sweet as a nut. The very smell of the fresh earth is an antidote to disease, and most healthful to those who dig or stir it up. It makes the eye bright and the complexion rosy. It makes the muscles strong, and the brain clear, and sends the blood through artery and vein at a healthy pace. It is nature's panacea for many ills that afflict the body. There would be less dyspepsia, less headaches—yes, heartaches—if there was more exercise in the open.

"Take the open air—
The more you take the better;
Follow nature's laws
To the very letter.
Freely exercise,
Keep your spirits cheerful;
Eat the simplest food,
Drink the pure cold water;
Then you will be well—
Or, at least, you 'oughter.'"

To be a successful gardener a love for the subject is the first essential. This is easily acquired, and might be commenced at once.

The best thing the beginner can do is to start now and plan the garden instead of waiting until April or May. The most sensible, as well as the most delightful way, is to draw it to scale when the catalogues come with their fresh inspiration. It is the only way to cut out the spring rush. All the brain work of the garden is better done indoors, in winter, on paper, rather than outdoors at planting time. The plan should show where every row is to be, what is to be planted there in spring, and what is to follow later.

In order that there may be a comprehensive plan underlying the work, and to start the ball rolling, would it not be a good idea for our local Horticultural Society to invite Prof. H. L. Hutt, of the Ontario Agricultural College, to address the citizens of Peterborough on the subject: "The Beautifying of Lawns and Grounds Around Residences and Public Buildings?"

This would serve as an inspiration, an awakening, and our City Fathers could, through the medium of the Society, keep up the enthusiasm by offering prizes to the citizens generally to be awarded in the fall at an Annual Horticultural Exhibition.

The city could be subdivided into sections and prizes awarded in each for the best kept lawn and most attractive front. A friendly rivalry might be created in the residential parts by offering a "glory-prize" for the best kept block; such square to be known as the "Banner Block" of the city.

The results obtained from such a system would be in direct proportion to the number and variety of premiums offered.

If any one is in doubt as to the dividend-powers of such an investment, let him look at the example set by the great railroads of our country. They spend large sums each year in surrounding their stations with handsome approaches, sparkling fountains, terraces, and flower garden. They would be the last to adopt such a course, to spend money on such a project if it did not pay to cater to the aesthetic nature of their many patrons.

Hopeful signs are everywhere springing up of an awakening of our people to the fact that their cities need not necessarily be ugly. Societies are bending every effort towards the beautifying of existing centres, the sane designing of additions and growths, the comprehensive planning for the widening of certain streets, the creation or reclamation of certain parks or boulevards.

The time is now ripe for some public spirited citizen to come forward with a well thought out programme, which, if followed, would so transform our surroundings that Peterborough would quickly become "The City Beautiful."

"NOW THEN, SMITH"

Seaman Hero of Messina Earthquake Drowned in Australia

"Now then, Smith," the seaman hero of the Messina earthquake, has been drowned at Bunbury, West Australia. He was walking close to the jetty on his way to rejoin his ship, the Redbridge, when he disappeared.

At the time of the Messina earthquake in 1908, Smith was on board the steamer Afonwen, which was lying in the port, and went ashore with others of the crew to help in the work of rescue. The party came to a tottering building where a fire in the lower floors imprisoned the occupants above. The sailors threw a rope, which was made fast to the top of the building. The captain cried, "Now then, Smith," and Smith climbed up, bringing down one member of the family after the other until all were safe.

King Edward wished personally to hand Smith a medal for his bravery, but by that time he was on the seas again and the decoration had to be forwarded to him.

LONG TELEPHONE LINE

C.P.R. Completing One in Northwest 1,500 Miles in Length

The telephone will soon be available for use from Cartier, Ont., to Broadview, Sask., a distance of 1,500 miles. The Canadian Pacific Railway new telephone service for dispatching trains is being installed and only the connecting link for the east and west, that portion between Fort William and Winnipeg, remains to be completed. At present the service is being operated between Cartier and Fort William, and from Winnipeg to Broadview, and has been found to be a decided success. The installation of the service will not reduce the staff, but will greatly improve the facilities for work, which is rapidly increasing.

WHEN THE ODDS ARE AGAINST YOU

You Can Depend on Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine to Help You, If You Get the Genuine

What a fight goes on during the winter season against coughs and colds. The children are careless about keeping dry and warm, and the parents are worried to hear them cough.

The best insurance against serious results is the use of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine.

So well-known is this medicine and so universally used that we need scarcely tell you of its merits. But we do want to warn you against imitations and substitutes.

Once you know that there are at least four imitations of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine on the market, you are not likely to let any dealer talk you into accepting anything but the genuine, on each bottle of which are the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., the famous Receipt Book Author.

Imitations are sold on the reputation of this great medicine, and not on their own merits, or why should they not have a name of their own.

With the genuine Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine you can readily overcome croup, bronchitis, whooping cough, throat irritation and the most serious coughs and colds. 25 cents a bottle; family size, 60 cents, all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

PRINCE EDWARD GOES TO OXFORD

Some of the Rules and Regulations Our Future King Will Have to Obey

As it has been officially decided that the Prince of Wales is to go "up" to Oxford for a couple of years, it will doubtless be interesting to know what the young Prince will have to go through during his college career. In the first place, before being admitted he will have to pass an examination known as "Smalls." In this he will have no difficulty, because it is really no harder than the examination he passed a few years ago before entering Osborne. The only difference is that in "Smalls" the student has to "take" Greek whether he likes it or not.

This is immediately followed by another examination known as "matriculation," which is set by the college—not by the University—and is in most cases easier to pass than the "Smalls".

His preliminary examinations passed, it is probable that His Royal Highness will enter into the social life of Oxford with that whole-heartedness that was so marked a characteristic of his grandfather.

The young prince will doubtless find some of the regulations a trifle exacting. For instance, he will have to be fully dressed and ready to "keep" chapel at eight o'clock—if not every morning, at least four days a week.

Chapel lasts about twenty minutes. From eight-forty-five till ten he will breakfast. This may seem rather a long time for breakfast, but it must not be forgotten that Varsity breakfast is as important a meal as dinner, and generally comprises four or five courses, as lunch for the most part consists of bread-and-cheese only. For this reason breakfast is frequently known as "brunch."

From ten till one, with perhaps an hour's interval, he will attend lectures, for which he will have to don "academical dress," which consists of a gown that is a little shorter than the ordinary lounge-coat, and a "mortar-board."

The afternoon he will have to himself, and, if he decides to devote himself seriously to athletics, will be invited by the various secretaries of the different athletic clubs to "turn up."

If, as is not improbable, he wishes to take up rowing, he will be duly "tubbed."

"Tubbing" consists of sitting in a short, heavy boat which holds two beginners and one "coach." The beginners do their best to row under the supervision of their coach, who keeps up a running fire of comment on their efforts. It is well known that the language of coaches is not of the choicest.

For dinner the Prince will again don his gown. Dinner is served in hall, the undergraduates sitting at long tables that are divided according to the number of years that students have "kept." Thus all those in their first year, called "freshers," sit at one long table, those in the second year at another, and so on. The dons, or professors of the college, sit on a dais.

At nine o'clock "Tom Tower"—that is to say, the tower of Christ Church—which can be heard all over Oxford, tolls for about ten minutes, at the end of which His Royal Highness will be required to be in his own college. The college gates are closed at this time, and he will have to pay a fine of five cents if he "knocks in" between closing-time and eleven o'clock.

Between eleven and twelve the fine is a quarter. To be later than twelve is a very serious offence. The smallest fine for this is five dollars.

After dusk the Prince will have to wear his cap and gown, and if he fails to do this he will run the risk of being "progged," which is Oxonian for falling into the clutches of the Proctor. The Proctor is a don and takes the place of a University policeman. After dusk he patrols the city, accompanied by some half-dozen "bulldogs"—that is to say, men of the working-class who have been expert runners.

One of these men approaches an undergraduate and tells him that the senior (or junior, as the case may be) Proctor wishes to speak to him.

If the undergraduate takes to his heels, it is the "bulldog's" duty to follow. He may not lay hands on the man, but dogs his footsteps until midnight, when the student is compelled to "knock in" to his own college. His name is then obtained from the porter, and a heavy fine awaits him the next day.

WAVES TO DRIVE SHIPS

Applying Wave Power in Propelling Vessels Across the Atlantic

Mr. John Luck, of Brooklyn, has devised a plan to apply wave power to the propulsion of vessels crossing the ocean. The model of his invention, says "Science Siftings," represents the hull of a vessel equipped with water tanks, fore and aft. In the centre of the craft is a piston rod operated by a series of cogwheels, which furnishes motor power for the ship. Theoretically the weight of water stored in the tanks will be sufficient to put the machinery in motion and move the ship. This force will be applied by the rise and fall of the hull, occasioned by the action of the waves. If, for instance, a wave five feet high should strike the vessel astern, tons of force would be thrown upon the operating machinery, which would be simultaneously affected by the suction of the receding waters in other tanks at the opposite end of the boat. It would not, therefore, affect the power of propulsion if the tides were adverse to the course of the ship. Rocking of the boat by cross currents would have no effect on the power pressure.

NORMAL SCHOOL "AT HOME" WAS A GREAT SUCCESS

Large Attendance and Delightful Programme Featured the Annual Gathering.

PROMENADE WAS HELD

The Normal School was last night the scene of a most enjoyable and sociable event, held under the auspices of the Normal Literary Society.

The chair was occupied by Mr. I. S. Clubin, President of the Society. He made an ideal chairman.

The programme was a splendid one and all the numbers were of a very high order. The feature of it was the celerity and perfection in which it was given. It was characteristic of the Normal, the items having the usual interesting quality.

The events of the evening were opened by the chairman's address of welcome to the guests. Then the numbers followed in succession. The first was a chorus by the Glee Club. It was splendidly given and the applause with which it was greeted was no uncertain proof of the appreciation of the audience. Then followed a reading by Miss Katie Leary, entitled "Harve Riel". The next item was extremely amusing. It was "Cook's Drill," and was performed by seven boys. It was a complicated drill, and much credit is due the performers for the splendid way in which they went through it. A short extract from "The Merchant of Venice" was the next item. It was extremely interesting and was very cleverly acted.

Miss Davies contributed a vocal solo in her usual pleasing voice, and was greeted with the usual applause. The encore which she tendered was quite amusing.

Probably the feature of the evening was a scarf drill by nine girls. This number was given with such a degree of ease and yet, perfection, that the enthusiastic audience displayed their appreciation in a manner which gave no cause for doubt.

A regrettable feature of the evening was the unavoidable absence of Dr. Park, who was to favour the audience with a violin solo.

At the close of this much-appreciated programme there was a promenade, and a dainty luncheon was served. Halpany's Orchestra supplied the music for the evening, and did it in a manner worthy of special praise. The promenade was taken part in by everybody, and the large crowd made it very interesting indeed.

The room in which the luncheon was served was attractively decorated ,and the Assembly Hall, in which the concert and promenade was held was also decorated with hearts.

The gathering did not break up until after twelve o'clock. Those who did not care to indulge in the promenade went down to the lecture room, where limelight views of Ireland were being shown. This was a very amusing part of the events of the evening and the room was crowded all the time.

The evening was one of the most enjoyable experienced in the school, and its success was displayed on every side. Much credit is due those who trained the different performers for the excellent manner in which the latter acquitted themselves.

LIBRARY NOTES

The public will be pleased to learn that books can now be obtained at the Public Library. Great inconvenience has been caused by the non-arrival of the proper cards, but everything is being done to accommodate those who are desirous of obtaining reading matter. It is hoped that when the cards arrive the process of becoming eligible for its advantages will be rendered considerably easier.

The Library Committee have ordered copies of the Toronto daily papers exclusively for the ladies' section. These will be found on file every day. The juvenile books are being collected together as quickly as possible in one section so that children need not roam all over the stack room hunting for suitable literature. The reference books have been moved to the reference room, and the juvenile works placed on the shelves formerly reserved for the reference books.

Several articles have ben left in the reading rooms at various times. These are in the Librarian's hands, and will be handed over to those persons having a just claim to them, on application at the Librarian's desk.

PRESENTATION WAS MADE TO MR. W. D. MORROW

On the Eve of His Departure for Winnipeg—The Davis-Thompson Company Employees Gave Him Travelling Bag.

APPRECIATIVE ADDRESS

Mr. W. D. Morrow, who, for some years, has been connected with the staff of Davis Thompson and Company, and who has severed his connection with that Company, to accept a good position with a large real estate firm in Edmonton, was honoured by the employees of the Davis Thompson Company yesterday, by being presented with a handsome travelling bag and an eulogistic address, the latter being read by Mr. T. W. Robinson, while Mr. Fred Skitch made the presentation. Mr. Morrow has been most popular in the city and will be greatly missed. For some time he was Assistant Principal of the Peterborough Business College,and he was also prominent in the work of the George Street Methodist Sunday School.

The address presented to him yesterday was as follows:

W. D. Morrow, Esq.,

Dear Sir,—Having learned your intention to remove from our midst, we desire to express to you our sincerest regret in parting with you. The years you have spent in our company have shown us the true worth of your character. You have always been ready to assist us, and the cheerful and kindly manner in which you have extended your help to every one has firmly cemented that friendship, which we trust will never be forgotten.

We realize, however, that you are possessed of an ambition that reaches beyond the limitations of this city and we most heartily congratulate you on the splendid position which you have obtained in Edmonton, which, we know, will only be a stepping stone to something a great deal better. A young man of your splendid business ability is sure to attain the top rung in the ladder of success, and as you step upward we trust you will still remember your old friends in Peterborough.

We ask you to accept the accompanying travelling bag as a slight token of our respect and esteem with our very best wishes for your future happiness and prosperity and that of your estimable wife and family

HEALING POWER A MARVEL

So remarkable is the healing power of Dr. Chase's Ointment that the results of a single application are often a marvel to persons who witness them for the first time. Mrs. O. Hopkins, St. George, Ont. tells how her son was cured of blood poisoning which got started in a wound received at a threshing. Relief was prompt and cure effected by three boxes.

Colour Harmony

is an important consideration in selecting papers for your home. Every conflicting colour you place in a room adds to the confusing element often found in modern households—Unconsciously there is a feeling of unrest, something grates on your nerves and you may not realize what causes it—You would never know it was the Wall Paper unless some unkind person told you. You then attribute the lack of colour harmonizing to the fact that it was impossible to select papers, carpets, draperies etc together and thus avoid clashing.

This is exactly what we do and do it right. "We're in the know" and our three stocks (papers, carpets, draperies) are all on the same floor; well lighted airy third floor.

Come and let our expert salesmen demonstrate this to you.

The new Spring Papers are in, in the finest selection we have yet shown.

CONTINUATION OF INVESTIGATION INTO ORGANIZATION OF THE FARMERS' BANK

"Please, don't," interrupted Mr. Ross.

"You know the Act requires a certain cash deposit?"

"Mr. Travers said there would be some $80,000."

"Any document shown?"

"I think there was a receipt given.

"Can you say for how much?"

"How did this gentleman come to be inquiring?" asked the magistrate.

He stated he was apointed under the Bankers Association to make investigation regarding circulation.

He Was Skeptical.

This was all after the certificate was granted, and we object," stated Mr. Rose.

Mr. Knight said he had special instructions with the knowledge of the Finance Department to conduct the investigation. Here he had communicated with the vice-president of the association. The bank had produced this receipt and said the $80,000 was on deposit with the Guarantee Company.

"You believed it was on deposit?" asked the magistrate.

"I was skeptical."

"Did you make a report as a result of your investigation?" asked Mr. Corley.

"Yes, I had a telephone conversation."

"What report did you make?" continued Mr. Corley. "Any written report?"

"No."

"Go any place with Nesbitt or Travers? Go to the Trusts and Guarantee Company?"

"I called there."

"Who did you see?"

"Some man called the Chief Clerk"

"Did you ask anything about this deposit?"

"After four years I can't recall."

"Did you have any interview with the Trust people about the deposit?"

"My purpose was to locate Mr. Travers. I reported by 'phone to the department."

What Might Have Happened.

"You were not aware of the letter describing how the Farmers Bank had made up their $250,000?" inquired Mr. Wilson. "Why would you look at the register? Why would you ask Mr. Travers to show you the list of subscribers?"

He stated this was the instruction of the Bankers' Association.

"Then on this occasion you must have had belief that something was wrong. Was it from the correspondence?"

"From general information gathered."

"When the bank was open and doing business, tell me what your object was?"

"I might have succeeded in getting the license canceled if I could have shown any irregularity."

Saw Nothing Wrong.

"What was the general result of your inquiry?" asked Magistrate Denison.

"I reported over the phone."

"Did you communicate with anyone else?" asked Mr. Corley.

"I want to get at the result of your investigation," again suggested the court.

"I could see no reason why anything was wrong. Part of their money was in the bank."

"Did you count this up, which was in the bank?"

"No."

"Were you permitted to examine the books of the firm where this money was supposed to be deposited?"

"I had access to them."

"I'm afraid I'll have to ask for another witness to prove the result of this report," put in Mr. Corley, "this witness' memory seems a blank. I'll have to bring the gentleman you reported to."

"I reported that I was not satisfied to the proper authorities."

"And was anything done?"

"Not that I know of."

"And you reported to?"

"Mr. George Burn, of the Bankers' Association."

"Did he send this report on?"

"I think he sent it on to the Department of Finance.

This concluded the morning session.

Travers' Evidence.

Former manager W. R. Travers occupied the witness box during the whole of the afternoon session, and furnished information as to the various exhibits put in by Inspector Duncan. Regarding the authority given him in the minutes to endorse notes for stock, he said he had told the directors that he had reached a blockade, and could go no further unless this method was resorted to; with the notes, he thought he could raise the necessary money for deposit with the Treasury Board.

Before consulting Mr. Warren, he had approached other parties on the subject of raising funds on the notes; notably the late H. C. Hammond. He first saw Mr. Warren about the end of September, 1906, who told him he would consider the matter and let him know. He told Mr. Warren that the provisional directors had depleted the funds to the extent of $50,000 by the payment of stock commissions and other expenses, and that $80,000 was needed to complete the Government deposit. At the second interview, in which Hon. J. R. Stratton participated, he did not think anything had been said regarding the purpose to which the money was to be put. An agreement was reached at this interview, and shortly afterwards Travers hypothecated the notes to the trust company, receiving $80,000 on the conditions named in the exhibit. It was understood that the money was to be returned in about 40 days. Witness was not certain, but had some recollection that Warren had told him that part of the $80,000 was being raised by a client, an insurance company, which, he understood, was to receive half of the bonus of $1,000.

The later loan of $20,000, said Travers, was given by the trusts company on security of certain stocks and promissory notes. He had not asked for the whole amount before, as he had expected to get $20,000 from another source, which had failed him.

Padded the Statement.

To the best of his recollection, the report of the provisional directors, which spoke so glowingly of progress, had been prepared by Lown. It made no mention of the fact that $100,000 of the $250,000 deposit had been borrowed, as the sum had been spread among the accounts of various subscribers who had paid nothing.

"I was primarily responsible for this action," said the witness, "but I was assisted in the work by Dr. Nesbitt, Mr. Fitzgibbon, the accountant, and Mr. Hunter, the solicitor, who were all cognizant that we were using borrowed money to pad out the statement." He believed that Ferguson, Fraser, Lown and Smith were aware that he would borrow money and apply it upon certain unpaid subscriptions, but that they knew nothing of the actual result.

Regarding the Laidlaw incident, he said: "He approached me and offered his services as solicitor, stating that if I would divide the commissions with him he would take $5,000 of the stock and put his brother on the board. I told him to go to a warm place, whereupon he sued on behalf of the dissatisfied subscribers. I then borrowed $2,800 personally from an insurance company, and paid them all back for their shares, so that the actions had to be dropped."

In his correspondence with the Finance Minister Travers considered that he had been evasive, but truthful and considered at the time that he had a legal right for his actions in the matter. Mr. Fielding had finally been satisfied after a personal interview which had been arranged by Mr. Calvert. Mr. Corley here extracted the information that Calvert, at a later time, had been accommodated with about $5,000 of the bank's money, without security, and charged on the books to "commissions." The loan had, however, all been paid back since that date. He had not seen Mr Stratton in this matter.

The Deposit Slip.

The affair of the deposit slip or receipt which was obtained from the Trusts and Guarantee Company to allay Mr. Knight's suspicions, was thus explained. The loan of $80,000 had been repaid by Travers, but the trust company was still holding the $100,955 of notes. When Knight arrived and declared that he had the authority of the Finance Department to learn the amount of the bank's deposits, Travers asked Warren to let him have a receipt showing that he had $80,000 with the trust company. As the security was still good ,this was done, and the receipt shown to Knight. Travers did not tell Warren that the receipt was required for deceitful purposes, but merely that it was imperative that he should have it at once.

This last evidence was very involved, owing to the intricacy of the various transactions and the number of different banks upon which the cheques in the affair were drawn, so that it was held over for more complete investigation Saturday morning.

TORONTO, FEB. 18.—Through some misunderstanding, Travers was taken from Toronto jail this morning by Sheriff of Toronto and returned to Kingston by nine o'clock train. Consequently the investigation did not continue. An order of the court was issued for Travers' return to Toronto and the investigation will be resumed on Tuesday morning next.

OUR EMPIRE'S GRIEF

With a downcast heart and a tearful eye,
Our Empire stands to-day.
For the monster Death, with a vice-like grip,
Has taken its King away.

The sudden news our hearts has torn,
And with sacred grief we bow;
For if we ever felt a loss,
We surely feel it now.

Oh! King Edward, our sovereign lord,
Why should thou the victim be?
Why has death with its belaying hand
Come and smitten thee?

Ah! ah! we know not why—
The reason we cannot tell;
But on the day we heard the news
Our hearts in sorrow fell.

Thy reign, though short, has peaceful been,
And one of blessing, too;
For in thy mother's steps to tread,
Thy best thou has tried to do.

And as a king thou has ruled
In a true and loyal way;
And our thoughts now turn to thee
In this our mournful day.

With sympathising hearts we turn
To thy lov'd ones left behind,
And pray that in God's wondrous love
Sweet comfort they shall find.

And that thy son, the new King George,
May rule and govern aright;
And that good health and strength be given
To him both day and night.

And though the flowers may fade and die,
And the moments swiftly pass,
Our thoughts of thee, Most Noble King,
Shall for ever last.

THE SPRUCE BUDWORM

An Account of the Work That is Being Carried On

On applying to Dr. C. Gordon Hewitt, Dominion Entomologist, as to the work that the Federal Department of Agriculture were doing in regard to the Spruce Budworm (Tortrix ffumiferana), he made the following statement to the Canadian Forestry Association.

"The attention of the Department was first called to serious attacks of this insect in the upper Gatineau region of Quebec by the Hon. W. C. Edwards. Mr. Arthur Gibson, Chief Assistant Entomologist of the Division of Entomology, was immediately sent to investigate the outbreak in July, 1909, and he has already communicated an account of his investigation to the Canadian Forestry Journal (Dec., 1909).

"In October, 1909, a few weeks after taking charge of the work of the Division of Entomology, I visited British Columbia and investigated the attacks of the insect on Vancouver Island. The serious character of the attack of the Spruce Budworm on the balsam and spruce in Eastern Canada and the Douglas fir in British Columbia, rendered a careful study of the insect, its depredations and controlling agencies imperative, and accordingly such a study was commenced. During the present summer (1910) the line of investigation that we have been following has been to discover the species of parasites attacking the pest. In the case of an outbreak of this nature, when the insect has gained great headway before its discovery, and where it is impracticable to adopt any means of control, the most important and only line of investigation possible is a study of the species of the parasites, which are the natural means of control, attacking the caterpillars, with a view to discovering—first, what species there are, and secondly, whether they are increasing in number. This information is of very great importance and value, not only from a scientific but also from a practical point of view, as the following instance of a similar study will show. In England, a serious outbreak of the Larch Sawfly was reported in 1906. (This is the same insect which destroyed all the larch or tamarack throughout Eastern Canada some years ago, and again appeared about five years ago.) In the following year I began to study the life history of the insect and its parasites. Except in newly planted areas it was not possible to adopt any means of control. It was found in 1908 that a certain pecies of ichneumon fly, an important parasite, had killed about six per cent. of the insects; in the following year the percentage killed and this year I found that the percent. I then left England and came to Canada, but to continue the investigation many thousands of the cocoons were imported from England, an dthis year I found that the percentage of insects in the coccons killed by the parasites was over sixty per cent. This discovery, which was also confirmed in England, is of the greatest interest and importance, as it indicates that in those localities where the infestation was most serious the parasites have almost gained complete control of the sawfly, and control will mean eradication. The practical value of this continued study lies in the fact that the owners of timber feared its destruction by the continued defoliation by the caterpillars, many acres having been so killed, and were cutting down timber before it had reached its full growth and value to save it. This will now be unnecessary, as we know the pest will be controlled by its parasites. In a similar manner we have already begun a study of the parasites of the Spruce Budworm, and we hope, next year, to study the percentage of the caterpillars attacked by the species of parasites that we have bred from them during the present season. It is expected that such an investigation will indicate to us the extent to which natural means of control are acting upon the pest, and until we have such information it is impossible to prophesy what the results of the outbreak will be and whether considerable loss will be caused or not before the pest is controlled by these natural agencies.

"I have conferred with Mr. G. C. Piche the Chief Forestry Engineer of the Province of Quebec, and with the Hon. W. C. Edwards and others who have interests in the forests at present attacked. It has been decided that the area over which the outbreak extends at the present time shall be delimited, and Mr. Piche has arranged for such a survey, which I believe is now in the field. When this survey is complete Mr. Piche and I intend to visit the worst infested regions, and it is proposed to elucidate certain points with regard to the life history and habits of the insect, and the visit will enable us to determine, so far as is possible, to what extent the trees have been injured by the previous depredations. It will be possible, also, to discover whether the trees, weakened in vitality by the defoliation by the caterpillars, are being attacked, as is often the case, by species of bark-beetles, which complete the destruction of the living tree.

"The Association may be assured that we are giving this serious matter our most careful attention, and we hope that next year, when the parasitic work is continued, that those concerned will assist us in obtaining supplies of material to enable us to make our investigation as complete as possible.—Canadian Forestry Journal (Oct., 1910.)

HE PUNISHED GRANT.

The Cadet Was Guilty of Dismounting Without Leave.

While a student at West Point U. S. Grant excelled in mathematics and horsemanship. He jumped his horse over a bar five feet six inches high, which made a record for the academy and a close second to the highest jump ever recorded in America. He received little honor for some of his efforts, however, notably in the case recalled by Nicholas Smith in "Grant, the Man of Mystery." But perhaps the humor of it reconciled him.

The riding master was one Hershberger, "an amusing sort of tyrant," and on one occasion, whether seriously or as a joke, he determined to "take down" the young cadet.

At the exercise Grant was mounted on a powerful but vicious brute that the cadets fought shy of and was put at leaping the bar.

The bar was placed higher and higher as he came round the ring till it passed the record. The stubborn rider would not say "enough," but the horse was disposed to shy and refuse to make the leap.

Grant gritted his teeth and spurred at it, but just as the horse gathered for the spring his swelling body burst the girth, and the rider and saddle tumbled into the ring.

Half stunned, Grant gathered himself up from the dust only to hear the "strident, cynical notes" of Hershberger calling out:

"Cadet Grant, six demerits for dismounting without leave!"

BEAT HIM TO THE STATION.

The Message That Got There Before the Patrolman Did.

"When I was a patrolman," says a prominent detective, "there used to be a sergeant on the force who had it in for me. He reported me for various delinquencies, and—well, he's dead now, and I won't say anything against him. He got sick, and it was reported at the station that he wasn't expected to live. So the boss called me and told me to go around and see if I could do anything for the old fellow. I called at the house and asked if I could see him. They let me in. I tiptoed into the room where the sergeant was in bed and said, 'The lieutenant sent me around to see how you were getting along.'

"He spoke with difficulty, but I could make out what he said. 'Go back,' he grunted, 'and tell 'em that I'm getting along fine. The boys have fixed me up all right, and I don't need anything. I'm feeling better.'

"So I went back to the station. I was stopped a couple of times on my way and got in about half an hour later. Then I made my report. 'He says he's better and doesn't need anything,' says I. The lieutenant jumped up. 'Do you mean to say that you saw him?' says he. 'I did,' says I. 'And he told you he was all right?' 'Yes, sir.' 'You blasted liar!' shouts the lieutenant. 'I got a message ten minutes ago that he was dead!'

"And it was true. What do you think of that old scoundrel trying to get me in bad with his dying breath?" —Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Picture of Night.

Along the high hedged lane John Strong swung, the June gloaming deepening into night. He loved to shove his face into the night. He gloried in the uncertainty of night, the indefiniteness of night, and his soul cried back a wild answer to the cry of the nighthawk and the owl. Night is more primitive than day; night is more calamitous; night is a savage; night everywhere is the true aborigine. Day has taken on civilization. Night hurls the world back to the day of the war club, the flint arrowhead, the painted visage. John Strong loved the night with an almost malevolent love. In the night he could hear the Valkyries screaming, the witches riding their broomsticks, the ghouls scraping the mold from off the new buried coffin. John Strong swung along, his face set to meet oncoming night.—Adventure.

Where He Drew the Line.

Thomas was an old gamekeeper on Sir Greville's Scotch estate, says Sir William Kennedy in "Sport In the Navy." When he was sixty years old he contracted measles and was very ill for a time. Sir Greville, with characteristic kindness, sent the old man some hothouse grapes and a pineapple. The next time the two met Sir Greville asked Thomas how he liked the fruit.

"Weel, Sir Greville," answered the gamekeeper, "the plums was good, but I dinna think much of the turnip."

Ulterior Motives.

"See, here," said the kind hearted lady, "I gave you a piece of pie two weeks ago, and you have been sending one or more of your friends here every day since."

"Youse do me a injustice, ma'am," replied the husky hobo. "Dem guys wot I sent was me enemies."—Chicago News.

"I guess maybe it was my red flannel underwear you noticed," he lamely remarked.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

IN 1898

reported that "the preparation fulfils ALL the requirements and presents ALL the conditions of a very satisfactory emulsion. In appearance and consistency it is not unlike cream and under the microscope the fat globules are seen to be of perfectly regular size and uniformly distributed. So well has the oil been emulsified that even when shaken with water the fat is slow to separate. The taste is decidedly unobjectionable and the Emulsion should prove an excellent food as well as a tonic."

We believe no other preparation of Cod Liver Oil has received such weighty commendation and if the same high authorities were to examine it now they would find it even finer, more digestable, more palatable and more satisfactory in every way; in fact, SCOTT'S EMULSION has so long been the one satisfactory and perfect Emulsion that it is accepted as the standard by medical practitioners all over the world, by the public and by hundreds of imitators, for it is the one and only Emulsion imitated.

The imitations are in name only for no other preparation of Cod Liver Oil is so pure, so perfect and so beneficial.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

has become the world's Standard Body-Builder because of the perfect purity of its ingredients, its absolute freedom from ALCOHOL or any other harmful substance and because the results from it are uniform and far greater than from any other preparation.

CRITICISE EXPENSE

Conservatives Took Parsimonious View of the Expenditure Upon Exhibitions

YESTERDAY IN HOUSE

Ottawa, Feb. 18.—In committee of supply on an item of $100,000 for exhibitions yesterday, Hon. Sidney Fisher explained that it was for an expenditure incurred during the present year in connection with the exhibit Canada will have in the Crystal Palace grounds, London, as an adjunct of the festival of the Empire, which will be a feature of the coronation celebration. The exhibit will be in a building which will be a reproduction on a small scale of the Canadian Parliament Buildings, and another vote of over $150,000 will be required to cover the total expense which will be incurred.

Then there was some criticism of the nature of the proposed expenditure, during the course of which the Minister explained that Canada's only contribution to the pageant of nations would be two thousand pounds sterling for rental of space in the grounds for the Canadian building.

Mr. Fisher explained that all the other countries which make up the British Empire would be well represented with exhibits, and that the Government would not be doing its duty if Canada did not make her usual good showing.

Glen Campbell (Dauphin) introduced a criticism of Wm. Hutchinson, Dominion exhibition commissioner, by referring to the fact that he is given an allowance per day in addition to his salary. He subsequently explained, however, that he did not object to Mr. Hutchinson being well paid, but to the system of salary and allowance.

Dr. Reid replied that "a small fair such as they have in Ottawa would be no proper training for the big expositions."

Dr. Reid (Grenville) then launched into a general criticism of the Minister for not getting larger votes for agricultural purposes. He said that Mr. Fisher was losing influence with his colleagues, and that the Minister of Labor would soon have as big a sum to expend.

Mr. Fisher contented himself with the remark that it would take more than Dr. Reid's assertions to make the farmers believe it.

Geo. Taylor caused some amusement by discovering that seven cases of cocktails had been bought at St. Hyacinthe for the Seattle Exposition.

Mr. Fisher laughingly remarked that he did not know anything about this transaction, but would enquire.

A. Haggart of Winnipeg brought up the matter of the Selkirk Exposition. He said the people would be glad to hear what was the attitude of the Government towards it.

Mr. Fisher explained that these estimates were for the current year only. Already the Prime Minister had stated to the House that the matter of a contribution was still under advisement.

Mr. Haggart said that this being a world's exposition, they must have three years to prepare.

Mr. Staples asked the Minister to state definitely if he would use his influence to get for the agriculturists of this country what they deserved. "Jump and take a chance. You will come out all right," he said.

Dr. Reid of Grenville read a letter which he had received from Washington regarding the Long Sault dam proposition. The letter stated that after investigation, it was found out the company was endeavoring to get legislation to develop power south of the boundary line, independently of the Canadian Government. The bill omitted any provision for the consent of Canada but expressly stated that the company could construct and operate.

Sir Wilfrid said he could not agree with some of the conclusions, but he had communicated with the Government at Washington, and the correspondence would be brought down in due course.

Martin Burrell (Yale-Cariboo) read a telegram from the ratepayers of Coldstream and Vernon, B.C., deploring the reciprocity agreement, and declaring that there can be no difference of opinion, but that if there is to be protection, there should be protection all round. They believe that it is more necessary to protect the fruit growing than manufactures, and that there is no justice in sacrificing an infant industry and protecting a full grown industry.

A LUXURIANT GROWTH OF HAIR

Does Not Follow Neglect of the Scalp

Aside from combing it when they think necessary many people give no attention whatever to their hair. Then when the hair begins to fall out it never occurs to them that their trouble is the result of personal carelessness.

An occasional application of Newbro's Herpicide will not only prevent loss of hair but permits a luxuriant growth.

Herpicide kills the germ that causes dandruff and to this germ most hair losses are attributable. It keeps the scalp clean and free from dirt, allowing the hair to grow unhampered by accumulation of dandruff.

Newbro's Herpicide is sold by all druggists and its manufacturers have such confidence in its germ destroying power that they authorize all druggists to guarantee the one dollar size bottles to do as claimed or money refunded.

Applications may be obtained at good barber shops.

Send 10c in postage for sample and booklet to The Herpicide Co., Dept. R., Detroit, Mich.

Conspiracy of Silence.

London, Feb. 18.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Standard says: "The conspiracy of silence on the part of the American press cannot prevent the Canadian people from discovering what is being said and done on the other side of the frontier. Annexation sentiments may be dormant, but it has never been quite extinguished. The mere prospect of union with Canada fills ardent Republican Chauvinists with exultation which they are unable to repress. The President is naturally not anxious to frighten Canadians too soon, otherwise the agreement may be rejected. It is easy enough for Canadians to get into reciprocity, but getting out is different."

The Daily Express says that reciprocity leads to annexation. Canada seemed to have been lulled by Laurier into an utterly false sense of security. These delusions had been dissipated through Champ Clark's words.

Band Operated In Both Countries.

Berlin, Feb. 18.—The report that one of the Anarchist burglars wanted in London had been arrested at Breslau grew out of an investigation of the operations of a criminal band in Breslau who used methods similar to those employed in London. The men rented a house adjoining one which they robbed, after affecting an entrance by tunnelling from one cellar to the other. They secured booty valued at $4,000. Two watches found in the possession of the men arrested in London have been identified as those stolen from a Breslau jeweler, and it is now supposed that the same band operated in both countries.

Three Knots Untied.

Ottawa, Feb. 18.—Senator Kirchoffer, chairman of the divorce committee, submitted to the Senate yesterday a report recommending granting the application of C. E. Truman of Toronto for divorce from his wife, Mary B. Truman, of George A. Brown of Port Hope from his wife, Margaret Brown, and of Ethel M. Hornell of Toronto from her husband, David G. Hornell of Montreal.

A STRIKE POSSIBLE

Conflict May Come on Great Northwestern as the Men are Dissatisfied With Conditions

GIVE THEIR REASONS

Toronto, Feb. 18.—For the third time in seven years is the Great Northwestern Telegraph Co. threatened with a strike of its operators. From the present temper of the men and the uncompromising attitude assumed by the company, there seems little doubt but that the trouble will at least reach the point of an appeal for the appointment of a board of conciliation under the provisions of the Lemieux Act.

International President S. J. Konenkamp of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union of America, arrived in the city from Chicago yesterday evening, to take charge of the situation. While there was no question, he said of union recognition in the dispute, the union would render the committee appointed by the men every support possible in their fight for a reasonable salary schedule.

While the trouble has come to a head in Toronto, three dismissals following the presentation of a new schedule, he pointed out that the entire staff of operators, from Winnipeg to the Atlantic coast, would be affected by any action that might be taken.

Twenty-five men have been discharged by the Great Northwestern Telegraph Co. since Jan. 1 as a result of a campaign among the telegraphers of that company which had for its purpose higher wages. Telegraphers' wages have not generally kept pace with the times and the minimum salary remains at $25 per month, with a maximum of $70 with the G.N.W., the same as ten years ago, despite the increased cost of living. The men sought to obtain relief first by petitions and finally by organizing.

A new schedule of wages, asking for a minimum salary of $30 per month, was presented to the management on Feb. 2 by a committee holding authority from the great majority of the employes, and the committee asked for a conference. The company replied by first discharging the committee and then dismissing eight of those who refused to sign a paper which stated that they were satisfied with present conditions and that the committee was not authorized to act.

This happened on Wednesday. Despite the dismissal of some of those who refused to sign the paper, it is understood only 20 of the 60 telegraphers employed in the Toronto office signed. Some of those who did sign were promised an increase of $5 per month, to take effect April 1.

Approximately twenty-five employes have been dismissed so far, and it is reported that others will follow as rapidly as men can be obtained from the United States to fill their places.

President Konenkamp said that a conference of the general committee, representing all the G.N.W. employes, would be held within the next few days, and that until this took place he did not feel competent to discuss the matter at length. He pointed out, however, that all the committee had done was to submit a proposition on behalf of the employes and ask for a conference. It was inconceivable, he said, that men should be dismissed for such a cause. The schedule presented by the men had been approved by him in accordance with the laws of the union.

City to Buy Bridge.

Kingston, Feb. 18.—There is a movement for the city to purchase Catarqui bridge for $14,850 and be in a position to eventually deal with the Dominion Government. At present the city holds $20,000 stock in the bridge, the value of which is placed at $40,700. There is an annual grant of $1,400 from the Dominion Government. If a new bridge is not erected for some years the tolls collected would more than keep the bridge in repair.

Trolley Along the Welland.

St. Catharines, Feb. 18.—The Port Colborne division of the Niagara, St. Catherines and Toronto Railway opened for traffic at 6.30 this morning, with a two-hour service until midnight. The road is now in operation from Port Dalhousie to Welland. The new section, 8 1-2 miles in length, gives a trolley service the entire length of the Welland Canal.

HOW TO KEEP YOUNG

Keep in the sunshine. Avoid excesses of all kinds. Eat moderately at regular intervals. Cultivate a spirit of contentment and keep the bowels regular and liver active by using Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills. No treatment is so definite and so satisfactory for this purpose. None so trustworthy and economical.

Will Watch Legislators.

Winnipeg, Feb. 18.—Rod McKenzie, secretary of the Manitoba Grain Growers' Association, has been appointed a special delegate to visit Ottawa, where he will spend some time watching legislation on behalf of the farming interests in the West.

Members of the Grain Exchange here believe that the new tariff arrangements will have an important effect upon the western grain trade and in order so that it may be conserved for Canada, amendments to the present Grain and Inspection Acts are necessary. A committee has been appointed to study the situation and suggest changes in legislation.

Keep Plague Out of English Ports.

London, Feb. 18.—Despatches from St Petersburg saying that the bubonic plague has invaded Europe and caused thirty deaths in the Russian province of Astrakhan, resulted yesterday in steps being taken for the inauguration of a campaign to protect English ports from the plague.

It is possible that within a short time a genera. quarantine against Russian shipping will be declared. This may ultimately result in all Russian vessels being forbidden to stop at English ports.

This would result in suffering as a large part of the wheat used in Great Britain comes from Russia.

TOPICS OF CONFERENCE.

New Zealand Suggests an Imperial Council at London.

London, Feb. 18.—The Government has issued the correspondence with the overseas dominions setting out the subjects for discussion at the Imperial Conference.

New Zealand suggests an Imperial Council, with representatives from all parts of the Empire, and a secretary of Imperial affairs instead of the Colonial Secretary, with separate departments for the dominions and crown colonies, and the high commissioners raised to the status of ambassadors.

South Africa proposes that matters affecting the self-governing dominions be placed directly under the Premier.

Australia raises the question of the Declaration of London, regretting that the colonies had not been consulted, opposing the provisions affecting food supply and the destruction of neutral vessels.

Right Hon. Lewis Harcourt, the Colonial Secretary, hopes that the conference will meet fifteen times between May 23 and the coronation, June 22. Firstly, it will decide whether it will sit privately.

The all-red route with a state cable with a line across Canada are also subjects.

Newfoundland proposes a line of steamers subsidized by Britain, Canada and Newfoundland to link up the three.

Another topic for the imperial court is the appeal of New Zealand and Australia suggesting overseas representation in the Cabinet.

British West Indies raises the questions of labor exchange, uniform design for stamps, the expulsion of undesirable aliens.

Canada has no special proposals, but would welcome suggestions for a uniform naturalization law.

South Africa cabled Jan. 20, suggesting the consideration of replacing the trade preferences by contributions to the Imperial naval and local defence, but these suggestions were withdrawn on Feb. 10.

After Cocaine Dealers.

Montreal, Feb. 18.—For three months John Foley, cocaine vendor, has led Constables Daoust and Martin a merry chase through the red light district, but they caught him Thursday night with the drug on him and he was yesterday morning fined $25 or ninety days. Since July last, Constables Daoust and Martin, aided latterly by Constable Marsolais, have arrested 155 cocaine vendors. Of these cases 145 appeared in the recorder's court, convictions being obtained in every case, some times on double charges. Over $300 worth of the drug has during this period been seized and analyzed.

BABY'S OWN TABLETS FOR ALL BABIES

Every mother of young children should keep a box of Baby's Own Tablets in the house. No other medicine has relieved so many little ones of the ailments that afflict them as have Baby's Own Tablets—no other medicine can be given baby with that absolute sureness of safety as can these Tablets. The mother has the guarantee of a Government analyst that they do not contain a particle of those harmful drugs that make those so-called "soothing" stuffs so dangerous to the life of the little one. The Tablets never fail to be of benefit. Concerning them Mrs. Jno. A. Albert, Caraquet, N.B., writes:—"I am happy to state that I have used Baby's Own Tablets for constipation for my two children with great satisfaction." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Off the Indian List.

Washington, Feb. 18.—President Taft has repealed those portions of treaties made with the Indian tribes of Minnesota half a century ago prohibiting all traffic in intoxicating liquors in the Indian country. He also sent to Congress a special message urging similar action by that body in those treaties, the provisions of which he is not empowered to repeal or modify.

Large white settlements have been made and great cities like St. Paul and Minneapolis have come to occupy a portion of what, at the date of the treatieh, was denominated Indian country.

French Give Ultimatum.

Ottawa, Feb. 18.—At a special meeting of the executive of the French-Canadian Educational Association, held last night, it was unanimously decided not to present an address to Archbishop Gauthier on the occasion of his enthronement on Feb. 21, if Bishop Fallon is present.

This stand is taking owing to Bishop Fallon's attitude toward bi-lingual schools and to French-Canadian aspirations in Ontario, which is termed, "unjust and iniquitous," in the resolution.

Alien Importers Fined.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Feb. 18.—John Jones and Samuel Lewis, local Hungarians, were arrested yesterday on charges of bringing three rejected aliens into the country. They were fined $20 and costs each by Magistrate Fraser. The three Hungarians they were accused of helping to enter Canada were deported.

Search For Father-In-Law.

Detroit, Feb. 18.—Fred Garton, a barber, was shot five times yesterday at his shop on Campau avenue, and taken to Grace Hospital in a dying condition, and the police are searching for his father-in-law, George R. Bather, of 137 Dragoon avenue. Bather was enraged over the marriage of his step-daughter and Garton a week ago.

Let Champ Beware.

Ottawa, Feb. 18.—Col. Sam Hughes left yesterday for Washington on private business. He said before he left that he would have a word or two to say to Champ Clark about that scheme of annexing Canada.

MARKET REPORTS.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Lower—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, Feb. 17.—A fresh low record for the season was made to-day in the price of wheat. Every option sold cheaper than at any previous time for the crop. Closing figures were 1½c to 1¾c to 1¾c under last night. In corn the outcome was a net loss of ½c to ¾c. Oats finished unchanged to a shade off, and provisions at 2½c to 12½c advance. The wheat market had one sharp advance, due to news from Washington that the grain clause of the Scott Anti-Option Bill had been left out. Short selling on a big scale by a leading speculator proved especially disconcerting to believers in higher prices for the July delivery. Towards the end the market showed no recuperative power to speak of, and the final tone was decidedly nervous. May ranged at from 90½c to 90¾c to 92¼c, closing 1¾c net lower, at 90¾c to 90⅞c.

The Liverpool market closed on wheat ¼d to ½d lower than yesterday, and unchanged to ¼d higher on corn. At Berlin, wheat closed ⅛c higher, at Antwerp ½c higher, at Budapest ½c lower, and at Paris ⅜c to ½c higher.

A Sensational Attack.

Winnipeg, Feb. 18.—A sensation was furnished in the Legislature yesterday by W. Molloy Laverandie, who charged Conservatives with having tried to steal every seat in the province, and declared that a conspiracy to tamper with the ballot boxes in his constituency was frustrated. A statement that he does not care whether Manitoba's boundaries were ever extended, as the country north is practically valueless, called forth Government protests.

Bennett Gets His.

Washington, Feb. 18.—The fame of William S. Bennett, as the man who would annex Canada to the United States at once by resolution, went up like a rocket and came down like a stick. Solemnly introduced in the Congress Thursday, the resolution to commence negotiations with Great Britain to this end met an untimely and undignified end in the committee of foreign affairs yesterday morning, and there was none save Mr. Bennett to do it honor. When it emerged from nowhere Thursday it at once took a place in international politics, and the friends of reciprocity felt that it could only arouse unnecessary prejudice and prevent a rational consideration of the bill upon its merits. It was, therefore, thought desirable that there should be an immediate decision to place the resolution where it belonged.

Battleships For Russia.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 18.—The Government has asked the Douma to vote $60,000,000 for the construction of four battleships by 1915. The vessels are to be named Sebastopol, Petropavlovsk, Gangut and Poltava.

Struck by an Engine.

Brockville, Feb. 18.—John Stark was brought here yesterday from Gananoque, and hurried to the General Hospital to receive treatment for serious injuries sustained at Thousand Islands Junction through being struck by an engine. His injuries are mainly about the head, and it is feared he may lose the sight of an eye.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

The miners of the Atlantic Collieries at Port Morien have been granted a conciliation board by the Department of Labor at Ottawa to enquire into the wage trouble.

Miss Bartley, a school teacher of Montreal, was taken suddenly ill at His Majesty's Theatre during a religious play, "To Serve the Cross," and died of heart failure.

The finance committee of the London City Council last night decided to urge the deepening of the Welland Canal before undertaking work on the Georgian Bay Canal project.

Mrs. Hay of Hamilton called at the city morgue yesterday and identified the remains of the man who died in the police cells as those of her husband, who had been absent from home several days.

The Viceroy of Manchuria estimates that the fatalities in Manchuria from the bubonic plague already have reached 65,000. Many believe the number of fatalities will be nearer double those of the official estimates.

To Check Joy Riders.

Toronto, Feb. 18.—Routine business, in a thinly attended House, was the order at the Ontario Legislature yesterday afternoon. Hon. J. J. Foy's bill for the consolidation of the statutes respecting pawnbrokers was put through committee.

Mr. Neely's bill to confirm the by-law of the town of Petrolia for the acceptance of the Eleanor Englehart Hospital was read a second time.

Valentine Stock, South Perth, gave notice of a bill to require chauffeurs or other drivers of motor vehicles to carry a license or permit with them when driving. The permit to be endorsed by a magistrate in case of a first conviction for reckless driving, and on a second conviction to be endorsed and sent to the Provincial Secretary.

Notice of motion has been made by W. Proudfoot, Centre Huron, of a bill to amend the liquor license act. The member for Centre Huron had left the Parliament Buildings when the notice was announced. It is stated in some quarters that Mr. Proudfoot intends moving the repeal of the three-fifths clause in relation to local option.

Curtiss Flies Over Sea.

San Diego, Cal., Feb. 18.—Using one of his hydro-aeroplanes, Glenn Curtiss alighted yesterday on the water alongside the armored cruiser Pennsylvania and was hoisted on board. Soon afterwards the aeroplane was dropped back into the water and the aviator flew away to his hangar on North Island.

The test was made to show the Navy Department that an aeroplane equipped like that of Curtiss' does not need an especially constructed platform on a ship's deck to make it of practical use to the navy. The hydro-aeroplane was wheeled out of its hangar and he flew to the water alongside the cruiser. Within a few minutes Curtiss and his machine were on deck. After a delay of 15 minutes the machine and its pilot were lowered, the biplane arose gracefully from the water and without incident flew back to its hangar on North Island.

Archbishop Leaves $4,031.

Philadelphia, Feb. 18.—The wills of the late Archbishop Ryan and the late Bishop Whitaker, were probated yesterday. The personal estate of the archbishop, valued at $4,031, is left to his successor, together with the furniture and library at the residence. The archbishop left no real estate.

The estate of Bishop Whitaker, valued at $65,000, is to be divided among numerous relatives. His will directs that within ten months after his death all his written sermons and sermon notes be burned, and that no portion of them shall be published, given away, copied or preserved.

At night, however, five other Peterborough rinks succeeded in defeating the visitors by 66 to 51, giving Peterborough a margin of 7 on the total, the score being Peterborough 122, Toronto Victorias 115. DENISON THE STAR

TORONTO, FEB. 17.—Trinity College School of Port Hope defeated Varsity III. by a score of three goals to two at Mutual street rink Thursday afternoon. The game was very evenly contested. The score at half time was one all, Varsity scoring just before the half ended.

For T.C.S. Macaulay and Denison were conspicuous. For Varsity Caldwell and Baillie were the best. The game was marked by hard checking throughout and it was the continuation work of T.C.S. which saved them from defeat when the score stood 2 to 1 against them.

From the start the pace was fast and even. Macaulay scored the first goal for T.C.S. and continued to force the play, but Beady in goal for Varsity III made good saves and, had it not been for his work the score for T. C.S. would have been greater.

Varsity made a determined effort to score early in the second half and were successful, giving them a lead of one goal. Then Macaulay and Denison, after some nice combination work, got away for a rush through the Varsity defence, which resulted in a goal being notched, making the score two all. It now remained a question of which team could get the odd goal before time was up. Varsity got down and would have scored but Martin in goal, made a good save. Denison, rover for T. C. S., obtaining the puck, worked his way through the entire Varsity III team and scored. A few minutes after this full-time was called, leaving the score 3 to 2 in favour of T.C.S. Line-up:

Referee—Herb Clarke.

East City Team Won

An interesting exhibition of junior hockey was seen at Brock St. Rink last night when the East City team defeated the Northern Lights by 1 to 0, the only score of the game being made in the first half. The winners were lighter than the Northern Lights and the latter wooded up considerably, but in spite of that fact the East City aggregation had considerably the better of the play and would have won by a bigger margin had it not been for the good work of Clarke in goal, for the losers. Halpin and Butcher were the stars for the winners, while Clarke was the best for the Lights. Nagel Phelan refereed satisfactorily. The teams were:

At the curling rink Thursday night two postponed curling games were played, resulting as follows:

Could Not Walk Ten Yards Without Resting.

WEAK HEART WAS THE CAUSE.

Mrs. Robinson Collette, Rogersville, N.B., writes: "I am now enjoying the best of health after having used your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I was troubled with a weak heart and was afraid to draw a long breath for the pain it would cause me. I could not sleep at night, and it was impossible for me to walk ten yards without resting myself. I cannot speak too highly of your Heart and Nerve Pills, for they are the greatest pill I have ever used and I can recommend them to all sufferers."

Thousands of people go about their daily work on the verge of death and yet do not know it.

Little attention is paid to the slight weakness of the heart for the simple reason that one thinks it will right itself, but there is where the mistake is made. It is only when a violent shock comes that the weakness of the heart becomes apparent.

On the first sign of any weakness of the heart or nerves, flagging energy or physical breakdown, the use of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will soon produce a quick and permanent cure.

Price 50 cents per box, or 3 for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

PETERBORO' LOST AT KINGSTON BY 7 TO 3

The Peterborough team, which played an exhibition game in Kingston last night, the Grillers having defaulted the O.H.A. fixture, gave the Frontenacs the hardest game of the season, losing by 7 to 3. The team consisted of Patterson goal, McMartin point, Heffernan cover, Giroux rover, Joe Quigley of Lakefield, centre, Short right wing and Curly Elliott of the Bank of Montreal team, left wing. Qcigley was picked up at the station as the team was leaving.

WARSHIP NAMED FOR KING.

Name "King George V." Will Not Recall Ill-fated "Royal George."

The New York Herald's naval correspondent writes from London as follows:

"The decision of the naval authorities in the matter of the name of the first battleship to be laid down in the present reign has been the cause of some discussion on naval nomenclature. It had been thought likely that this ship would be called the Royal George, although that name is in the minds of most people only connected with the disaster commemorated in Cowper's dirge:

Toll for the brave!
The brave that are no more!
All sunk beneath the wave,
Fast by their native shore!

"However, the precedent of the last reign, when the first battleship was name the King Edward VII. is to be followed, and the next ship will be christened the King George V.

"It is an open secret that King George himself has selected this name, and there is a consensus of opinion that in this matter the choice is judicious. When Queen Victoria was on the throne it does not appear to have been her practice to worry much about the names of ships, but with King Edward this was changed, and although the Controller had a suggested list to the First Lord, his late Majesty took a decided interest in the matter.

"Seeing the close relationship in which Lord Fisher stood to the throne, doubtless his advice was taken. This was certainly so in the case of the Dreadnought. Considering his close association with the navy, it would have been surprising if King George had not followed his father's example. His interest in naval traditions is also shown by the further selection of names like the Centurion, the Ajax and the Audacious for the three sister ships to the King George V., all these names having been borne by ships of mark in the service.

"In regard to cruisers, a new system was instituted some little time back, approximating to that which is a law in the United States. A territorial connection was set up, first with the counties and then with the principal towns. This has in late years been extended also to the colonies and oversea dominions. As in America, so here the localities honored have responded to the invitation, and have in nearly every case presented their namesakes afloat with some souvenir of the connection.

"Two of the cruisers now building for the colonies are to be named the Sydney and the Melbourne, and those about to be laid down for the imperial navy will be named after Chatham, Dublin, and Southampton. Many of these territorial names are not new to the navy, but they were first introduced to commemorate people of distinction and title.

"It is, however, in regard to small craft that greater diversity of opinion prevails. Objections and protests are constantly made to the use of such names as Dove, Violet, Stag, Zephyr and Grasshopper for fighting ships, especially as they have no connection with maritime affairs or the navy. The suggestion has been made more than once to substitute for these botanical, zoological and entomological names those of naval officers who have distinguished themselves by gallantry in action.

"The proposal to commemorate the names of officers below those of flag rank who have lost their lives in the face of the enemy, is said to have been favored by King George, but upon what authority the statement is made is not known. In a navy like that of Great Britain custom and tradition stand for a great deal, and there is no sign at present that this change will be made."

Origin of the Cannon.

It is a curious fact that the first cannon was cast at Venice. It was called a "bombard" and was invented and employed by Gen. Pisani in a war against the Genoese. The original bombard, which bears the date of 1380, is still preserved and stands at the foot of Pisani's statue at the arsenal. The bombard threw a stone 100 pounds in weight, but another Venetian general, Francisco Barde, improved it until he was able to handle a charge of rock and bowlders weighing 3,000 pounds. It proved disastrous to him, however, for one day during the siege of Zara while he was operating his terrible engine he was hurled by it over the walls and instantly killed.

WASHING FURNITURE.

Easy to Restore Tarnished Pieces to Original Freshness.

"Very few people know that furniture ought to be washed," said a salesman in the furniture section of a large department store. "Yet," he continued, "it is the best thing one can do to keep furniture looking as well as it should. One should take a bucket of tepid rainwater and make a suds with a good pure soap. Then with a soft piece of cheesecloth all the woodwork should be washed. It is astonishing how much dirt will come off. A second piece of cheesecloth should be wrung dry out of hot water. On this should be poured a tablespoon of first class furniture polish. The heat will spread the polish through the cloth. Next the furniture should be gone over with the second cloth. There will be no need of putting on more polish, for that much will do all one needs. Too many persons make the mistake of using too much polish and leaving it thick on the furniture, where it looks dauby and where it gathers more dirt."

There is furniture in homes today that is cast off because of its appearance when it might be brought back to its original freshness by this simple process of washing. Many persons do not know that a fine bit of mahogany is improved by careful washing, and hundreds of pianos have never been more than dusted in years. A square of cheesecloth for the washing and another for the polishing will do the work, and the result will well repay the effort.—Indianapolis News.

HOT DRINKS.

If Taken Above 130 Degrees They Injure the Stomach.

Many people without realising it are in the habit of drinking tea at much too high a temperature, Sir Henry Thompson points out in his book on "Diet In Relation to Age and Activity."

"Few persons are aware that they habitually swallow hot liquids, tea especially, at a temperature which if applied to the hands or feet would inflict painful scalds. Most tea drinkers take it about 140 to 145 degrees F., which the mouth bears very well if slowly sipped, while the cup itself is too hot to be held by any hand.

"But the habit of swallowing such tea is injurious to the stomach, and it ought not to be taken above 130 degrees or so. Again, water at 120 degrees, which feels a little more than lukewarm in the mouth, causes severe pain if the hand is dipped in it and cannot be endured."

He has, however, some good words to say for the early morning tea.

"This morning tea in any case should be taken at least an hour and a half before the first meal of the day. For many years I have been accustomed to write for an hour every morning in bed after tea, as I am doing at this moment, and at no time do I find the brain clearer for work, while the appetite for solid food is excellent when the hour for breakfast arrives."

Trudging For the Wash.

The Portuguese country people as a usual thing have great physical endurance, doubtless as a result of the "survival of the fittest" for many generations. The laundry workers are an example of this. People come in from long distances to get soiled clothes of city customers. The clothes will be placed in big panniers on the family donkey, and the peasants will start back late in the afternoon. Some of them will travel all night, and it will be sunup before they reach their homes, many miles from Lisbon or Oporto. A day or two later they are trudging back to deliver the clothes, now spotlessly clean, and to get another lot from the same patron. Many a countryman and his wife take a jaunt of fifteen miles or more, which makes one think that there might be many who could rival the feats of Weston and O'Leary as walkers if they tried.—Christian Herald.

An Early "Trust."

As an example of trusts and monopolies prevalent even in that early day it may be mentioned that in 1750 one Benjamin Crabb obtained the exclusive right to make sperm candles in Massachusetts for fourteen years. A year later, however, a factory was started in Providence, R. I., and within the decade there were eight factories in New England and one in Philadelphia. Their output greatly reduced the price of candles, which not long before sold for 5 shillings a pound. In those days $1.25 was worth fully three times as much as it is now.—N. Hudson Moore in Designer.

The Sixteenth Century Critic.

"But why, prithee," contended the first critic, "should this new playwright, Shixpur, have introduced a comic gravedigging scene into his tragedy, perdie?"

"'Tis easy of solution, by ben," answered the second critic. "Our author hath put in gravediggers for the purpose of unearthing a plot! Boy, a cup of sack!"

Wit was crude in them days.—Cleveland Leader.

A RECORD FALL.

It Was Remarkable Not For Distance, but For Results.

Writing in 1841 of a fall from an immense altitude which did not result in death, a French observer, M. Mansini, declares that he had searched in vain in the annals of science for a similar case. We can well believe it.

The victim or patient was a tapissier who had been engaged in putting up decorations on the occasion of the belated obsequies of Napoleon the Great in the lofty dome of the Church of the Invalides in Paris. When busy moving a ladder on the top of a high scaffolding he overbalanced himself and, in obedience to some obscure instinct, jumped clear of the ladder and the platform, crying to his fellow workmen as only a Frenchman would, "Behold me quit!" With these cheerful words on his lips he fell eighty-two feet, bounding in one place off the roof of a little dome, which caused him to describe a second parabola in the air, and landing finally, feet first, on the slate roof of a small sacristy.

Crashing through the slates, he landed astride a rafter, where he was found sitting, surprised but coherent, for he was able to give his name and address when asked for them. He had no recollection of this and became unconscious when put to bed shortly afterward under the care of the great Pasquier. His insensibility lasted a very short time, however, and he made an extraordinary rapid recovery, having sustained no apparent injuries, either external or internal. At the end of a month Pasquier found him quite well.—London Lancet.

THE SQUAW'S SHAWL.

It Must Be Just So to Suit Her Fastidious Taste.

The Indian wears his blanket on the hottest summer days. His theory is that if it keeps out the cold in winter it will keep out the heat in summer, says Ben M. Myers of Oklahoma City.

While he might not care to buy anything else expensive, the price of a suitable blanket is never questioned, but it would be difficult indeed to deceive him as to the texture of any robe.

"A squaw will imitate almost anything that pleases her fancy, but in the matter of her blanket or shawl she exhibits an unusual amount of individuality. With great care and patience she designs her blanket, and when she places the order with the mill man he does not dare duplicate it until she has had an opportunity to wear it.

"If she makes the request that it shall not be duplicated her wishes are regarded, because it is the one article she possesses in which exclusiveness is much coveted and also because what would please one squaw would not appear at all attractive to another.

"The lightweight shawl or blanket is thrown over the head of the squaw, and unless she is able to purchase a bright colored silk kerchief it will serve as her only bonnet as well. It is just as common a sight now to see the papoose securely bound on the back of its mother by a portion of her blanket as it used to be to see the wee head of the Indian babe peeping from the tekas, or frame cradle."—Washington Herald.

Confidence in the Mails.

Having sent a strong box key by mail in an unregistered letter, a clerk was told by his employer that the key "arrived O. K.," but that the means of transportation adopted showed too much confidence. In answer the clerk said, "Ever since a New Year's eve incident of two years' standing my confidence in the postoffice is great." And pressed for an explanation he said: "That evening, or early in the morning rather, a man came out of a restaurant rather the worse for celebrating. He had a wallet in his pocket containing considerable money and was uncertain as to the honesty of his companions. He went to a letter box, forced the wallet through the slot and continued to make a night of it. It required considerable red tape to recover his property, but he got it."—New York Tribune.

Interested.

"What did the rhinoceros do when you fired at him?" asked the eager listener.

"He just stood still and watched me run."—Washington Star.

A great stir in the grocery business is being caused at the present time by the prices quoted by J. T. Braund who is introducing the cash system in his store. Mr. Braund has published a list in the Examiner and big savings can be made in the grocery order for your home if you read this list and act on it. Here is an instance of some of the values Braund is giving in Sugar: 23 lbs. PRAISE FOR BARBARA TENNANT

MONTREAL, FEB. 17.—Dr. Hermann Walter, the great European dramatic expert, who has spent over thirty years studying the drama and its influence, in criticizing Barbara Tennant for the New York press, said in part: "Miss Barbara Tennant's recital was a treat such as does not often fall to our lot* * * She is, without doubt, the most graceful actress seen here for many a day. Every movement, every gesture is a poem. Add this to an uncommonly sweet and flexible voice, perfect clearness of enunciation, and a remarkable versatility as shown in a programme ranging from Kipling's Gunga Din to the potion scene in Romeo and Juliet, and we have in Miss Tennant an actress of very unusual promise."

The above dispatch is praise indeed for Mrs. Wadley, for Dr. Walter is one of the keenest and hardest critics on this continent and though strictly just, many artists are afraid to run the gauntlet of his criticism.

POST CARD COLUMN

Eidtor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I wish to put in a card of thanks to a number of the citizens of Peterborough for their liberal response and assistance in helping me to get my artificial limb. Also the band boys and my comrades of the Salvation Army for their benefit concert, and to Mr. Edwards of the Crystal for the afternoon entertainment benefit he gave me.

Yours humbly,
M. H SPENCELEY.

Re Exhibition Grounds.

I am decidedly opposed to obstructing the natural growth of the city by retaining the grounds as at present. There are many equally good sites not more than half a mile further out, where double the land can be had for half the money. Adopt Mr. Crane's suggestion, secure options and then decide. The city's beauty and expansion should be considered before anything else.

THE INCOMING HORDE.

Queer People Finding Homes In the Big Cities.

"Canada for the Canadians" may be an excellent slogan for political meetings, but perhaps "Canadians for Canada" should prove an even better rallying cry, whether we take it as a sermon in a nutshell on true patriotism and altruism, or apply it to the consideration of the mighty stream of immigrants pouring in at our gates. In these multitudes from east and west and south we are unquestionably getting population for our vast empty acres, but are we getting, at least potentially, "Canadians for Canada"? In our dealings with the newcomers are we taking pains to ensure that ultimately they shall be "Canadians for Canada," and not a more incoherent mob of alien peoples?

Everywhere throughout the Dominion, alike in east and west, this is the insistent problem of our time.

The big cities are face to face with the problem. They are fast becoming cosmopolitan—cities of little "foreign quarters," where immigrants of one race can cling together and retain for years their peculiar speech and customs, not at all to the advantage of the community as a whole. We of the English tongue feel mild curiosity, or perhaps a little repulsion, when we are jostled in streets and cars by people whose rapid speech is to our ears unmeaning, and, as a rule, we escape quickly from contact with them and leave them to struggle on as they can, making or marring this new country as may chance.

Unless our attention has been called especially to the foreigners, it is not easy to realize what multitudes of them have recently settled in our midst. Jews and Italians in Toronto, for instance, may be counted by thousands, and the group from the Balkan Peninsula (Turks, Roumanians, Servians, Bulgarians and Macedonians) numbers over fifteen hundred souls. They are chiefly of the peasant class, working as laborers, though amongst them have come a few tradesmen and a few students, who are attending various schools and colleges. The great majority are illiterate, and have been brought up in a religious and political atmosphere very different from our own. It is, therefore, no easy matter to bridge the dividing gulf between them and us, and at times these immigrants must suffer grievously from the effects on our ignorances and their own.

Some of the small houses on Eastern avenue are crowded with Macedonians, who work with pick and shovel till the frost forces them to be idle. Not all become destitute, but they live miserably. As many as seventy herd together in one small house, sleeping in rows on mattresses picked up from "the dump," cooking in the little yards on rude fireplaces built of loose bricks, tearing out the woodwork of the old houses when in desperate straits for fuel, but generally behaving themselves with due regard to law and order as represented in the person of a sympathetic and benevolently-disposed police officer on the beat, who listens patiently to their efforts at English and is at pains to pick up something of their tongues. Occasionally, when one of them is in luck's way, they get in a barrel of lager beer and try to forget their troubles in a carousal. At such times the whim may seize them to turn out from the suffocating, overcrowded houses into the clear, starlit night, and then, hand in hand, they will circle round like children in some strange dance of their far-distant native land, breaking the stillness with weird songs and the thumping of their heavy boots on the old wooden sidewalks. But two years ago the situation grew desperate. Helpless from their inability to communicate with those about them, work for them was not to be had, in a season when at the best there is little demand for unskilled labor, and at length the authorities deported a large number of them.

A Veteran Councillor.

Fitzroy Township, in Carleton County, claims the honor of having the oldest municipal servant in Canada from the point of service. The distinction belongs to Reeve Charles Mohr, who is just entering upon his 43rd year as a member of the County Council.

There was a time when "Charlie" Mohr, as his associates and intimates call him, had to battle for supremacy at the polls, but on account of his long record the electorate in Fitzroy deem it a privilege to return the veteran reeve by acclamation. There is occasional talk about opposition, but it is only in jest. Reeve Mohr has been so long in the saddle that no one dreams of contesting his election, and if they did the support accorded would scarcely make up a corporal's guard. The township takes more pride perhaps out of the reeve's record than Mr. Mohr himself.

No County Council session would be complete without the Fitzroy representative. His genial countenance and sterling character make his presence ever welcome. And when it comes to rules and regulations he is the authority of last resort. Despite his age, Reeve Mohr is one of the most active members of the council, and the warden's annual banquet never winds up without his participation in "Auld Lang Syne," no matter how late the hour.

For Heavy Eaters.

Domestic science seems to be coming to its own in the schools and colleges, but still some big husky men express a preference for the "old-fashioned home cooking." And it's incidents like the following that make them note for the new order in cooking: In a Western Ontario city a girl who was giving the city its first taste of domestic science teaching was very enthusiastic over her work in the schools. One evening she said to the group about the boarding-house table, "Usually I give the children half an egg each for cooking purposes. To-day I had only half the usual supply, but the children made the cutest little quarter-egg omelettes you could wish to see."

Advice.

"I never know how to act when I meet a baby. I always feel like a fool."

"All you have to do is to act the way you feel!"—Spokane Spokesman-Review.

No Decision.

She was a decided blend,
'Twas me she once confided,
But when I dared propose one day,
She never answered nay nor yea,
And I knew she was undecided.

BIG CONVENTION OPENS TO-MORROW
VISITORS ARE POURING INTO THE CITY

To-morrow Will See Six or Seven Hundred Delegates Here—Exhibition in the Armouries is Practically Completed.

TO-MORROW'S PROGRAMME

All roads are leading to Peterborough to-day. The big Ontario Hardware and Stove Dealers' Association Convention in the armouries opens to-morrow, and every train to-day is bringing its quota of manufacturers, travellers and retail hardware men. The reception committee appointed by the city council are meeting the trains as they arrive and the delegates are given a hearty welcome to Peterborough. To-morrow as the opening of the Convention, Mayor Morrow, on behalf of the citizens will tender a formal welcome, but to-day the greeting is as hearty, if not as dignified, as the official reception to-morrow. Judging by the way the delegates are pouring in on every train to-day, there will be a record attendance and to-morrow should see six or seven hundred visitors in the city. The exhibition at the armouries will be ready for the opening to-morrow and a glance through Exhibition Hall to-day leaves no doubt of the fact that the showing in all branches of the hardware business will be a magnificent one. The hall will present a most attractive appearance with its row after row of splendidly arranged and decorated booths. With fifty firms exhibiting one can get some idea of the proportion of the Exhibition. To-day the exhibitors and their assistants are bustling around the armouries like a swarm of bees and there are no drones in the hive either. An Examiner reporter dropped into the hall this morning and found everybody working at top speed to get the booths in readiness for to-morrow morning. Truck load after truck load of hardware goods were arriving from the stations and as fast as they arrived the articles were hurried into their respective apartments. A number of the displays are already completed and by to-night all will be finished, although it means a vast amount of work for those in charge. Secretary Wrigley, of the Hardware Association has taken up his headquarters in the orderly room of the 24th Field Battery in the south-west corner of the armouries and is a very busy man to-day. There is no doubt that the Convention will be the most successful in the history of the Association, and the citizens of Peterborough are urged to do all in their power to make the visit of the hardware men enjoyable. That it will be profitable goes without saying, as the exhibition is of sufficient importance to guarantee this feature.

The programme for to-morrow will be as follows:

Distribution of badges and payment of dues at the Secretary's Office in the Armouries.

9 to 12 a.m.—Exhibition in the Armouries.

1.30 p.m.—Convention called to order by President Cinnamon in the Collegiate Hall, adjoining the Armouries. Address of welcome by Mayor Morrow. President's address. Secretary's report. Executive report. Appointment of committees. Fraternal greetings from S. H. Alexander and James Hardy, the president and secretary of the Canadian Wholesale Hardware Association; C. W. Kelly, president Ontario Retail Merchants' Association, Montreal; H. T. Kirk, representing the British Columbia Hardware Association; M. B. Peart, Regina, and representatives expected from Winnipeg, Alberta and Quebec.

4 to 5.30 p.m. — Travellers' hour, with talks on methods of salesmanship, the convention floor being thrown open to any manufacturer, jobber or traveller.

6 p.m.—Closing of the Hardware Window dressing competition in the windows of the Peterborough hardware stores.

7.30 to 10.30 p.m.—Band concert in the Armouries; open ot all persons wearing convention badges or association membership buttons.

By permission of Lt.-Col. Stevenson and the officers, the band of the 75th Regiment, under the direction of Mr. Gliddon, W.O., will play the following programme:

March—"The Bonnie Brier Bush"
Overture—"Guy Mannering"
Indian Intermezzo—"Valley Flower"
Cornet solo—"Lizzie" Polka
Band Sergt. Walter Hughes
American sketch — "Down by the Suwanee River"
Novelette—"The Whistler and His Dog"
Idyll—"The Forge in the Forest"
Highland Patrol—"Wee Rob. McGregor"
Burlesque—"The Village Band"

Synopsis—The Oniontown Band has been practising hard all winter and decides to give a concert. The eventful evening arrives; everyone feels himself an artist and determines to be heard. Result: A "howling" success.

MR. STRATTON MAKES EXPLICIT CONTRADICTION

To clear the air, so far as Peterborough citizens are concerned, and dispose of many rumours, it is felt desirable that Mr. Stratton should make a statement in regard to his relation to the case of Mr. Travers and the Farmers' Bank, with which his name has been so prominently associated, owing to his connection in the capacity of President, with The Trusts and Guarantee Company.

In this connection, Mr. Stratton makes the following statements:

"In no manner, shape or form, direct or indirect, had I anything to do, nor did I assist in doing, anything in any way in the promotion of the organization of the Farmers' Bank."

In no manner, shape or form, direct or indirect, had I anything to do, nor did I assist in doing anything, in any way in the promotion of the organization of the Farmers' Bank.

"In no manner, shape or form, had I any conversation with any of the Provisional or subsequent Directors of the Farmers' Bank, or in any connection with any other purpose of business of the Bank."

"I never directly, nor indirectly, at any time, from the commencement of the organization proceedings of the Farmers' Bank until the present moment, had any communication, direct or indirect, verbal or in writing, with the Hon. Mr. Fielding, Finance Minister, or with any member of the Government, or with any official or clerk of the Finance Department or any other Department in the matter of the obtaining of a license for the Farmers' Bank."

"I wish to most emphatically declare that the insinuations that are being circulated to the effect that I received a sum of money of any kind or amount, or anything equivalent to a sum of money, in connection with the organization of the Farmers' Bank are absolutely false, absolutely untrue, and absolutely unfounded."

Mr. Stratton adds:—

"I desire these statements to be understood as the absolute truth in the widest possible sense, without equivocation or reservation of any kind whatever; and no matter what gossip or statements may be made to the contrary by any body, the latter are untrue and as incapable of proof as the statements I make to the contrary, are incapable of disproof. No one should know this better than Mr. Travers, the General Manager of the Farmers' Bank, who on Friday in answer to the pointed question of Crown Attorney Corley—"had he paid any money to Mr. Stratton in connection with the promotion of the Farmers' Bank"—swore that he had not done so."

The only direct or indirect connection that Mr. Stratton can be said to have had with the Farmers' Bank was the purely technical connection, arising from the circumstance of his being President of The Trusts and Guarantee Comapny, which made Mr. Travers a loan in the regular way of business and through the usual officers of the Company, whose duty it is to act in such matters.

"I understand that Mr. Hughes-Charles wrote a letter about five years ago, that at a Sunday afternoon five o'clock tea at Mr. McAllister's, Peterborough, he had a conversation with me and that he understood from this conversation that I had advanced $80,000 to The Farmers' Bank at the time of its organization, upon which I received a substantial commission, and I am informed that Mr. Charles' evidence is wanted in Court in regard to the statements contained in the letter. I am entirely at a loss to understand what conversation could have taken place that would lead Mr. Charles to make such statements as the letter is said to contain; I feel this from the double fact that no such transaction as the commission referred to took place, as I had done nothing to earn such a commission, and it would seem to me to be folly to thus boast of an improper advantage I had not received. Another reason why Mr. Charles was manifestly mistaken was because the loan in question was not made by me but by the Trusts Company officers and the Company itself received the full advantage for whatever commission was paid."

"Business Men Not Best Judges Of What Is Good For Them" Says Herald

MONTREAL, FEB. 20.—Discussing the signing of an anti-reciprocity resolution by prominent business men and Liberals of Toronto, the Herald says the richer Torontonians of any political instinct became the more hardened becomes their Toryism. The fact remains that the business men of big Canadian cities have not shown themselves the best judges what is good for them in this particular, says the Herald.

Does Not Want To Give Fictitious Value To Matter

LONDON, FEB. 20.—With the statement that he didn't want to give ficticious value to Champ Clark's annexation utterances, Premier Asquith to-day declined to instruct Ambassador Bryce to question the United States Government about the matter.

"THE OLD HOMESTEAD" MADE A TREMENDOUS HIT

That favourite old play of rural life that has caused millions to laugh at its quaint humour, "The Old Homestead," was presented at the Grand, at matinee and evening performances on Saturday and pleased two large audiences, as nothing has done this season. Theatre-goers who have watched more modern productions through without convincing any emotion, were seen to wipe tears of laughter from their eyes as they followed the adventures of the character that Denman Thompson has made famous from one end of the continent to the other. Many people who saw William Lawrence in David Holcombe at the Grand a couple of seasons ago, expressed their desire to see him in the role of Joshua Whitcomb and this wish was realized Saturday. As was expected by those who admired his work in the production mentioned above, Mr Lawrence proved himself a worthy successor to Mr. Denman, and gave a magnificent characterization of the principal part of the delightful play. He made the part of Joshua Whitcombe at once realistic and humorous, true to life, and not over drawn in the least. His conception of that part was to show Joshua Whitcomb as a typical Yankee farmer, and he succeeds in carrying out his aim without making him the type of "Rube" that is caricatured in the comic supplements. His work is thoroughly finished and artistic, and backed up, as he is, by a magnificent company with complete scenic and property accessories, his production of "The Old Homestead" is a thing of joy. Not the least enjoyable feature was the singing of the "Old Homestead" double quartette, whose numbers were repeatedly encored. They contributed old favourites such as "The Old Oaken Bucket," interspersed with such popular songs of the day as "Good-bye, Betty Brown" and "Silver Bell." The audience could not get enough of their music. One of the company in the famous Grace Church scene, gives a magnificent rendition of "The Palms" with choral and organ accompaniment that is alone worth the price of admission. No more enjoyable or meritorious production has been seen here this season, and it will be welcome news to the merchants and clerks who were unable to attend on Saturday that arrangements have been made for the Company to repeat the performance at the Grand to-morrow night. The Examiner unhesitatingly endorses the production and advises everyone to see this production.

Why the Optical Institute Succeeds

There are Optometrists in Canada who do stronger business than ourselves. There are Optometrists and Opticians who do a smaller, but the Optometrist who does better work or gives better value has not pushed his head above the Optical Horizon. A strong statement to be sure, but when we point to twenty years of the best training and experience in both United States and Canada, and over 7000 persons helped to the best possible Eyesight are we not justly proud of our work? We are even adding to our facilities and studying the latest methods. This is why we succeed.

BRITAIN'S WHEAT IMPORTS.

There seems to be an impression in certain quarters that if Canadian wheat is diverted in any considerable quantity to the United States in the working out of the reciprocity agreement Great Britain will be in some way injured and may have to pay more for her wheat than she now does. As a matter of fact, explains the Globe, during the past five years Canada has sent the United Kingdom a little less than an eighth of its wheat supplies. Even the United States, which will ere long be a food-importing country on a large scale, has been a greater factor than Canada in feeding the people of Great Britain. Taking wheat and flour, the British Board of Trade figures give the following totals:

	From United States Cwts.	From Canada Cwts.
1905	6,539,000	6,618,000
1906	22,554,000	11,246,000
1907	19,946,000	13,221,000
1908	25,769,000	15,797,000
1909	15,504,000	16,616,000

It will be observed that in the year 1909 Canada sent a little over a sixth of Britain's wheat and flour, and the United Staes a little under a sixth. It is almost certain that from this time forward the wheat exports of the United States will decline steadily, while those of Canada will as steadily increase until the Dominion in the form of wheat or flour will contribute at least a third of Britain's total importation of breadstuffs. The fear that his great volume of eastbound grain will reach the seaboard through United States channels, instead of by Canadian railways and lake and ocean vessels is one that does not seem to be well founded. If rates are at all on an equality the St. Lawrence route will always command the bulk of the northwestern export wheat trade against the best efforts of New York or other Atlantic seaboard ports.

THE FLAG IS STILL A-FLYING.

(Ottawa Free Press)

In these days when charges of disloyalty are made against the Canadian Government and the Canadian Liberal party because they have sought to secure better trade relations with their neighbours, it is refreshing to be told that, as a result of an order given by the Minister of Public Works, the Canadian flag will henceforth be flown every day in the year on every government building upon the borders of this country.

This means more than appears upon the surface. In years gone by, those who travelled the great lakes must have noticed that, upon the American side, there was a proof of the national entity in the shape of the flag. There may have been in Canada some officials who have, without orders, kept to flag flying every day in the year, but by Mr. Pugsleys' orders this habit has now become an order; and henceforth every government building on the border line between Canada and the United States and every government building at our seaports will fly the flag day by day.

What better answer could be given than this to the assertions that the policy of this government is one which will lead to absorption?

The custom of the daily display of the flag of the Empire to which we are all proud of belong, upon the municipal buildings of the Dominion of Canada, is due to the good citizenship of Mr. Fred Cook, an ex-mayor of Ottawa, who, during the time that he had control of the city hall, insisted that the Union Jack should fly here every day in the year (and it is a pretty poor, battered sample of the Jack which is flying there to-day). The suggestion of Mr. Cook was followed by the Hon. C. S. Hyman, then Minister of Public Works, who extended the number of days upon which the flag should be displayed.

The seed thus sown by Messrs. Cook and Hyman has taken many years to come to fruition, but the harvest has come at last; and hereafter, at every important point where Canada becomes in contact with outside countries, those who want to do business with us, will have to do business under the Canadian ensign, which means under the aegis of the Union Jack.

The flag still flies. The flag flies in more places to-day in Canada than it ever did before.

Why then should we be told that freer trade with our neighbours means our assimilation with them?

FULL STEAM AHEAD.

(Montreal Herald)

There appears to be no doubt that the people in what may be called the markets of the cities are in the main thoroughly pleased with the new tariff arrangement. From coast to coast with some rare exceptions of local interests, there is the uniform belief that the greater freedom to be afforded by the taking down of tariff barriers will conduce to an increase of prosperity, which means, in the city's view, an increase of purchasing power. Before long, no doubt, the cities, as the centres of industry and commerce, will be aware of the additional opportunitiy thus afforded. Mr. Warburton, who spoke for Prince Edward Island in the Commons debate, was quite clear that the farmers there would benefit by selling larger quantities of their farm products at better prices; in New Brunswick the expectation is the same; in Nova Scotia the same again, with the added prospect of a larger trade in fish; in Quebec, in Ontario, in the West there seems to be only one mind among farmers who do not specialize in fruit, and it may very well turn out that even their fears will fail of justification. A little larger farmers' profit means, in the aggregate, an immense addition to the volume of business to be done. This business will be done by manufacturers and merchants in Canadian cities, and the lion's share of it, as always, by those in Montreal.

There is no other conclusion to be reached, at least by anyone who believes Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Mr. Fielding, and Mr. Paterson when they say that it is the firm intention of the Government to cotinue the tariff on manufactures just as if the negotiations with the United States about natural products had ever taken place.

It would appear that there are some who decline to accept these assurances, and who hesitate about extending their plant with a view to taking advantage of the new opportunity. Well, it is a free country, and any one may esteem the word even of a responsible public man as he sees fit. But what we can be sure of is that if Mr. Smith may use his natural right to hold off, Mr. Jones, who believes Sir Wilfrid and Mr. Fielding, will be apt to jump in and endeavour to seize the new business. Whether we in the cities are going to prepare to take advantage of the openings or whether we are going ot neglect the opportunity, depends largely, therefore, upon whether Sir Wilfrid's and Mr. Fielding's positive statements are received with confidence or otherwise. When they come to face the situation in cold blood, as they must the day after the agreement is accepted, our manufacturers, who are shrewd men, can probably be depended upon to go forward like sensible people to take possession of the field that is opened to their effort. The attitude of the Government, for anyone with an open mind, is very easy to discern. Then men who have given Canada its first taste of tariff stability are not going to undo their work. Then men who said they would exlude manufacturers from the scope of the conference did exclude them. And the attitude of the Government to-day, outlined to the Herald and indeed to all who ask, is clear cut, positive and ought to be reassuring to even the most confirmed doubter:

"We mean what we say and have said; we mean to leave established Canadian industry free to take advantage to the full of the increased purchasing capacity which will result from this agreement; we contemplate no general revision of the tariff before 1917 and when that is made it will be, as in 1897 and in 1907, what the then situation of the country calls for; and if there are some who will not believe us when we say so, we are confident that there are many who do not believe us, and that the others will come to do so when they see their fears falsified by the event."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Government by Commission might not be good for Ottawa; but government by commission—as represented by the inefficiency culminating in a generous scourge of typhoid—is certainly bad for the Capital.

Mr. Foster's Erroneous Exaggerations

(Montreal Herald)

Mr. Foster tells the country that all possibility of Great Britain ever giving preferential tariff treatment to this country has been abolished by the reciprocity pact, because with free exchange between Canada and the United States there would be nothing to prevent the American producer from taking advantage of the preference in the British market, whic hwas never intended for him, and American goods would be "sluiced through Canada" into the rest of the Empire as entitled to Imperial privileges.

Now we have not, as Mr. Foster knows, been ardent advocates of the policy of asking the British consumer ot tax himself and to limit his sources of supply in the interests of Canada; but we revognize that if the British consumer should of his own free will decide to take such a course it would be well that Canada should be in a position to accept his generosity in the spirit in which it would be tendered. And therefore we are impelled to draw Mr. Foster's attention to the fact that the reciprocity pact does nothing of the knid. It is not in the slightest degree unusual for Nation A to enjoy privileges of entry for certain of its goods into the markets of Nation B, and yet at the same time to admit free into its own area the similar goods of Nation C notwithstanding that Nation B penalizes them if they are re-exported into her territory. That happened for a long time in the case of Canada's preference to Britain and surtax against Germany. Until Canada begun to take notice, it did result in some importation of German goods into the Dominion by way of Great Britain under false colours, which was checked as soon as it was discovered. It has happened in less marked degree in the case of every item of preference which we have granted ot Great Britain, for Great Britain is a free-trade country and has always admitted free the products which we taxed heavily if they came from other countries and lightly if they came from Britain; the exact situation which will exist as regards Canadian and American products in Great Britain if the latter country ever grants us a preference. The United States herself is prepared to admit free the products of Canada in a great many lines which Canada accepts free from various other countries, but it does not follow that the United States must also admit them free when produced in any other country than Canada. It is pretty well agreed that Canada will receive shipments of butter from New Zealand, on which there can be no duty by reason of our policy of extending the "most favoured nation" treatment to reciprocating British possessions; but Mr Foster does not surely suppose that the United States will accept New Zealand butter just because it lands at Vancouver.

In such a situation, small deceptions are doubtless possible. Nobody bothered very much in the days of the surtax—and nobody bothers very much now, though there is still a substantial difference of duty—to ascertain whether a lot of a dozen pairs of braces, shipped from Liverpool, were made in Manchester or in Berlin. The customs regulations require that the shipper in England shall make declaration that the goods contain a certain percentage of English workmanship or value; that is the essential requirement of the preference. People who make a business of shipping goods do not to any great extent perjure themselves to obtain lower duty; if they did the whole protective system, of which Mr. Foster is so fond, would be at their mercy.

Should Great Britain ever grant a preference to Canadian wheat, the British customs regulation would naturally require that the Canadian exporter should make declaration that his shipment contained such and such an amount of Canadian-grown wheat; and in order to make that declaration the exporter would keep his Canadian-grown wheat separate. What more simple?

HAMPTON'S MAGAZINE RETRACTS

It is interesting to note the text of the retractions made by Hampton's Magazine and Cleveland Moffett, the writer of the unfounded charges in the February issue against the Standard Oil Company. These retractions came after the bringing of libel suits for $350,000 by the Company. The retractions follow:

Hampton's Magazine, 66 West 35th street, New York, Jan. 31, 1911—Standard Oil Company, 26 Broadway, New York.

Dear Sirs,—In the February issue of Hampton's Magazine, there was published an article, written by me, entitled, "Cassidy and the Food Poisoners." In that article I referred to the investigation of Mr. Cassidy, with respect to the manufcure and sale of impure candies in Philadelphia, and made the statement that your Company manufactured and sold impure material which went into these candies and that, when the various dealers were arrested and fined, at the instance of Mr. Cassidy, your Company paid the fines.

Upon investigation, I have ascertained that your Company was in no way connected with the transacions referred to and I hasten to retract in the fullest manner all charges made against your Company and to express any sincerest regret that I should have fallen into this serious error.

Yours truly,
Cleveland Moffett.

Standard Oil Company, New York City, Jan. 31, 1911.

Dear Sirs,—Referring to the foregoing letter of Mr. Cleveland Moffett to you, we beg to state that we are convinced that Mr. Moffett was in error in his statements with reference to your Company. We greatly regret that this error should have been made. It is the desire of Hampton's Magazine to be accurate and fair in all things. In our March number we will publish this letter and the foregoing letter of Mr. Moffett.

Yours truly,
Benj. B. Hampton,
President, Broadway Magazine, Inc.

POLICE COURT

Three local men were fined $2.00 a piece in the Police Court this morning for being drunk and disorderly on the streets on Saturday night. The fines were paid. One of the men had a marvellous escape. He was found on the Hunter street bridge, hanging over the railing, and had it not been for the quick action of a passerby he would have fallen into the river, and eventually been drowned.

POST CARD COLUMN

Editor Examiner:

The same Higher Criticism, so-called, that declares that Genesis is largely myth, fable and legend, that there was no Adam and Eve; no Cain or Abel, no Enoch, no Noah, or flood, no Abraham, that the book of Daniel, Esther and Jonah are religious romances, the same Criticism I see also declares that the old book is largely a mass of mistakes, of very bad form, caused by careless writers who had no "passion for accuracy," who did not stick to the facts, etc, etc. But as these same teachers of the higher criticism confess that over their findings everlasting uncertainty must always be written, their testimony against the integrity and credibility of our English Bible must be ruled out of court. Let a witness go before a judge and jury and give his evidence in minute detail. The judge cross questions said witness, and says, "You are aware that every detail of your evidence is according to facts." The witness answers, "My lord, over many of the details of my evidence that I have just given to the court, there is of course much uncertainty in the very nature of the case; it must probably always be so." Any just judge would immediately silence such witness and absolutely refuse and reject his testimony as evidence on the case. Yet people who profess to be sensible are accepting the testimony of these critical analysts of God's word (the Higher Critics) who have come forward in these last days to give evidence against the credibility of the sacred scriptures as found written in our English Bible, who in their evidence have confessed that "over many of the details of the critical analysis there is of course much uncertainty. In the very nature of the case it must probably always be so." Prof. Jackson's book, page 22. The people are the judges on this question.

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN

Two Secrets Told.

When Ernesta Frost, clinging to Gordon's arm, started to cross Madison Square after her visit to an office building on Twenty-third street, her face was breathed in smiles. For the first time in many hours the girl had a feeling of complete happiness. The terrible strain was over; the strain not only of having to perform a confidential mission of tremendous importance, but of keeping that mission secret from the man she loved.

In the next instant, however, the sight of the man sitting on a bench, his back toward them, leaning far over and reading a newspaper as though he saw something in it of vital interest to him, made her smile change to a look of horror. She drew back with a little gasp and her clutch on her companion's arm tightened for protection.

"What is it?" he asked.

"Oh, George," she cried; "let's hurry. Hurry!" And she tried to turn Gordon in the opposite direction. He was obstinate and stood his ground with the feeling that something had occurred to terrify Ernesta—that perhaps some man in the crowd had insulted her by a look, a word. He was ready to be her champion. "What is it? What is it?" he demanded.

"A man," she faltered. "He's been following me in Boston and—and he's involuntarily her eyes sought the direction of the offensive object. Sullivan, at that moment engaged in reading the astonishing dispatch from Graydon, Gordon took the direction from her gaze and strode with clenched fists toward the man whose back only he could see. Ernesta vainly tried to draw him back. She was dragged along by him. Then, as Gordon reached a point directly behind Sullivan, she cried, "Yes, that's the man!"

Gordon leaped forward, ready to punish the insolent person for whatever he might have done. Suddenly, as we have learned, his manner changed. His fists relaxed and his belligerent expression turned to one of abject fear. He recognised Sullivan as the mysterious stranger whom he had seen at the station in Graydon. He instantly connected him with the Hopkins matter, and leaped to the conclusion that what he had feared had come to pass. His disappearance from Graydon had pointed the finger of accusation at him, and they had sent this man to find him.

Gordon was not a coward, but he was panic-stricken. The most timid men walk to the gallows smilingly. The bravest cower and have to be dragged there. Gordon was no longer a man; he was a hunted criminal. His one idea was to escape. He grasped Ernesta by the wrist and fled.

A few blocks up the avenue it came to him that if they could distance Sullivan, whom he was following them, they could catch the next train for Boston, where they would be safe from discovery. When Sullivan's suspicions was lulled by the disappearance of Gordon he hoped for joy. He did not look back again, believing that he and Ernesta were safe. To his dismay, as he left the ticket window, he saw the detective coming in at the side door of the station. Gordon made a wild rush, dragging the protesting girl with him, across the waiting-room and through the door. Sullivan was a leap in the rear. Then, with the realization that the detective would certainly overhaul him, Gordon stopped short, waited for the pursuer to reach him, and launched the blow that sent Sullivan sprawling on the floor.

Ernesta uttered a shriek and fell in a faint. Gordon turned from the detective to her, and caught her or she would have fallen to the ground. He bent over her, forgetful of all else, calling on her to speak to him. A porter brought water and dashed it in her face. At last she opened her eyes, and Gordon cried:

"Come, come! The train! We must get it!"

He lifted her to her feet; she tried swaying, to walk, and they reached the gate. It was closed.

"Too late," said the guard unfeelingly. "The fellow you knocked down caught it—but you've lost it."

Gordon was quick to act. He led Ernesta through the curious crowd that had assembled, to the street. A willing cab driver took them in and whirled away with them. Gordon sitting back limp, Ernesta in a tremor of astonishment. At last she found her voice and asked:

"George, George! What does it all mean? Who was he? Where are we going?"

He gave no reply, and she shook him by the arm. This awoke him, and he signalled the driver.

"City Hall," he said. Then, turning to Ernesta, he said: "We are going to get married."

"Married!" she repeated, with a gasp and a blush.

"Yes," said Gordon, "because I want to tell you all, and I want you to tell me all. And it can't be told until we are man and wife."

The law had not yet been passed requiring an intended bride and groom to obtain a marriage license in advance in New York city. Gordon and Ernesta, therefore, were standing in front of an alderman, hands clasped mechanically replying to formal questions that made them one, in less than half an hour from the time they had left the station. They kept the cabman waiting, and, on coming out, they again were driven off. Then, and only then, did Gordon come fully to his senses. He turned to Ernesta, drew her to him, and kissed her fondly.

There was a moment of silence, each communing with their own thoughts.

"Ernesta," said Gordon soberly, "how much do you love me?"

The intensity of his tone bespoke great anxiety of mind. It told some thing even to his unsuspecting bride of the internal torment from which he was suffering.

"Why, George, dear," she said, studying his face for some clue to his reason for asking the question, "I love you with all my heart and soul. I've given myself to you. I've married you. What greater proof of her love can a woman give than that?"

She laid her hand gently on his arm and looked into his troubled face, the love-light shining from her eyes.

"Isn't that enough, George, dear?" she questioned.

"But—but—" he spoke with effort.

"But what?" she asked anxiously.

"If I was accused of something," said Gordon hesitatingly, "of something terrible, would you still love and trust me?"

"Of course I would," replied the bride with prompt assurance. "And I'd believe in you too. I'd know it couldn't be true."

"But if it was true?"

Ernesta looked at him, studying her own heart before she replied. It was with an effort that Gordon met her eyes; but meet them he did.

"I know," she said with the solemnity of conviction, "that the man I love, the only man I ever have loved, the man I have married, has a clean soul. I know that he is an honest, honourable man. I just know that he could do nothing shameful, nothing disgraceful, nothing in the least wrong."

Oh, how hard she was making it for her husband to confess. He wanted to tell her everything, to describe in detail all the strange events that had preceded his departure from Graydon, but how could he now. He felt that it was beyond his strength to say the words that must inevitably shatter her faith and belief in him. He essayed a new beginning.

"But suppose your husband had been very foolish, suppose appearances were very much against him, suppose his great love for you had led him to do indiscreet things, had led him into circumstances that made him seem guilty, that almost made him feel guilty, suppose he should be arrested and sent to prison—"

Ernesta clutched his arm. He could feel her little hand trembling on his sleeve. Was it fear?

"Stop, George," she said firmly. "When I married you a few minutes ago, I married you for better or worse. It doesn't make any difference what you are accused of. No,"—her voice rang out with passionate defiance—"it doesn't make any difference what you are guilty of; I tell you that I love you and that I will love you so long as I have life. Our two lives are one from now on for ever. Whatever it is, I'll love you just the same, but tell me, what is it."

Still Gordon hesitated. He was trying to frame his confession in words that would make the shock to the woman he loved as light as possible.

"Since Professor Hopkins died—"

"What!" exclaimed the startled Ernesta. "Is Professor Hopkins dead? When did he die? Why didn't you tell me about it before? Oh, it's terrible, terrible—just at this time, too. Tell me all about it. What did he die of? Was it very sudden? What killed him?"

"That's just it," said Gordon. "I don't know. Nobody knows. It is a mystery."

All that he had said before came back to Ernesta now with new meaning and with it came still deeper perplexity as to his strange demeanour. In what possible way could her husband be concerned in Professor Hopkins' death. She must hear all the facts and meanwhile try to keep her thoughts collected. She must not give way to the grief she naturally felt for the brilliant old scientist with whom she had been so closely associated for the last four years.

BLOOD BAD IN THE WINTER

Indoor Life, Too Little Exercise, Breathing Impure Air, Eating Artificial Foods.

Is it any wonder that the system becomes poisoned with impure waste matter in the winter time, when you think of the artificial life we lead?

With doors and windows tight shut we breathe the same air over and over again until it is incapable of purifying the blood.

In vain effort to cast the poisons out of the system the liver and kidneys are worked over time until they too are played out. Then comes the pains in the back, the headaches, the attacks of constipation and indigestion.

The quickest and most certain way to overcome this condition is by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They act definitely and directly on the liver and kidneys, awaken them to renew energy in filtering poisons from the bowels and remove the cause of indigestion, backache and other body pains.

You are not experimenting when you use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They are unique in their combined action on the liver and kidneys and for this reason stand without a rival as a means of purifying the blood and cleansing the filtering and digestive systems.

PEOPLE'S PULPIT.

Sermon by CHARLES T. RUSSELL Pastor Brooklyn Tabernacle.

Old Fashioned Revival Wanted in Wall Street

Wall Street Journal's Appeal Viewed by Pastor Russell.

Pittsburg, Pa., Feb. 19.—Pastor Russell of Brooklyn Tabernacle gave two interesting discourses here to-day to large and appreciative audiences. We report one of these from the text, "Righteousness Exalteth a Nation; But Sin is a Reproach to any People" (Proverbs xiv, 34). The speaker said:

Many besides myself surely were astonished to read the following extract from the Wall Street Journal, under the caption, "What America Needs":

"What America needs more than railway extension and western irrigation, and a bigger wheat crop, and a merchant marine, and a new navy, is a revival of piety, the kind father and mother used to have—piety that counted it good business to stop for daily family prayers before breakfast, right in the middle of harvest; that quit field work a half hour earlier Thursday night, so as to get the chores done and go to prayer-meeting. That's what we need now to clean the country of filth, of graft, and of greed, petty and big, of worship of fine houses and big lands, and high office and grand social functions."

This reached the eye of Bishop Candler, whose comment is so appropriate that I cannot do better than quote it here:—

"This editor is right in calling us back to more earnest forms of life than all these things involved. He wants religion in the home; he calls for lines of prayer; he insists that we need the most earnest type of religion to save the country from moral wreck. And he is right. But can we get that sort of religion under the spur of the motive to which he appeals? Hardly.

"We cannot get a revival of religion by seeking a revival of religion. Nowhere in God's Word are men admonished to seek religion or to seek a revival of religion. They are always urged to seek God. All the revivals of religion which have blessed the world in the history of the past have come when men have undertaken to seek God. None have ever come otherwise. We cannot deify even a revival of religion. God must be the supreme object of our love and desire.

"Herein is our trouble—we have lost God. Men called preachers have explained away the Word of God, making it no longer a sure word of prophecy, but an antique for the critics to analyze and discuss. The moral law has been lowered. The ten commandments have been reckoned as a piece of Mosaic plagiarism applicable to the moral needs of ancient nomads in the wilderness, but have no more than a qualified bearing on the life of today. The Sermon on the Mount has been treated as 'An iridescent dream.'

"The Lordship of Jesus Christ has been denied, while treacherous compliments have been poured out upon his name, as that of a great teacher and a noble martyr. His teachings have been defied or set aside wherever they have stood in the way of a rampant worldliness or an insurgent rationalism. The outcome of it all is that multiplied thousands have lost all knowledge of God in their souls. To all intents and purposes God is dead to them. They take no account of His will in any of their plans and doings, but live as if there were no God. They are atheists without taking the trouble to declare formally the atheism which they have inwardly accepted.

"The people must now be called to seek God. He is a real, living Person, and He will be found of those who sincerely seek Him. But He must be sought as the supreme need of the lives of men. He must be sought for His own sake. He will not be found of men who seek Him simply to remedy a bad commercial situation, or to cure social and political ills. He will not consent to be used as a sort of celestial and omniscient chief-of-police to help us suppress grafting and stealing and licentiousness.

"It is quite true that if all the people turned to God they would be turned away from every evil thing. But they will never turn to God until they feel that the worst disaster in life is that one should fail to know our Heavenly Father. They must be made to feel the sorrowfulness of the orphanage of the soul until, like the prodigal of the parable, they begin to say each within himself, 'I will arise and go to my Father.'

"We have had already too great a disposition to try to use God for all sorts of social ameliorations, moral reforms, and political renovations. It is time now we sought Him for Himself alone. It is time we began to cry with the Psalmist, 'Whom have I in heaven but Thee, and there is none upon earth that I desire beside Thee.' Then indeed we shall find Him, when our hearts pant for Him, as the hart panteth after the water-brooks."

The words of the Wall Street Journal respecting the need of the old-time religion are along proper lines. The Bishop sees clearly what I also have so frequently pointed out, namely, that the so-called New Theology, Higher Criticism and Evolution theory have so undermined faith that it would be folly to look for a return of the pious earnestness of the past, which was built upon a living faith, even though it was not the pure faith "once delivered unto the saints" (Jude 3).

We do not admit that none to-day are pious; that none are what St. Paul styled "sanctified in Christ Jesus" (I. Corinthians i, 2). We claim that there are as honest, as upright, as loyal children of God to-day as ever lived in the world. But they are few. The vast majority, under the false teaching mentioned by the Bishop, have utterly lost the "faith once delivered to the saints." The great majority of professed Christians are drifting. Long ago they gave up the creeds of the "dark ages," and, believing that the Bible taught the same things as the creeds, it also is being abandoned as too absurd for present-day intelligence. Higher Criticism (another name for infidelity and opposition to the Bible), Evolution, Christian Science, Theosophy and Atheism have swallowed up the majority of the intellectuals of the Churches, and the mediocre masses are rapidly following them into the outer darkness of unbelief and godlessness.

It is impossible for an honest man who has lost his faith in God, and in the Bible as the Word of God, to take a real heart-interest in prayer-meetings, in Bible study and in attempted holy living. He finds nothing substantial for his faith to rest upon. He seems to be a hypocrite. Hence the old-time religious life is not to be generally expected.

Modern revival methods (slangy talk, clownish actions and a pretense that rising to one's feet in a public assembly means Christian reconsecration and spirit-begetting) is too foolish for thinking people of the class represented by the Editor of the Wall Street Journal. It is not for us to say that absolutely nothing is accomplished, and that all fall away who, under excitement, stand up to be prayed for, or to indicate that they prefer to spend eternity in bliss rather than in torture. We do, however, mean to say that such persons are bewildered, if no worse, and a year after, we fear, are as bad or worse than the year before. This is because they are not really converted — because they have no real foundation for faith given them, and have no faith to put upon such a foundation. They are not even what St. Paul styles "Babes in Christ" (I. Corinthians iii, 1), for only the spirit-begotten belong to that class.

The revival really needed should not be looked for nor expected amongst worldly people. They have nothing of Christianity to revive. It should begin with Christians who have not yet lost all their faith in God and in the Bible. These should become awakened to the fact that spirituality and faith are at a low ebb. Their prayers should ascend to God, and their Bibles should be studied as never before. They should make use of present day helps in their Bible study and become fervent and revivified of spirit through a better understanding of the Scriptures. They must see that the Bible was not properly represented in the creeds of the past; that it is in direct opposition to many of the doctrines of the past which have justly become repulsive to intelligent minds.

When once they get the proper focus on God's Word, one passage illuminating another, their faith in God and in the Bible will become a living one, a moving one, and, with this spirit, faith and works will come—Christian zeal, fervency of spirit in the service of the Lord. With these in turn will come activities in helping one another, activities in family worship, in Bible classes, in prayer and testimony meetings, etc. Then, as the Master said, they will let their light shine and the worldly will see and be influenced by these living epistles, known and read of all (II. Corinthians iii, 2).

It is useless for any to attempt to believe, or to attempt to teach others that God is great, and just, and loving, while at the same time teaching that He prepared, before the foundation of the world, an immense torture chamber in which thousands of millions would be forced to spend eternity. How our forefathers could believe this and yet believe somehow or other that God is Love we do not understand. It was their faith in God's Love, and not their faith in eternal torment, which constituted the power of God working in them for good and which offset the errors of their creeds to a large degree. But no one of today who is at all awake can any longer think of worshipping a God inferior to himself. A God unjust and unloving, or unkind and powerless, can no longer be worshipped in spirit and in Truth.

What the world needs, and what first of all the Church needs, is to get doctrinally straight in respect to the Almighty's character, and in respect to His purposes for His human creatures. As soon as that condition of mind shall have been reached there will be no need to pray or ask for revivals of religion—they will follow irresistibly.

But what do we see opposing any such desirable denouement? We see two hundred thousand Protestant ministers and Sunday School superintendents working against such desirable results. We see about two-thirds of them advocating Higher Criticism-Infidelity and one-third of them striving to hold the people in ignorance respecting the teachings of the Bible concerning man's future—waiting, by inference at least, to uphold the atrocious doctrines of devils foisted upon God's people by the great Adversary during the "dark ages." It is a sad picture. Has it no silver lining?

There are still a saintly few in the world who are not bowing their knee to Baal, not worshipping the golden calf of mammon, not wandering, not seeking to prove that they are descendants of monkeys, not seeking to injure God out of creation and to say that nature is God. In this time, when others are going into outer darkness, these children of God, feeding upon His Word, are being blessed and refreshed in spirit as never before. To them God's Word is shining more brightly as the days go by; the rough places are becoming smooth and the dark places clear. To them the glory of the Divine character is being revealed. The secret of the Lord is with them. He is showing them His Covenant and making them to understand many of the deep things of His Word, which the natural eye has not seen nor the natural ear heard, neither have these things entered into the heart of the natural man — things which he hath in reservation for them that love Him.

These are now seeing that the Kingdom for which He taught us to pray is not a myth; these are seeing that it did not come at Pentecost, nor when Papacy was established, nor with the establishment of any of the sects of Christendom. Consequently they are now praying from the heart, "Thy Kingdom come," and waiting for the glorious Messiah, promised to begin His great work of blessing natural Israel and through Israel all the families of the earth (Acts xv, 14-17; Acts iii, 19-23).

These see that the Kingdom of God's dear Son is to be one of "power and great glory"; that before it, in a time of trouble, every other religion and influence will crumble to dust; that Satan shall be bound, and for a thousand years the most blessed influences favorable to righteousness will be brought to bear upon mankind.

During the "dark ages" the fact that the Church is a specially called, chosen, faithful class (and only "a little flock"), was seen and preached to some extent. But this lofty Church standard was difficult of application to the world, and the world's hope, under a different standard, was not seen. It clarifies our minds greatly when we recognize that the elect few are intended by God to be the world's instructors and helpers by and by, when the world will be granted an opportunity of rescue from sin and death—not to heavenly conditions, but to earthly Restitution of all that was lost by Adam's transgressions and Redeemed by the Great Sacrifice of Calvary (John iii, 16; Isaiah xxxv).

After learning that the hell to which the world goes in death is the grave, and that it is an unconscious condition, a "sleep," the next lesson is the resurrection of the dead—"Many that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, * * * some to shame and lasting contempt" (Daniel xii, 2). Mankind fall asleep with experiences only with unrighteousness and very indistinct glimpses of holiness and saintship. When awakened they will recognise the glory, honor and immortality of the saintly Bride of Christ and be recipients of her loving care and blessing, in proportion as they respond to the blessed privileges of that time. As the Restitution work will progress, and they obediently rise from their degradation, their shame and contempt will gradually disappear, and eventually perfection of human nature may be attained in an earth also attaining perfection, as the Garden of the Lord.

Intelligent people no longer believe the God-dishonoring doctrine of eternal torture, nor even the doctrine of purgatorial suffering. Having lost these, they are doubting every religious teaching. What they need to do is the Bible's presentations. They should see the "high calling" now extended to the faithful, saintly few and should sit down and count the cost before undertaking so great a contract as to become members of that Royal Priesthood.

If they do not accept this, the only call now extended, they should have in mind that there is a general Law of Retribution expressing expressed in the terms, "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." They should understand clearly that every thought and word and act of theirs will have to do with their future conduct and affect them more or less favorably in the resurrection, when Messiah's Kingdom will provide to every man a full, gracious opportunity of Restitution to human perfection in a world-wide Eden.

To the Kingdom of Messiah belongs the promise, "Righteousness exalted a nation." His will be a reign of righteousness, and, by Divine direction, will have control of the whole world for the uplifting of all mankind, Redeemed by the precious blood of Calvary. At present, in every kingdom under heaven we see exemplified the latter part of our text, "Sin is a disgrace to any people"—to the whole world. Let us accept the direction of God's Word and set our faces toward righteousness with greater zeal than ever—to attain Divine favor, either by the "high calling" of this present time or by the Millennial Restitution times soon to be ushered in (Acts iii, 19-23).

THOUGHT IT WAS CANCER

Cured By "Fruit-a-tives"

SYDNEY MINES, N.S., Jan. 25th, 1910.

"For many years, I suffered torture from Indigestion and Dyspepsia. Two years ago, I was so bad that I vomited food constantly and I lost 25 pounds in weight. I was afraid the disease was Cancer, but medicine gave only temporary relief.

I read about "Fruit-a-tives" and the cures this wonderful fruit medicine was making, and I decided to try it. After taking three boxes, I found a great change for the better and now I can say "Fruit-a-tives" has cured me when every other treatment failed and I reverently say "Thank God for 'Fruit-a-tives'."

FRASERVILLE

Examiner Special:

FRASERVILLE, FEB. 20.—Mr. H. Lachie spent a few days in Toronto this week.

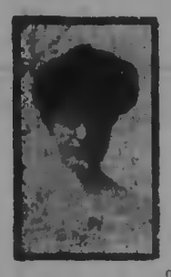
THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

IF all the young women in the Uited States would NOT ONLY ABSTAIN FROM SMOKING CIGARETTES THEMSELVES but would sign a pledge to keep others away from the habit, this country would, in one year, shoot ahead of other nations on progress and uplift."

Such is the statement of a Massachusetts woman in a Boston paper. The pledge she refers to runs—

"Making my own declaration of Independence from King Nicotine, I promise to use my influence to get others likewise to keep from smoking cigarettes or using tobacco in any form."



No, I am not going to join hands with the lady and plead with my girl readers to please, please try to break themselves of this terrible habit that threatens the progress of the country.

What I want us to protest against this and similar newspaper articles which give the impression that cigarette smoking is one of the habits of the average woman of America

How many women do you personally know who smoke cigarettes?

I don't mean by that, how many have you heard of or read about, but how many are there among your personal acquaintances who smoke?

You have heard it rumoured, perhaps, that the lady who lives in the big brown stone house smokes after dinner.

You have read doubtless that the daugher of one of our greatest politicians smokes openly.

You know a girl who knows an actress that smokes openly.

But, in your own acquaintance, do you really know an actress who smokes, not just once, on a tear, to be real devilish, but as a regular thing, smokes cigarettes?

Let me tell you something.

I have a decidedly wide and diverse acquaintance. It includes many newspaper women, who, as a class, have the reputation of being a trifle rapid. (It is undeserved i nthe main, but that's another story.) It also includes college girls, stenographers, society girls, artists, actresses, and in fact women in almost all walks of life, and yet I don't know one woman who has the cigarette habit.

That there are many women in America who do smoke I suppose must be true.

But they are not the middle class, not the people you and I know, not the average women of America.

They are simply members of the demi monde, the Bohemian class or the wrongly called "upper classes" of society.

Drinking cocktails, playing bridge day and night while their homes and babies suffer, smoking cigarettes—these are vices that according to much of our newspaper literature one would think, were the habitts of ordinary American women.

That they are not, you and I and all the other women who form the big middle class that is the backbone of the country know perfectly well.

Now, can't we frown—or better still laugh—this notion that American women as a class need reforming along these lines, right out of existence?

SPLENDID ADDRESS WAS GIVEN TO YOUNG MEN

Rev. J. R. Webb Tells Them That Men Are Growing Childish Over Sports—An Eloquent Sermon.

LARGE CONGREGATION

"And he entered again into the synagogue, and there was a man there, which had a withered hand. And they watched him, whether he would heal him on the Sabbath day that they might accuse him. And he said unto the man which had the withered hand, Stand forth. And He saith unto them, is it lawful to do good on the Sabbath days, or to do evil? to save life, or to kill? But they held their peace. And when He had looked around about on them in anger being grieved for the hardness of their hearts, He said unto the man, Stretch forth thine hand. And he stretched it out; and his hand was restored whole as the other."—3rd chapter, Mark, 1st to the 5th verses.

This was the text taken by Rev. Mr. Webb in his address to men at the Mutray street Baptist church last night.

"There is both a miracle and a parable in this text," said Mr. Webb. "There is not only a sign by Christ, but a sermon by Christ. Speaking of crippled men, Christ, says a man has two hands, because he needs two. Man has functions, which reach out in two directions ,because he needs to reach out in these directions. He has functions reaching upward and functions reaching downward. The hand for our necessity, and the hand for the needs of the family are amply used. There are few lazy men inthe world according to my opinion. There is no class of work more trying than that of the ministry. If a man provides for the requirements of his family he does well. If a man can serve his family and won't, no matter what his profession is, it counts for nothing. The man who lets the hand that reaches outward and upward, wither, is the lazy man. Men have left certain faculties, in connection with the bodies, useless, simply because they do not use them. The hand that reaches upward withers, because it is not used.

Man has powers to use his social and intellectual faculties. There is a fault in every man. The expression, "How much can I make?" explains it. Men exercise things that make the world, but the things God hath given him, they let wither. Wordsworth said "Plain living and high thinking are no more." The same thing can be said to-day. There never was a time in the world, when there was less worthy reading done, than there is at the present day. Men have become childish over sports. There are men who could not name the continents, who could tell all about the championships and leagues. They love sport for sports. They have sport for sport's sake. There is betting ,and it usually ends in a desire to get what belongs to the other man. A man in all his enjoyments should see to it, that he is not developing the animal in all its parts. There is nothing that will drive a man quicker from the church, than the idea that the church denies him the right to think for himself. The church has nothing to hide. It can let the intellect of any individual rest upon its foundations. Why does that man think that the church of Christ is not solid in its foundations? I beseech you as men, to exercise your mind. Let no professor think for you, nor priest, nor minister, but do not leave off thinking. We leave off too much of the social faculty. Some men die, if they live unto themselves, or some wake up when it is too late. They wake up when they cannot get the contribution from society that it owes. Men should go out and divulge in social intercourse, even outside the church, My life is not my own, but God's, who gave it.

Free If It Fails

Your Money Back if You Are Not Satisfied With the Medicine We Recommend

We are so positive that our remedy will permanently relieve constipation, no matter how chronic it may be, that we offer to furnish the medicine at our expense should it fail to produce satisfactory results.

It is worse than useless to attempt to cure constipation with cathartic drugs. Laxatives or cathartics do much harm. They cause a reaction, irritate and weaken the bowels and tend to make constipation more chronic. Besides, their use becomes a habit that is dangerous

Constipation is caused by a weakness of the nerves and muscles of the large intestine or descending colon. To expect permanent relief you must therefore tone up and strengthen these organs and restore them to healthier activity.

We want you to try Rexall Orderlies on our recommendation. They are exceedingly pleasant to take, being eaten like candy, and are ideal for children, delicate persons and old folks, as well as for the robust. They act directly on the nerves and muscles of the bowels. They apparently have a neutral action on other associate organs or glands. They do not purge, cause excessive looseness nor create any inconvenience whatever. They may be taken at any time, day or night. They will positively relieve chronic or habitual constipation, if not of surgical variety, and the myriads of associate or dependent chronic ailments, if taken with regularity for a reasonable length of time. 12 tablets, 10 cents; 36 tablets, 25 cents. Sold in Peterborough only at our store,—The Rexall Store, McDermid and Jury, corner George and Charlotte streets.

"A Wonderful Library" Was Subject Discussed By Goodfellowship League

The usual meeting of the Guild of Good Fellowship was held in the Princess Theatre yesterday afternoon. The Rev. C. Carpenter continued the subject of the previous Sunday, namely, "The Early History of the Bible and its Influence," dealing especially with the Biblical influence on the writings preceding the age of printing. Selections were read from the earliest Anglo-Saxon writing, which showed them to be permeated with the teaching of the Bible, although it is too often supposed that the Holy Scriptures at this time was an almost unknown factor. In spite of the low tone of education ,and the difficulties which the people lived under, the Bible, especially the gospel portion, was popularized by being versified by men like Caedmon and Orm.

Caedmon, who died about A.D. 680, composed many songs and poems on Bible history and religious subjects, some of which were very beautiful. In the first quarter of the 13th century, a monk named Orm, or Ormin, wrote about 10,000 lines of poetry, which consisted of paraphrases of the gospel. This contribution goes by the name of the Ormulum. His language is necessarily crude and quaint, but its influence upon the thought of the day was certainly extensive.

A selection was then read from the translation of a French poem given by Robert Manning, one of the "Rhyming Chroniclers" of the time of Edward II, showing its Biblical teaching and influence. The period of English Metrical Romance showed abundand evidence of a knowledge of the Bible, these poems being composed and recited by wandering poets to the accompaniment of the harp.

About the middle of the 13th century the writings contain greater moral lessons and more refinement and their denunciations of the loose morality of the age prepared the ground for the Reformers. Portions of the writings of Richard Rolle, a hermit of the time, and of the "Visions of Pierce Ploughman" were read, which showed deep knowledge of the Bible. Geoffrey Chaucer, "The Father of English Poetry" and the writer of the "Canterbury Tale" was next considered, and his works give a very accurate picture of the life of that age and show that the scriptures were fairly well known.

In the 15th century and early part of the 16th the Bible is constantly being drawn upon to show that the loose morality of the age was displeasing to the Almighty. With the introduction of printing the infancy of English literature may be said to cease and manhood begins. The dissemination of English scriptures gave a new direction to the thoughts of literary men and helped them by their illustrations and imagery as the old philosophers had been unable to.

The revival of learning and literature was at its height from the middle of Elizabeth's reign to the Restoration and practically every writer since has been indebted to the Bible for considerable help. Some men like Milton, Bunyan and Dante have almost confined their writings to Biblical subjects. While others such as Shakespeare, Bacon and Carlyle reveal their intimate knowledge of the Divine Library and use its illustrations and language without stint.

The influence of the Bible on modern literature was left for further consideration, but the lesson to be derived from the earlier stages was that the Bible had always exercised a restraining influence upon lax morality, a refining influence upon literature [illegible] creative influence in that it produced many of the best books of history. Take away the Divine Library from the world, and all that is lofty and inspiring in literature must soon disappear.

At the conclusion of the address a violin solo, "La Serenata" by Braga, was rendered by Mr. Alex. Cowie, and a vocal duet by Messrs. Greenslade and Gilbert entitled "Happy Day." The meeting was brought to a close with the usual devotional exercises.

ALBERT CHEVALIER IN "DADDY DUFARD"

Albert Chevalier is Coming to "The Grand" next Saturday, Feb. 25, Matinee and Night

To those who are keenly interested in theatrical affairs, Chevalier is known as one of the few truly great character actors of the generation, and his coming performance is one to be looked forward to with pleasant anticipation, and not to be missed under any circumstances. Chevalier achieved world wide renown by way of the London music halls. There his characterization gems in miniature, had much to do with the giving the London variety stage the reputation of being on a much higher artistic plane than the similar institutions on this continent. But Chevalier has not devoted himself to the music halls only. London knows him as about the finest Bill Sykes that ever appeared before it. Then Chevalier played the title role of Barrie's queer little playlet, "Pantaloon," which called forth some superb artistry from this superb actor. When Chevalier comes to the Grand it will be in a three act play. But there will be an opportunity to see him in one or two of his famous recitations, for in the last act which takes place on the stage of a London music hall, he will appear as himself for ten or fifteen minutes, during which a couple of his best known characterizations will be introduced. The play is called Daddy Dufard. He is part author thereof himself, his collaborator being Lechmere Worrall, an experienced English playwright who is also an actor, and who will also play in "Daddy Dufard." The title role, which of course, Chevalier will play excepting for a few minutes, when he appears as himself, is that of an old retired French actor, whose primary interest in life is the advancement of the career of his talented daughter. There are many interesting characters in Daddy Dufard. In fact the play is called a character comedy on the programme, and a list of the dramatic personae suggests a play something along the line of the "Music Master," only instead of characters in a Hueaton street boarding house, Daddy Dufard deals mainly with folk who belong to the other side of the footlight. Chevalier and his collaborator have given an idyllic yet veracious treatment to a phase of life they know well. Chevalier's support is splendid. It includes Miss Violet Heming, who created the title role in Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm, Leslie Kenyon, A. Hylton Allen, Horace Mitchell, Harry Brett, Frankie Raymond and Mary Parker.

CASE OF LIQUOR WAS STOLEN AT HAVELOCK

On or about the 6th of February a party or parties broke into a car on the C. P. R. siding, at Havelock, and stole a case of liquor. The information was laid by Mr. Victor Harshaw, and a warrant for the arrest of the party, or parties, was duly issued by Magistrate Edmison. The liquor has since been found, hidden in a remote part of the railway yards, but it was not in the case. The parties have, so far, escaped the law.

This morning a warrant was issued for the arrest of Wm. Sears, a Peterborough man, for stealing one pair of leggings, two pairs of socks, two plugs of tobacco and one pair of pinchers from one Silas Bullied, also a Peterborough man. The theft was committed at the home of Mr. Tulley, 3rd line of Smith. The two men had been employed taking out wood at the farm of Mr. Tulley, and on Saturday Sears disappeared and the before mentioned articles disappeared also, with the result stated. The arrest has not yet been made.

SENT IN FALSE ALARM BOY IS IN TROUBLE

Matter Has Been Placed in the Hands of the Chief of Police ---Fire Brigade Were Given a Wild Goose Chase on Saturday.

The Fire Department were called out on a wild goose chase on Saturday afternoon at three o'clock. A number of boys playing in the neighbourhood of Park and London streets saw smoke issuing from a chimney and they thought it would be fun to call out the fire brigade on the pretense of a chimney fire. They accordingly pulled Box 41. As soon as the cause of the alarm was learned, Chief Howard ordered the apparatus back to the station and he himself remained in the vicinity of the supposed fire to investigate. He learned from the three boys that Harold Lawrence was the probable offender.

The matter is now in the hands of the Chief of Police, and quite likely police court proceedings will follow. The penalty for such cases is a fine of $50 and costs or six months' imprisonment. There is also a reward given by the City Council of $50 to any person who will give the necessary information that will convict parties of this offence. Parents would do well to advise their children of the seriousness of sending in false alarms.

Sheriff Mowat And The Crown Attorney Responsible For Travers' Removal

TORONTO, FEB. 20.—Sheriff Mowat and County Crown Attorney Corley are alone responsible for the sudden removal of W. R. Travers to the Kingston Penitentiary on Saturday morning.

It was evident that the Crown Authorities at Toronto would have liked to have been able to place the responsibility upon the authorities at Ottawa, but such was not the case, as the Dominion Government are not responsible for a prisoner until such times as he is placed within the prison walls at Kingston.

It seems as if there were two factions among the Police Court authorities in Toronto, and things are not working very harmoniously underneath the surface.

There will not be the slightest difficulty in obtaining Mr. Travers for his examination, and it was a great disappointment to those connected with the case to have him removed so suddenly on Saturday morning, without any seeming cause or any advantage to be gained to any one. It was simply a mix-up among the Crown authorities.

Women's Art Association Holds Private View

The Peterborough branch of the Women's Art Association held their Private View for members and their friends on Saturday evening in the Public Library buildings of pictures, arts and crafts in connection with the third annual exhibition which commenced this afternoon. The lecture hall presented a very attractive appearance with pictures and textiles adorning the walls. A special feature was the showing of homespun curtains. There is a magnificent showing of oils and water colours, the majority of which come from Toronto and are the work of Toronto artists. The Peterborough artists who have contributed to the success of the exhibition by showing some of their work are Miss Hatton, Mrs. Travers, Mrs. Frederick and Miss Bennet, whose work has been greatly admired. The beautiful textile exhibition as well as the leather work and the hand made beaten silver necklaces, rings and bracelets were the subject of much favourable comment as were the homespuns made on hand looms by the women of Eastern Canada.

During the evening His Honour Judge Huycke gave an address in the course of which he made special mention of the plaster cast of Miss Wallis' statute, "Mercury Charmed by His Own Invention," presented to the city by the artist, and now on exhibition for the first time in the lecture hall of the library. The exhibition will be open from Monday until Thursday, afternoon and evening. It has been decided to issue passes to members of the association, giving them admission at any time without charge. There will be music by local talent on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings. A cup of tea will be served every afternoon, the hostesses to-morrow being Mrs. R. R. Hall and Mrs. A. Stevenson. To-day Mrs. (Dr.) Frederick and Mrs. Fred L. Roy are serving tea.

Chimes Fund Reaches A Total Of $5,500 Now

The cash receipts in Friday's paper in connection with the Chimes Fund were somewhat underestimated and the amount given should have been $5,483, which with additional subscriptions received since brings the total receipts up to $5,500, a most creditable sum. It is regrettable that the chimes are not in operation now as a welcome might have been tendered the visitors to the Hardware Convention. However, it is hoped to rectify this after. An out-of-town donation has been received from Mrs. H. B. Allen (Miss Ida Fair) of Millbrook. The clergy and others connected with chimes in other places have taken considerable interest in the chimes here, among them Rev. G. W. Wallace of Woodstock and Rev. D. R. Drummond, the well known minister of St. Paul's church, Hamilton, as well as his chime master, Mr. H. Cumming. They have kindly sent one of the books of tunes adapted for bells to Peterborough.

THE BADGE OF THE CONVENTION

One of the features of the Ontario Hardware and Stove Dealers' convention, which opens to-morrow that is sure to attract a very large amount of attention is the handsome official badge, which has been manufactured for the convention by the Gillette Safety Razor Company of Canada, Montreal, and which every member, associate member, and guest will wear. The accompanying cut gives a good idea of the unique nature of the 1911 badges, which will be eagerly prized by those who are fortunate enough to secure one. One of the principal features of the badge will be a fine quality rubber set Gillette shaving brush, which is detachable so that it can be used long after the Peterborough convention is a thing of the past. The badge is a demonstration of Gillette enterprise and has been greatly admired by all who have seen it. Members of the Association are wearing blue badges; exhibitors, red badges; associate members steel gray, and special guests, white. Each badge bears the name of the wearer, below which is suspended a bronze disc, bearing the name of the Association and carrying the brush.

OUT OF COMMISSION

The gates at the Grand Trunk crossing at Charlotte and Simcoe streets were out of commission this morning on account of the accumulation of ice in the works underground. As a result it was found necessary to resort to the old system of flagging. It will be found necessary to thaw the ice out by steam before the gates will again be ready for operation.

TO LECTURE HERE

The people of Murray street Baptist church have announced the coming to Peterborough of Rev. John McNeill, of Toronto, who will lecture in their church on Tuesday March 21st, his subject being "The Making of a Nation."

Various societies have at different times endeavoured to secure the services of Mr. McNeill, but hitherto it has been impossible to arrange.

The lecturer has more than a continental reputation and will doubtless be greeted by an audience that will fill the church. This is the lecture which was chosen as Canada's contribution to the World's Baptist Congress in Royal Albert Hall, London, England, in 1905.

MILITARY HAZING.

Carried to Brutal Extremes In German Army Schools.

CADETS MAIMED AND KILLED.

The Most Dangerous Punishment Meted Out to Erring Freshmen Is "the Gantlet of Fire," and the Most Repulsive Is "Bacon Swallowing."

Germany is, of all countries, the one in which the science of hazing in military schools has attained the greatest development. The army plays in the fatherland's life a part the importance of which can hardly be realized by an untraveled American. Military service is compulsory, and in time of peace 600,000 men are kept armed, uniformed and drilled. To command that huge contingent 80,000 commissioned officers are necessary.

This large officer corps has developed customs, ethics, even a morality, of its own. These customs and ethics are imitated at an early age by the boy who aspires to enjoy the veneration which German officers generally receive from the populace. Imitation in a young man usually means exaggeration, and some of the little military snobs are on their first day at school a joy to behold. Very soon, however, the precocious stiffness is taken out of them.

A harmless though repulsive form of hazing cadets whose appetite verges on gluttony is called "bacon swallowing." The plebes to be victimized are lined up on the grounds surrounded by a group of second year men. A slice of raw bacon is tied to a piece of string, and the plebe whose name is drawn first is made to swallow the unappetizing morsel. When the sickening sensation of the twine tickling his throat threatens to nauseate him the bacon is pulled out. The name of another unfortunate is drawn, and he is in turn obliged to swallow the bacon, the appearance of which has not been improved by the first man's chewing. On it goes along the line to the next man and up to the last one and for days and days the sight of bacon, a staple article in German cuisine, will, if it does not spoil the healthy youngsters' appetites, at least remind them that undue haste in assimilating food lacks refinement.

After a few hours spent in "frog's squat" the most dignified and snobbish plebes assume the good natured and perfectly chummy attitude which means that they have been tamed. Swelled heads are quickly noted and their owners made to sit on the floor with their chins resting on their knees and their ankles and wrists are bound together. A solid stick passed under the knee joints and forcing the fore arm back prevents them from moving arms or legs, and they are left there facing one another in an unnatural, cramped and ridiculous position.

Other forms of hazing are the stomach dance, with or without obstacles; finding the keyhole, tossing in a blanket and star gazing. In the stomach dance the cadet is put flat on his stomach on a high table and four tormenters take him by the hands and feet and whirl him around on the table. In the case of serious offenses a few hard objects or "obstacles" are scattered over the table, making the "dance" rather painful.

Then comes finding the keyhole. The cadet stands in front of a locker and is blindfolded. He has to feel for the keyhole with his forefinger. Then another cadet places his head between the locker and the finger, opens his mouth and bites the finger till its owner howls.

Star gazing consists in being made to watch the stars at night through a coat sleeve held like a telescope by two cadets. A third cadet then pours a glass of muddy water in at top of the sleeve.

When a cadet is guilty of behavior unbecoming to a gentleman, disgraces his class by some breach of etiquette or commits some petty theft he is generally sentenced by the "holy vehm," or "court of honor," to the rod. The penalty is applied ruthlessly, a gag being placed in the punished man's mouth to stifle his cries for help.

Of all the forms of hazing the most brutal perhaps is the "gantlet of fire." The freshman upon whom that punishment is to be visited is kept in a dark room astride a wooden chair, to which he is securely fastened. In the next room his tormentors are twisting newspapers into imitation torches, which at a given signal they light with matches. When the torches are burning brightly they form themselves in two lines; another signal is sounded, the door of the dark room is thrown open, and the freshman is ordered to ride between the lines, while he is mercilessly lashed with flaming brands.

However quickly he may run the gantlet, by the time he has reached the end of the blazing pathway his hair, his eyebrows and lashes have been singed to the skin, his eyelids are seared and swollen, his lips blistered, his uniform hopelessly damaged, one or the surgeons in attendance covers up the sores with bandages and sends the singed plebe to the infirmary for a couple of days. The official report mentions the explosion of an alcohol lamp or some other accident of like nature.

Not infrequently those "boyish pranks" have a tragic ending. More than once cadets have been crippled for life, and there are two cases on record where death was the direct result of horseplay carried too far.—New York Tribune.

Dresden China.

It is to Frederick Bottger, a native of Saxony—1682-1719—that we owe the secret of making china or porcelain. It was in 1710 that a lucky accident revealed to Bottger the true nature of the required paste. Having noticed the unusual weight of some hair powder, he inquired what it was made of and found that it was a finely powdered clay from Aue. He forthwith procured some of the clay, made vessels of it and, to his infinite delight, learned that he had at last found the very material he wanted. In a word, he had made the discovery of porcelain.

Precious Stones Found.

Passing along Constitution Hill, Birmingham, Eng., a Mrs. Evans picked up a leather wallet, which contained about thirty tiny packets, in each of which was a quantity of precious stones. She took them to her husband, who showed them to his employer, a jeweler. He valued the stones at about $8,500, some of them being very rare. The wallet, which is of the type usually carried by jewelers' travelers, was handed over to the police.

APATHY PREVAILS

Unionist Leaders Are Bowing to the Inevitable—Lloyd George Ordered by Doctors to Keep Quiet

HEALTH IS BAD

London, Feb. 20.—The main feature of the political situation is the apathy of the Opposition. The resistance to the Parliament bill will be strenuous, but there is no reasonable hope of prolonging the debate on the second reading beyond three days, nor of obstructing the passage of the measure through the committee stage for a longer period than ten days. The bill can be carried through the Commons early in May, without doubt, if the Government desires to take advantage of its new powers of naming the chairman of the committee. The lack of debating power on the Opposition side makes this an easy task without undue pressure of the guillotine.

The retention of the preamble may be regarded as a certainty and the introduction of the bill before the Lords before the coronation is also a foregone conclusion. The Lords cannot depend upon the King to extricate them from their critical position. They must fight their own battle, and they do not know how to meet the argument that the Parliament bill has received popular sanction and cannot be rejected.

The commonest quotation heard among the peers is the defiant exclamation of a belligerent duke: "Let five hundred puppets come. Four-fifths will be Tories within a year."

The most serious obstacle to the progress of the Ministerial plans is the condition of the Chancellor of the Exchequer's health. It has improved, but physicians have warned Mr. Lloyd-George that his voice must not be strained by persistent use, or he may be forced to retire from public life. The financial business is heavily in arrears, and the Chancellor alone can extricate the Treasury from the various complications and clear the ground for another instalment of the democratic politics outlined in the budget speech and for the introduction of disability pensions and a system of insurance against unemployment.

Otherwise, the Minister is in fine fighting form, and full of enthusiasm. Premier Asquith, by encouraging the rising men and distributing the labors of exposition and defence of the Liberal policies, has secured fresh supplies of debating power. Mr. Balfour has not brought forward any new debaters, and there is a dearth of ability in the front of the Opposition bench. The most serious complaint against the Unionist party organization is that the safe seats are taken by men who have money rather than talent, and that ambitious men of real ability are left to contest hopeless boroughs and are kept out of Parliament.

Sermon Was Prophetic.

Montreal, Feb. 20.—"When I saw Him I fell at His feet as one dead," from Revelations I., 17, was the text chosen by Rev. Dr. Mowatt, of Erskine Church for his sermon yesterday morning, the subject being "A Vision of Christ."

The choir was singing the introductory hymn to the sermon when members of the congregation noticed that their pastor was in distress. Willing arms bore him to the vestry, where he passed away immediately without recovering consciousness. Dr. Mowatt was 72 years of age, and had been in ill-health for some months. Two months ago he handed in his resignation, but was filling the pulpit pending the appointment of his successor. He came to Montreal from St. John, N.B., in 1890. Last night, Rev. Dr. Scott, who was assisting at the service in the morning, delivered the sermon Dr. Mowatt was to have preached to a tearful congregation.

A Tragic Sequel.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 20.—There is a tragic sequel to the conviction of the Count O'Brien de Lassy for the murder of Count Vassilli Bouturlin, for which crime he was sentenced to servitude for life. His wife, who was the sister of Count Vassilli, and the daughter of Gen. Bouturlin, has become insane.

Immediately after the verdict Countess de Lassy announced her intention of going to Siberia with her husband. Then she disappeared. She was recognized yesterday in a tram car by a lawyer engaged in the case. He detained her, and with the help of the police, took her to Gen. Bouturlin. Later an examination by physicians disclosed that she had lost her mind.

Reduced Salary by $10,000.

New York, Feb. 20.—A special cable from London to The Herald says: The salary of Dublin's lord mayor-elect, Mr John J. Farrell, a news dealer, was cut by the corporation on Saturday from $18,000 to $8,000 a year. Mr Farrell says he will close and lock the Mansion House, will give no entertainments and will live frugally in his modest suburban home.

Afloat on Ice.

Toronto, Feb. 20.—The heroism of a quick-witted young man named Cleveland prevented a double tragedy about one o'clock yesterday afternoon at Balmy Beach. Two young lads who had come up from Kew Beach were playing out on the ice off the Beach Club house, when a section broke off and floated out into the lake, bearing the two boys steadily away from shore.

Before Sherwood, the steward of the club house, could bring out a boat four young men started over the ice hummocks, bearing a canoe. Leaving the hummocks behind they got down on the dangerous puck ice and made their perilous way to the open water. At every step the ice was cracking beneath their feet, and at any moment they might have been precipitated into the icy water, but they heroically pushed on. By the time the open water was reached the floating floe, with its human freight, had drifted almost a half mile from the shore.

Leaving his three companions, Bert Cleveland, a young lad living at the corner of Birch and Lake Front, set out in the canoe to thread the maze of floating ice floes to their rescue. It was perilous work. Nowhere was there an open channel, and the heavy chunks of ice were battering the frail canoe from every side, but he heroically held to his task and brought them back in safety.

The names of the foolhardy boys were not ascertained.

RECIPROCITY MUST COME

Secretary Knox Says That it is Inevitable—An Extra Session Will be Needed, it is Likely

NEW SENATORS

Pittsburg, Feb. 20.—Secretary of State Knox, in an address at the Chamber of Commerce banquet here last night strongly advocated the passage of the Canadian reciprocity agreement, and deprecated the references that have been made to annexation. In part, Secretary Knox said:

"It is probably more true to-day than ever before that the sentiment and opinion in both countries is crystallized, so that the desires will lead to the most satisfactory relations between the two countries. Indeed, Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that the talk of the tendency as such a thing as this leading to the absorption of the Dominion of Canada is either very silly or very malicious. In the saner atmosphere and broader aspects of the situation, it is perfectly certain that if there should be a great world movement involving this continent, Canada and the United States would act in most perfect accord. Why should we not make an arrangement such as this? It is the march of progress. It is the inevitable. It may not be done to-day, this week, this year, or in this decade, but it is just as certain as the onward march of the Anglo-Saxon race.

May Need Extra Session.

Washington, Feb. 20.—An extra session of Congress looms very large and probable, unless President Taft and the friends of the Canadian reciprocity agreement are able to bring more than ordinary pressure to bear upon the Senate and accept the expenditure of any time whatever by the opponents of the agreement, or friends either, for that matter—it is difficult to see how the Senate can reach a vote on the subject before adjournment in two weeks time.

Ahead of the Canadian agreement for consideration by the Senate, in addition to ten general appropriation bills, are measures affecting the following subjects: Popular election of Senators; Senator Lorimer case; permanent tariff board; general age pensions; Congressional apportionment; fortification of Panama Canal.

Not one of these measures can be sidetracked without a contest. Back of each is a group of determined Senators insisting that a vote shall be taken before adjournment. Some of the measures must be left unpassed or the Canadian agreement will die. There is not time enough left for all.

So far as can be learned no Senator who has talked with President Taft has been commissioned to announce positively whether there will be an extra session in the event the Senate fails to vote on the Canadian agreement. The general opinion now seems to be that there will be an extra session, and the only Senators who are making preparations to go home after March 4 are those whose service expires on that date.

The retirement of these Senators, a number of whom have played important roles during the consideration of many tariff measures, will make quite a change, also in the political complexion of the Senate. All the states which are now in legislative deadlock over Senators to fill the vacancies at the end of the present session, the Senate, if called together to consider the Canadian agreement, will be composed of 50 Republicans and 42 Democrats.

The President believes that the Senate, as it will be constituted after March 4, would pass the bill.

The Senate committee on finance met Saturday and decided to give hearings on the McCall bill on Monday and Tuesday. On Wednesday the bill will be considered in executive session, and the concensus of opinion is that it will be reported to the Senate not later than Thursday.

There is no enthusiastic advocate for the McCall bill on the Republican side of the chamber. Some Democrat may come forward as its champion, but his efforts probably would prove ineffective.

Senator Makes Amendment.

Washington, Feb. 20.—Senator Jones of Washington Saturday presented an amendment to the Canadian reciprocity bill in the form of a substitute. The substitute would provide for the levying of such tariffs as are demanded by the necessary expenditures of the Government. While introduced "by request," Mr. Jones indicated that he was in favor of the proposition for the reason that the amendment would take the tariff out of politics.

Under the plan suggested, the Secretary of the Treasury at the close of the present fiscal year shall make an estimate of the amount of revenue "that should be raised from customs duties for the following fiscal year in order to meet the expenditures for that year and any deficiency of the previous year."

The Secretary also is directed to estimate the probable value of imports of articles on the dutiable list and determine what percentage the estimated revenues to be raised bears to the estimated value of the dutiable imports. It is further provided that there shall be collected for such year customs duties on all dutiable imports equal to such percentage of the value of same.

London, Feb. 20.—The Duke of Westminster is having a 15-metre racing autoboat, the Brunhilde, built at the Saunders Co.'s yards in East Cowes, which he believes will surpass the world's record, with a speed of 43 miles an hour.

WILL BE GOOD THING.

Son-In-Law of Earl Grey Sees Prosperity In Reciprocity.

Ottawa, Feb. 20.—That Canada has secured a good bargain in the reciprocity agreement with the United States and that it will stimulate rather than check the investment of British capital in the Dominion is the opinion of A. M. Grenfell, son-in-law of Earl Grey, member of the banking firm of Chaplin, Milne, Grenfell & Co., and chairman of the Canadian agency of one of the leading Canadian bond issuing houses in London.

In a cabled message which reached here yesterday, Mr. Grenfell is quoted as giving the following interview in regard to reciprocity:

"From my recent trip to Canada, I am convinced that Canadians fully realize the progress and prosperity that have accrued to Canadian manufacturing and agricultural industries from cheap money sent out at a rate of over $150,000,000 per annum by English investors. I am confident that the first thing taken into consideration by the Canadian Ministers would be whether the reciprocity arrangement with the United States might affect securities against which these large investments have been made.

"I believe it will prove of inestimable advantage to Canada. Great material benefits will be derived by the whole Dominion in both agricultural and manufacturing industries from the opening of American markets. The future prosperity of Canada must be largely based on the soundness of agriculture and the enhanced value of western farm lands that will result from reciprocity will mean greater security of English investors. The free and larger markets which reciprocity will open to the farmers of the west, will cause great demands for the products of the factories of the east. Canadian statesmen have taken advantage of the situation.

"It appears to me they have secured splendid terms for Canada in exchange for giving Americans what Americans could have taken for themselves at any time by simply lowering their own tariff wall without asking permission from Canada. Investors in England will speedily realize many trade advantages derived by Canada through the reciprocity agreement and will be more anxious to participate in opportunities offered by sound Canadian enterprises by investing their money at high rates of interest, while assisting in the development of the British Empire.

Two Men Badly Burned.

Toronto, Feb. 20.—George Cuff and Arthur Mitchell were very seriously burned by boiling tallow in the works of the Inter-urban Electric Co., 215 Mavety street, seventh ward, at 3 p.m. Saturday.

They were melting tallow in the cellar, and were lifting the pot out of the furnace with pinchers, when it dropped, sending a shower of scalding grease over them.

The superintendent sent a hurried call for aid to the "Junction" fire hall, and Firemen William Harsmith and Bert Spicer responded and effectively dressed the blistered men's injuries with bandages and oils, in accordance with the system inaugurated by Dr. Sheard last year, whereby every hose section is supplied with "first aid" appliances.

Dr. Gilmore later ordered the men removed to Englehart Hospital, where they were resting quietly, and will recover. He praised very highly the work of the firemen.

A New Phase.

Ottawa, Feb. 20.—The Long Sault dam proposition has assumed a new phase, which will be referred to in the Commons to-day by Mr. Borden. Lieut.-Governor Dix of New York State, has written Hon. W.F. Frye, chairman of the United States committee on commerce, stating that it his opinion the pending bill fails to cover properly the interests of navigation, and suggesting that before this action is taken by Congress there should be a survey of the channel and approval obtained from the Secretary of War and the Dominion.

They Want Our Lumber.

Boston, Feb. 20.—The Massachusetts Retail Lumber Dealers' Association placed itself on record Saturday as in favor of a Canadian reciprocity agreement. Four hundred members passed resolutions which, in part, declare: "We heartily approve of anything and everything that will tend to increase friendly and commercial relations with Canada."

Misunderstanding Caused Collision.

Pittsburg, Pa., Feb. 20.—Eight persons were seriously injured late on Saturday night when a passenger and freight train on the Charleroi division of the Pittsburg Railway Co. collided at Monongahela, Pa., near here. A misunderstanding of signals caused the accident.

Three Boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills Cured Her.

It is hard to do housework with a weak and aching back.

But they can't help it. If more work is put on them than they can stand it is not to be wondered they get out of order.

Weak back is simply a warning from the kidneys and should be attended to immediately so as to avoid years of terrible suffering from kidney trouble.

Mrs. N. Larmour, Smith's Falls, Ont., writes:—"I take pleasure in writing you stating the benefit I have received by using Doan's Kidney Pills. About a year ago I was terribly afflicted with lame back and was so bad I could not even sweep my own floor. I was advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills, which I did, and with the greatest benefit. I only used three boxes and I am as well as ever. I highly recommend these pills to any sufferer from lame back or kidney trouble."

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

C. G. E. TOOL ROOM WON A HARD GAME

Before a large and enthusiastic crowd of spectators the Canadian General Electric Company Tool-room team defeated the Office Staff of the same institution at Brock street rink on Saturday night by 2 goals to 0, and thereby practically cinched the championship of the Mercantile League. The ice was very heavy, being ankle deep in slush and good hockey was practically out of the question under the circumstances. At that the winners had a good deal the better of the argument and deserved to win out. It was as might have been expected, a close, hard-checking game, with combination not to be considered, and individual work a matter of great difficulty as it was almost impossible to carry the rubber through the slush. It was the fifth straight victory for the Tool Room bunch and they have succeeded in demonstrating their superiority on any old kind of going. The Office Staff gave them a hard battle for honours Saturday night, but they had the better of the work on the forward line and seemed to be able to bore in better. Fred McGrath made his first appearance for several years at right wing for the winners and was of a very valuable assistance, being indirectly responsible for their two counters. It was following a rush of his that Kenneally was enabled to score the first and the second was notched by Hall on a pass from McGrath. Hall and Kenneally were always in the limelight for the winners and Clancy, Elliott and Rush did good work for the office. Charlie Ray made a most satisfactory referee. The teams were as follows

Doctor Told Her She Did Not Have A Pint Of Good Blood In Her Body.

Mrs. Dosithe P. Cormier, Middle Sackville, N.B., says:

"In the spring of 1897 I was all run down, and the doctor told me I had not a pint of good blood in my body. I took different remedies from doctors, but they did not seem to do me any good. After having taken a lot of different other kinds of medicine, and they did not seem to benefit me, I was almost in despair and did not know what to do until my husband met a lady and told her about my sickness and she told him to try Burdock Blood Bitters as she had received the greatest benefit from using it. My husband went and bought me a bottle, and after having taken it I felt better, so I kept on using one bottle after another until I had taken six in all and then I was strong and well. I am positive that my being alive to-day is due to the use of Burdock Blood Bitters. One spring since then I was not feeling very well and had a lot of work to do. I thought I would procure a bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters and after I had taken two I was able to do a lot of hard work all the summer, and I never felt better in my life. In the winter of 1906 I had Pneumonia, and it left me with a severe pain in the left side. Every morning when I would get out of bed I had to sit down for a while it was so painful. After I had used Burdock Blood Bitters the pain disappeared completely. It has also cured me of bleeding piles. I have received so much benefit from Burdock Blood Bitters that you may publish this as it may help others as it has me."

MARKET REPORTS.

Liverpool Wheat Futures Close Lower, Chicago Higher—Live Stock —Latest Quotations.

LIVERPOOL, Feb. 18.—The weakness in America yesterday and the freer offers of American winter wheat caused some realizing here, and values were off ¼d to ⅜d. The general undertone was steady, with offers light, and, following opening, market firmed under fairly good buying. Support was induced by the expectations of lighter world's shipments on Monday. Fewer Plata offers, firmer Australian offers, and expectations of a large decrease in local stock here on Monday. The continent was a fair buyer of cargoes arriving. At the close the market was steady, ¼d to ⅜d lower than yesterday, with the principal pressure in July.

CHICAGO, Feb. 18.—Confronted by assertions that the quarantine against bubonic plague might put a stop to shipments from Russia, the wheat market today took an upward turn. Prices were a shade to ⅛c higher than twenty-four hours' previous. The outcome in corn was a net advance of ¼c, and for oats a gain of ⅛c to ¼c. Final changes left hog products within 2½c either way from last night's figures.

New C.N.R. Route.

Toronto, Feb. 20.—It is now rumored that the Canadian Northern Ontario Railway's line from Niagara to Ottawa will pass through Toronto north of the C.P.R. line.

The survey, it is said, leaves the right of way of the Niagara power line, west of the power house on Avenue road, extends eastward between the C.P.R. line and McPherson avenue, and swings northwesterly across the latter towards Cottingham street to a fine station, which it is said will be built on the south of that thoroughfare and a short distance west of Yonge street. It is stated that the C.N.R. through the Scarboro Securities Co. have bought all the land south of McPherson avenue, west of Avenue road and south of Cottingham street, east of Avenue road.

Beat Her to Death.

Montreal, Feb. 20.—Mrs. Thomas Waterhouse, whose husband beat her over the head with a baseball bat on Wednesday night because he said she was always belittling the children by his first wife, died in the general hospital on Saturday at noon, without regaining consciousness. After beating his wife, Waterhouse walked around to the police station and notified the police of what he had done, and expressed the opinion that he had made a good job of it. The police are of the opinion that he is mentally deranged. The couple came out from England about ten years ago.

Rector Is Upheld.

London, Feb. 20.—It is believed that the last has been heard of the efforts of a portion of St. John the Evangelist Church to secure the resignation of the rector, Rev. T. W. Hill, because of his action in dismissing his assistant, Prof. C. E. Jenkins.

Saturday afternoon a delegation of those desiring to oust Mr. Hill waited on Bishop William, and while none of those present would discuss what took place, it is claimed that his lordship took a strong hand in favor of the retention of the rector, holding that he acted entirely within the canons of the Anglican Church.

Will Investigate Plague.

London, Feb. 20.—Dr. Reginald Farrar, medical inspector of the local Government Board, who will start on Monday for Harbin to join the international plague commission, which is to advise China as to the best means of stemming the outbreak of the plague, thinks there is little danger of the disease spreading into western Europe.

Dr. Farrar was selected as the British representative in this mission because of his wide experience with the plague in India. He points out that the period of incubation is so brief and deaths follow so quickly, the danger of the disease of being carried long distances over the Siberian railway is materially less. The possibility of the epidemic getting a foothold in Great Britain, the physician declares to be negligible.

England has not declared a quarantine against Russia, but since the outbreak in Manchuria the usual precautions in the matter of examining the ships arriving from that quarter have been taken, resulting in the detection of two or three cases.

Cargo on Fire.

Newport News, Va., Feb. 20.—The steamship Sloterdijk of the Holland-American line reached this port yesterday from Rotterdam with the cargo in her forward hold on fire. Tug and fire engines were called and after streams had been played upon the burning cargo for hours, the flames were extinguished at 4.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The fire was discovered at one o'clock yesterday morning, though it might have been burning a long while before its discovery, as the hatches were tightly closed. The damage to the cargo has not been ascertained.

Blaze In C.P.R. Shops.

North Bay, Feb. 20.—Fire broke out at midnight Saturday in the C.P.R. car repair shops here, doing damage to the extent of $1,000. The town and company's fire brigades, after hard work, succeeded in preventing the spread of the flames to other branches of the company's works.

Ald. John McCallum, a member of the C.P.R. fire department, while working at the fire, fell and broke his leg.

Thirteen Firemen Overcome.

Chicago, Feb. 20.—Thirteen firemen were overcome by smoke in a fire in the Union Stock Yards on Saturday. While the fire itself was confined to the fourth floor of the building, fear that the blaze would be a repetition of the fire a month ago, in which 24 firemen met their death, caused the battalion chief to send in a general alarm and calls for special apparatus. The loss is $15,000.

Love's Young Dream.

Windsor, Feb. 20.—Harry Pembetter, aged 13, and Esther Kaechal, aged 14, of Wharton, Ohio, presented a properly signed marriage license to Rev. S. J. Allen, a Methodist clergyman Saturday night, and were married. The pair appeared the proper age, and Mr. Allen had no hesitancy in marrying them. To the license issuer, Mrs. Davidson, they gave their ages 17 and 19.

Their parents arrived here Sunday looking for them.

Smallpox at Lachine.

Montreal, Feb. 20.—Smallpox has broken out in the convent of St. Ann at Lachine, a suburb of Montreal. There are 275 pupils in the place, mostly from the United States and Western Canada. Rumor in the town placed the number of cases at seven or eight, but Dr. Valois, medical health officer, of Lachine, states that there is only one case of smallpox and three of chickenpox. A strict quarantine has been placed on the convent.

No Interference With Engineer.

Vancouver, Feb. 20.—The Vancouver Council yesterday decided to engage F. L. Fellowes, at present city engineer of Westmount, a suburb of Montreal, the agreement to cover a term of five years from May 1, 1911, with a guarantee of certain conditions and an annual salary of $8,000. The agreement stipulates that the supervising engineer shall have full control of the works department with power to engage and dismiss all members of his staff, who are not to be interfered with in any manner by the aldermen.

Bank of England Notes Defy Exact Reproduction.

About 1819 a great outcry was raised against the Bank of England for not adopting a style of note that could not be imitated, and at the same time preventing the sacrifice of life which at that period was common, the punishment for forgery being death. The subject at last became so pressing that the Government appointed commissioners to investigate the cause of the numerous forgeries, and whether a mode could be devised whereby the forging of bank notes might be prevented.

Previous to this investigation the directors of the bank had been endeavoring to remedy the evil, many plans having been submitted to them, all of which they were obliged to reject.

The bank placed before the commissioners 180 different projects that had been recommended for adoption and seventy varieties of paper made by way of experiment. The result of all this labor was the bank note of to-day.

The color of the paper is peculiar, and cannot be imitated exactly, by [illegible] expense. The combined thinness and strength of the paper are also unique. It is made in sheets large enough for two notes. Each note before it is sized weighs about eighteen grains, and then if doubled, it is strong enough to suspend a weight of thirty-six pounds.

The texture of the paper is also peculiar. It has a crisp feel, invariably the same, and such that bank clerks of experience can readily detect forgeries by this test alone. Then the wire mark is pressed in the making by a frame, costly to make and difficult to use, is practically inimitable.

Each note has thin, rough edges, uncut, not to be produced by any mode of cutting paper that is not devised expressly for the purpose. The paper for printing is damped with water in the exhausted receiver of an air pump. The ink used in the plate printing is made of Frankfort black, which is composed of the charcoals of the tendrils and husks of the German grape ground with linseed oil. This ink has a peculiar and very deep shade of black, common black inks being tinted either with blue or brown.

Be at the Great Union Meeting in St. Paul's Church---Seats For All---Grand Address by Former Peterborough Boy

The celebration of the 300th anniversary of the coming of the English Bible, which is to be held to-night in St. Paul's Presbyterian church, promises to be a most interesting and profitable occasion.

Every church in the city has waived its Monday evening gathering and all denominations unite to make the meeting of this evening worthy of the occasion and of our city.

Dr. J. L. Gilmour, who will be the only speaker, arrived in the city at noon to-day, and is the guest of Dr. and Mrs. Boucher, of Brock street. His subjetc will be "Our English Bible." Dr. Gilmour is an old Peterborough boy, his father was Mr. John Walker Gilmour, who was the first pastor of the Baptist cause in this city.

Arrangements will be made, if necessary, to increase the seating capacity of the church for to-night's service. The union choir, under the leadership of Mr. John Crane, is doing excellent work.

The meeting is expected to commence promptly at 8 o'clock.

A BRILLIANT FOP.

The Youthful Disraeli, Elegant and Eloquent.

AN INTELLECTUAL EXQUISITE.

His Airs and Graces, His Frills and Laces and His Dazzling Oratory In His Early Political Battles—A Pen Picture of His Remarkable Face.

Benjamin Disraeli's career in practical politics began with a series of reverses that might have discouraged a less persistent fighter. Five times the youthful novelist and versatile budding statesman attempted to break into parliament before he succeeded in winning an election, going down to defeat three times at Wycombe and once at Taunton.

In William Flavelle Monypenny's "Life of Benjamin Disraeli" the author declares that tales are still told in Wycombe of Disraeli's famous first speech from the portico of the Red Lion:

"The youthful orator was now at the height of his dandyism, and his 'curls and ruffles' played no small part in the election. Standing on the top of the porch beside the figure of the lion, with his pale face set off by masses of jet black hair and his person plentifully adorned with lace and cambric, he must have seemed to the spectators better fitted for his role of fashionable novelist than for that of strenuous politician. Great, then, was their surprise when this 'popinjay,' as a hostile newspaper called him, began to pour forth a torrent of eloquence with tremendous energy of action and in a voice that carried far along the High street. He had an instinct for the dramatic effects which hold the attention of the mob. 'When the poll is declared I shall be there,' he exclaimed, according to a Wycombe tradition, pointing to the head of the lion, 'and my opponent will be there,' pointing to the tail. By the admission even of the opposite party the speech was a complete success, and his popularity with the crowd was thenceforth assured."

As to the young orator's appearance at Taunton, Mr. Monypenny gathers these comments of an eyewitness from an almost forgotten book of that time:

"Never in my life had I been so struck by a face as I was by that of Disraeli. It was lividly pale, and from beneath two finely arched eyebrows blazed out a pair of intensely black eyes. I never have seen such orbs in mortal sockets either before or since. His physiognomy was strictly Jewish. Over a broad, high forehead were ringlets of coal black, glossy hair, which, combed away from his right temple, fell in luxuriant clusters or bunches over his left cheek and ear, which it entirely concealed from view.

"There was a sort of half smile, half sneer playing about his beautifully formed mouth, the upper lip of which was curved as we see it in the portraits of Byron. He was very showily attired in a dark bottle green frock coat, a waistcoat of the most extravagant pattern, the front of which was almost covered with glittering chains, and in fancy pattern pantaloons. He wore a plain black stock, but no collar was visible. Altogether he was the most intellectual looking exquisite I had ever seen.

"He commenced in a lisping, lackadaisical tone of voice. He minced his phrases in apparently the most affected manner and while he was speaking placed his hands in all imaginable positions, not because he felt awkward and did not know, like a booby in a drawing room, where to put them, but apparently for the purpose of exhibiting to the best advantage the glittering rings which decked his white and taper fingers. Now he would place his thumbs in the armholes of his waistcoat and upward till his fingers on its flashing surface; then one set of digits would be released and he would lean effectually on the table, supporting himself with his right hand; anon he would push aside the curls from his forehead.

"But as he proceeded all traces of dandyism and affectation were lost. With a rapidity of utterance perfectly astonishing he referred to past events and indulged in anticipations of the future. The Whigs were, of course, the objects of his unsparing satire, and his eloquent denunciations of them were applauded to the echo. In all he said he proved himself to be the finished orator. Every period was rounded with the utmost elegance, and in his most daring flights, when one trembled lest he should fall from the giddy height to which he had attained, he so gracefully descended that every hearer was wrapped in admiring surprise. His voice, at first so finical, gradually became full, musical and sonorous and with every varying sentiment was beautifully modulated. His arms no longer appeared to be exhibited for show, but he exemplified the eloquence of the hand. The dandy was transformed into the man of mind, the Mantalini looking personage into a practiced orator and finished elocutionist."

Her Declaration.

"Have you anything to declare?" asked the customs inspector.

"Yes," replied the lady who was returning from Europe. "I unhesitatingly declare that it is an outrage the way this government permits things to be massed up in one's trunk."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Let those who complain of having to work undertake to do nothing. If this does not convert them nothing will.

Louise Colet and the Fever.

Louise Colet, the French poet, novelist and general writer, was born at Aix, in Provence, in 1810. She was better known in life than to posterity not only by her writings, but from various little incidents with which she was connected. One of the most trying was when she intended to winter in the isle of Ischia, in the Gulf of Naples. No sooner was she established in this sea girt "auburn" than an epidemic broke out. The people thought it must be the stranger who had brought the trouble. She was threatened and narrowly escaped death by the devotion of a friend who got her away in a yacht. Strange as it may seem, when the "tenth muse" had left the island the fever disappeared.

Australia's Timbers.

An industry that is making rapid development in Australia is the hardwood timber business. That this should be so is not surprising, for Australian timbers — of which there is an almost endless variety, ranging from some of the finest hardwood down to woods of the finest grain or class—are most admirably suited for almost any purpose. West Australia, New South Wales, Tasmania, and Queensland are the states most to the fore in this connection, and although until recently very little had been done to cultivate a foreign trade, those interested are now taking steps that must inevitably end by Australia coming into prominence with this business as with others.

Novelists in Monasteries.

Tolstoy was not the first modern writer to seek refuge in a monastery from the troubles and tribulations of the world. The French novelist Huysmans also did so, but he did not remain in the monastery very long, because his conception of the religious life differed from that of the monks. It was his pleasant habit to sally forth in evening dress with a flower in his buttonhole to dine in town and to return, charioted sometimes by Bacchus, to knock the monks up in the small hours of the morning. They did not like that, and so, though they had the highest regard for their guest's literary gifts, they suggested that a private hotel would suit his way of life better than a convent.

Young Prince Resourceful.

Prince John, son of King George of England, although not much more than five years old, is of a resourceful disposition. When his father succeeded to the throne the little prince, then four years old, was anxious to know what chance he had of eventually becoming king. He was informed that having four elder brothers, the chance was decidedly remote. Upon that Prince John suggested that the only way out of the difficulty seemed that his four elder brothers should be killed, when nothing could prevent his succeeding to the throne.

Electrical Oscillations.

Herts years ago first produced rapid electrical oscillations and showed that they traveled through space with the speed of light and reappeared as electrical oscillations and sparks in suitably arranged conductors at a distance. Starting with waves twenty feet long in air and oscillating 30,000,000 times a second, he worked down to waves one-tenth as long and ten times as rapid

THE BILL IS WITHDRAWN

Proposal to Take Control From Hydro-Electric Commission and Give to Railway Board is Abandoned

THE LEGISLATURE

Toronto, Feb. 21.—Monday, at the Legislature, instead of the formal gathering of a remnant of the House, yesterday proved one of the most interesting and important of the present session. Several Government measures of considerable public importance were dealt with.

Sir James Whitney relieved the province of all need for anxiety respecting the control of the Hydro-Electric power furnished by the commission by himself moving the withdrawal of the bill to transfer the control from the Hydro-Electric to the Railway Commission.

Hon. Col. Matheson introduced a bill empowering the Government to recover by purchase to the extent of $800,000, timber limits in the Algonquin Park forest reservation.

The Provincial Treasurer stated that the limits to be secured within the immediate future were appraised at $200,000.

Hon. J. J. Foy was called upon by Allan Studholme and S. Clark to increase the maximum amount to be paid by husbands to deserted wives. The revised statute as recommended by the commission of judges, left the maximum as formerly at $5 per week.

Mr. Studholme said he did not see why a wealthy man, possibly a millionaire, should be let off with $5 a week to his deserted wife.

S. Clark said he thought it should be $7 a week.

Hon. J. J. Foy said he was willing to have the maximum raised to $7, $8 or $10, but this act was not with respect to the wives of men of wealth. It was one of summary proceedings at the entire cost of the public, and enabled a deserted wife, without the expenditure of a cent, to secure an order of support, which carried with it a penalty of imprisonment if disobeyed.

The Attorney-General agreed to the maximum being raised to $10 a week.

Several speakers suggested that various officials in addition to the wife should be authorized to lay complaints on her behalf.

Hon J. J. Foy said that the judges and himself had personally considered the proposal. It might give opportunity to meddlesome persons to increase trouble, and as desertion was not a crime, but only a civil offence, the act as amended, would, he believed, suffice. It was given its third reading.

Sir James gave notice of his bill aiming at the transfer of control over rates in the early days of the session, but on Feb. 1 announced that he would allow the bill to stand, pending consultation with the hydro engineers. His action of yesterday in absolutely withdrawing the bill, indicates that proposed change was not a popular one.

The House went into supply and passed the balance of the supplementary estimates with the exception of the colonization and agricultural items, which were held over on account of the absence of the Opposition leader.

Replying to an enquiry respecting the item of $10,000 for islands in Georgian Bay, Hon. Frank Cochrane explained that it was to go towards a complete survey, which was designed to prevent the same property being sold to two or three persons, as had been sometimes done.

In passing $1,156,136.77 for miscellaneous items, the Government was asked by Mr. Studholme, why some civil service employes were getting gratuities upon retirement and others were not. He brought up the names of two employes in the Hamilton Asylum of over twenty years' service. A man discharged after twenty-five years' service got nothing.

Hon. W. J. Hanna, referring to the statutes, said that prior to 1881 there was an indefinite provision for gratuities, but then an order-in-council was made classifying the manner of employes that should be bonused. This has been re-modified in 1892, and again in 1906, it reached a point after which no gratuities were given. "Under no case had this province granted a gratuity to a discharged persons," concluded Mr. Hanna, "and the provision reads, 'Where it is necessary to dispense with a man by change of Government or through ill-health, without fault, the Government may—not shall—give a gratuity.'"

Hon. Col. Hendrie, chairman of the railway committee, moved the second reading of a bill to amend the Railway Act. He explained that this was the provincial portion of joint legislation to be also enacted at Ottawa. It was for control of the interchange of freight between railway companies holding provincial charters and those chartered at Ottawa. The details had been drafted by Justice Mabee of the Dominion Board, and Chairman Leitch of the Ontario Commission. Its necessity had been shown by conditions at Preston, and with respect to levies in the vicinity of Hamilton.

Col. Hugh Clark's bill with respect to fire insurance aims to provide a standard form of fire policy; to limit variations to the statutory conditions to such as are accepted by the insurer and the assured; to provide that a copy of the application shall be attached to the policy; to hold the inspector of insurance responsible for the administration of the act and the solvency of companies doing business in Ontario. Several amendments are made to the statutory conditions, all with a view to protecting the insured against companies that are practically insolvent, and against trickery, adjustment of fire claims, at the same time providing safeguards for the companies against fraudulent claims.

Woman Goes to Asylum.

Toronto, Feb. 21.—Pronounced violently insane by Dr. T. Owen Parry, the jail physician, Miss Appeline Belland, who sent threatening letters to Ald. Heyd, was yesterday placed in the Toronto Asylum for the Insane, where she will be closely watched by physicians and nurses, as she is subject to wild hallucinations and is in every way a dangerous woman.

Miss Belland was a native of Montreal, and first came to this city as a maid in the employ of the household of Hon. W. S. Blake. She afterwards worked in a departmental store, but of late years has been making her living as a modiste. "Her threat on the alderman's life was by no means an idle one," declared Dr. Parry, "for she was very much deranged, and would not forget a fancied wrong."

Would Pray For Aviators.

London, Feb. 21.—There is a serious movement on foot to add the words "by air" to the prayer in the Church of England Litany "That it may please Thee to preserve all that travel by land or water."

The suggestion originated with Rev. Charles de Havilland, a Hampshire rector and father of Mr. de Havilland, an aviator, and now the matter has been taken up by Archdeacon Sinclair.

"I think," said the archdeacon, "that in view of the great advances in aviation and the risks run by those engaged therein, it would undoubtedly be an excellent thing if opportunity were afforded in the litany to offer prayers for the safety of flying men."

Drowned at Hamilton.

Hamilton, Feb. 21.—Foreman Harris, of the Magee Walton Ice Co., while out on the bay Sunday morning found a Christy hat, a black overcoat and a pair of gloves close to one of the channels in the ice field. A card in one of the pockets bore the name of C. Wilson, 370 Wilson street. The police were notified and on investigation found that a man bearing the above name has been missing since Thursday.

Mr. Schwitzer Appointed.

Ottawa, Feb. 21.—The last of the important positions at the Printing Bureau has been filled by the appointment of T. H. Schwitzer as mechanical superintendent. The new superintendent graduated in the engineering course at McGill University, and is a brother of the recently deceased chief engineer of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

No Youthful Smokers.

Albany, N.Y., Feb. 21.—One must be eighteen to smoke legally, according to a bill introduced yesterday by Assemblyman Collins. The measure provides that it shall be a misdemeanor to furnish cigars, cigarettes, tobacco or "the makings" to a child under eighteen. The age limit has been raised by the bill from sixteen years.

H. H. Miller Says the Railway Death List is Altogether Too Large —Urges Better Protection

ONE IN EVERY 199

Ottawa, Feb. 21.—On a resolution which recited that one trainman in 199 was killed on Canadian railways, and one in every 35 injured in a year, and that the Government should cause an investigation to be made, with the view of devising some means to provide better protection, with the object of preventing so great a loss of life and so frequent accidental injury, H. H. Miller (S. Grey) pointed out in the House of Commons yesterday that on Canadian railways there was not a sufficient sectional staff maintained to safeguard the lives of trainmen and traveling public. The hours were too long, and he thought the cause was partly due to lack of enforcement of regulations and lack of protective equipment.

Hon. George Graham thought that Canada was moving rapidly towards better railways and better management. He mentioned recent improvements in the way of more money spent for protection, heavier rails, fewer level crossings, more double tracks, interlocking switches and safety devices of all kinds. As to the proposed regulation guarding cattle and protecting farmers from loss, the Minister pointed out that the original framers of railway law approached the problem from the point of view that the right of way belonged to the railway, and cattle on it might cause loss of life to passenger or employes. The railway commission had more plenary power than the Interstate Commerce Commission. Its inspectors reported on every accident.

"Have inspectors the right to prosecute? If not, why not give it to them," asked Mr. Miller, bringing up the old question of enforcing Federal law.

Mr. Graham: Results is what we are after, and we get better results than in the United States, where they have power to prosecute.

The Minister of Railways went on to show that the climatic difficulty was gradually being overcome. Railway employment of its nature involved danger, but owing to the standardization of equipment and the regulation of the hours of employment by the railway brotherhoods, the elements of danger were being eliminated. The regulations of the Railway Board were stringent, and rolling stock had to be built to comply with those orders. He thought that legislation would be introduced this session to give the board absolute power to employ all the experts necessary to maintain a thorough inspection of railway equipment.

Hon. Mackenzie King, Minister of Labor, quoted statistics in Britain, Canada and the United States to show that Canada was more saving of passenger and employes' life and injury than the republic, although much less than England. But Canada had great mountains and much territory, in which the physical conditions caused greater risk than in comparatively level England. He showed that Canada's laws for the protection of life must be good, as the statistics showed much lower proportions of loss than in the United States, where conditions were similar.

Mr. Miller offered to withdraw his resolution, but Dr. Sproule objected, and Sir Wilfrid moved the adjournment.

Just before the House rose the bill of Mederech Martin (Montreal), providing for the fortnightly payment of railway employes, was given a second reading, passed through the committee stage, and stands for third reading.

George Perley, chief Conservative whip, expressed dissent, but Sir Wilfrid Laurier said that if the railways had any objections to offer they would be given an opportunity before a third reading.

Hon. Mr. King, on behalf of Mr. Graham, stated that the Minister approved of the bill.

In reply to a question by Dr Sproule, the Prime Minister stated that he had not yet received the text of the new treaty affecting pelagic sealing in Behring Sea.

Dr. Reid (Grenville) read to the House a letter by Governor Dix, published in a New York paper, regarding the Long Sault bill, now before Congress, in which the writer suggested that a hydrographic survey be made of the locality before any legislative action. This was necessary in view of the superior rights of navigation in the St. Lawrence channel. Sir Wilfrid did not think it was necessary to bring this phase of the question before the British ambassador at Washington.

Alex. Haggart (Winnipeg) wanted a bill to incorporate the Security Trusts Corporation amended so that the name of the company would not conflict with one already doing business. The bill goes back to the banking committee.

Bad Storm In Alaska.

Cordova, Alaska, Feb. 21.—One of the worst storms ever experienced in Cordova and the Copper River country ended Sunday after three days of continuous rain and of wind reaching a velocity of eighty miles an hour. Snow melting on the mountainsides caused bad landslides on the railroad running up the Copper River, but they are now clear. The river bank is full, and it is feared that the flood will start the glaciers moving long before the Alaska winter is ended.

Try This Home-Made Cough Remedy

Costs Little, But Does the Work Quickly, or Money Refunded.

Mix two cups of granulated sugar with one cup of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2¼ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a 16 oz. bottle; then add the Sugar Syrup. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

You will find that this simple remedy takes hold of a cough more quickly than anything else you ever used. Usually ends a deep-seated cough inside of 24 hours. Splendid, too, for whooping cough, chest pains, bronchitis and other throat troubles. It stimulates the appetite and is slightly laxative, which helps end a cough.

This recipe makes more and better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for $2.50. It keeps perfectly and tastes pleasant.

Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and is rich in guiaicol and all the natural pine elements which are so healing to the membranes. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

This plan of making cough syrup with Pinex and Sugar Syrup (or strained honey) has proven so popular throughout the United States and Canada, that it is often imitated. But the old, successful formula has never been equalled.

A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

Creates No Surprise.

Ottawa, Feb. 21.—At the Department of Customs yesterday it was stated that renunciation reported by cable over the Anglo-Japanese convention regarding relations between Japan and Canada, has been forecasted, and consequently causes no surprise. It is claimed to be a procursor to a wider arrangement, Japan's idea being to frame a scientific tariff and to cancel such a convention as a preliminary.

The supplementary convention was signed in January, 1905, and was terminable on six months notice, which have now been given. In the meantime negotiations for a new agreement will take place. Under the convention being renounced a specific instead of an advalorem duty was substituted on a list of 64 articles. Included in this list were cement, cotton, yarns and tissues, velvets, velveteen, window glass, iron and weld steel, sheet iron, wire, and small rod iron, leather linen tissues, printing paper, sugar, woolen and worsted yarns, silk faced cotton, seams, yarns of all sorts.

Recently, it was announced in the House by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, that correspondence, looking to a new treaty with Japan was in progress.

AUTHORITIES SCARED.

Chinese Officials Frightened Into Action to Stop Plague.

Pekin, Feb. 21.—There is a notable attempt on the part of the Chinese Government to stay the spread of the plague, and sanitary measures are being strictly enforced in all the various towns, where a few weeks ago the disease was allowed full swing unhampered. Instructions have been issued that every village burn its dead. The panic and fear of the plague have overridden the Chinese superstition against cremation, and now almost daily the torch is applied to piles of hastily constructed coffins, among which are often seen bodies wrapped only in shrouds.

In the town of Kwongchangtse, near the Manchurian Railway, where the daily death list has numbered a hundred or more, masked men go about with sleds and pick up the bodies lying in the streets, where they have been placed by relatives. The sleds transport them to the west gate, and from there they are removed in carts in lots of four or five to the cremation grounds.

Every house is inspected daily. The important shops keep a man at the door with an atomizer, and with this he sprays all persons entering the shop with a solution of carbolic acid. The refuse, which was formerly thrown into the streets is now removed each day from the houses.

The Mukden authorities are promptly despatching physicians and nurses with all the requisites for taking care of the sick, to villages where new outbreaks occur, and this precaution, it is believed, will result in checking the spread of the disease.

A correspondent who visited Hulan, which is thirty miles north of Harbin, found that towns are afflicted. For many weeks the governor, with the customary fatalism, was indifferent to the awful work of the plague. He has now been suddenly roused into activity, and, clad in mask and bandages, personally superintends the cremation of the accumulated bodies.

In one village nearby, where formerly seventy people lived, there are now thirty-four, the other thirty-six having died from the plague and been cremated. The dread of death seems to have set in throughout the afflicted regions, and the people, fearing infection, refuse to go any distance from their homes. Trade and commerce have been therefore greatly affected in all parts of the country where the disease has appeared.

According to the Government statistics, there have been a few deaths in Pekin and Tientsen.

Burning Lazarettos.

Harbin, Feb. 21.—Although the bubonic plague now is said to be waning in Southern Manchuria, reports from the northern part yesterday stated that the scourge was growing in virulence there. All of the Lazarettos just outside the towns in Southern Manchuria are being burned to-day. Parts of towns where the plague raged in its most virulent form are also being destroyed.

Plague In Glasgow.

London, Feb. 21.—According to The Morning Post, there are isolated cases of the bubonic plague at Glasgow and East Anglia. The plague has killed 75,000 in China.

Wreck on I.C.R.

Pictou, N.S., Feb. 21.—The Intercolonial Railway train from Pictou to Oxford Junction met with a serious mishap yesterday afternoon. Near Munro's Siding, two and a half miles this side of River John, something caused the whole train of fifteen cars to leave the track, the engine alone remaining on the rails. Thirteen of the cars were freight, and there were two passenger coaches. No one was hurt, although the passenger cars are in rather bad shape. The freight cars are badly wrecked, many of them being laden with perishable food products from Prince Edward Island. The mix-up will not be cleared for a day or two.

U. S. Naval Plans.

Washington, Feb. 21.—The naval appropriation bill was considered at length in the House yesterday and practically all of the provisions of the measure were agreed to with the exception of the new building program, which will come up to-day, and which is expected to precipitate a lively fight.

The bill provides for two battleships of the super-Dreadnought type, carrying twelve 14-inch guns; two fleet colliers, eight torpedo-boat destroyers and four submarines. An attempt will be made both to decrease and increase this program, but the committee believes it has enough votes to carry it through.

A proposed repeal of the clause in last year's bill that all ships let out by contract should be under the eight-hour labor law, will be fought from both sides of the chamber. There also will be a fight to have one of the new ships constructed at a navy yard. Chairman Foss of the naval commission stated yesterday that of two sister ships now under construction, the one at the New York Navy Yard is costing $6,609,000, and the one by private contract $5,380,000.

Burglars Unsuccessful.

Brockville, Feb. 21.—Bold attempts were made to enter three places of business on Brockville's leading thoroughfares. The guilty party was aware of the movements of the night constable, who passed along the street examining doors less than five minutes before. After he had made the nightly examination of the doors the would-be intruder attempted to force them open with a jimmy or chisel. The efforts were unsuccessful.

Seven Were Cremated.

Sutton, W.Va., Feb. 21.—Seven persons lost their lives in a fire which destroyed the home of J. D. Hardin in this city on Sunday. Only Mr. Hardin escaped, the six remaining members of his family, and Ada Green, a 14-year-old girl who made her home with the Hardins, perishing in the flames. The fire was caused by a natural gas grate.

"THE INNOCENT MURDERERS"

By Wm. Johnston and Paul West

"I don't understand," she said. "Begin at the beginning and tell me all about it."

"It was Snyder who really began it," said Gordon lamely, conscious of some feeling of shame that he was already beginning to try to shift the blame for the disgraceful part he had played on another who was not there to defend himself. His words to Ernesta might acquit him of guilt. His conscience never would.

"Snyder saw you," he continued; "you and Professor Hopkins in the laboratory late at night. He watched you from his window. He saw your shadows against the laboratory blinds. He said the professor seemed very much excited about something and then"—Gordon hesitated—"he said he saw the professor kiss you."

"Did he?" said Ernesta, not without a blush. "I really dont remember. We were both so very much excited that he did he meant nothing by it, but if he did he meant nothing by it. I'll tell you all about it when you have finished your story."

Her apparent frankness routed any lingering suspicion of her that might have remained in Gordon's mind.

"Of course," he hastened to say, "I didn't believe there was anything wrong. I knew that you would be able to explain it all satisfactorily. but Snyder told what he had seen to Rice and Fischer and me and suggested that we would watch Professor Hopkins and get proof—"

"Proof of what?" demanded Ernesta.

"—of his suspicions. I knew that he could not, but I felt that the wisest thing for me was to appear to acquiesce in their plans so that I would be on hand to protect you—"

"Protect me from what?"

"His suspicions. And so—" Gordon hesitated. He was finding it harder and harder to tell of the spying they had done at the laboratory. Retrospectively he wondered at the part he had himself played. How could he ever have mistrusted such a woman as Ernesta?

What spirit of evil was it that had led him, despite his conviction of her utter innocence, into such an imbroglio.

"Go on," said Ernesta calmly.

"We tried the laboratory door and it was locked."

"Of course it was," said his bride. "Professor Hopkins always locked it when he was conducting his own experiments."

"Then," said Gordon, "somebody—I think it was Rice—suggested that we might go up on the roof and look down into the laboratory through the skylight and we did so and——"

Again he hesitated.

"And what?" asked Ernesta.

"We couldn't see anything, but we could hear Professor Hopkins' voice in the inner laboratory. It sounded as if he was talking to someone."

"And you all thought that it was I, of course," said Ernesta.

"The others all thought so," said Gordon evasively; "so someone went and got a ladder and we pushed up the sklight and went down the ladder into the laboratory Fischer was the last. The ladder slipped with him and came down with a crash. Prof. Hopkins turned and saw us just as we entered the inner laboratory."

"What happened then?"

"There was no one in there with him. He was talking to himself."

"He often did that," interjected his late assistant; "always, when he was conducting his own experiments."

"Anyhow he acted like a madman. He had a graduated glass in his hand with some compound in it."

Ernesta nodded.

"I know what it was," she said. "It was his great discovery."

"He raved at us all," Gordon went on. "He accused us of trying to steal his secret. His actions so approached those of a maniac that someone suggested overpowering him. That only served to increase his fury. Breathing defiance at us, before any one of us could stop him, he drained the contents of the glass and dropped dead instantly at our feet."

"How horrible!" cried Ernesta. "Poor, dear old Professor Hopkins."

"But that wasn't the worst of it," Gordon continued. "Someone—it was you—came and tried the door of the laboratory. We heard your voice.'

"I remember," said Ernesta, "I came back for—never mind, go on."

"It was an embarrassing situation" said Gordon, trying his best to make their subsequent irrational actions appear logical. "We did not want anyone to come in and find the body there and discover that we had crept in through the skylight to spy on him. It would have been hard to explain. Now that Professor Hopkins was dead there was no need for anyone to know of our—of Snyder's suspicions about him. At the same time we could not think, in the suddenness of it all, how we were going to give a satisfactory account of his death. Someone suggested hiding the body just temporarily until we could think it over and decide on what sort of a story we would give out about his death."

"It was Snyder who suggested that," said Ernesta. "I know it was. I always thought he was a sneak."

"We all agreed to it." Gordon asserted. "We did not want any scandal. We were only thinking of the reputation of the college."

"Of course," Ernesta almost sneered. "You were not thinking about yourselves at all."

"Perhaps we were," Gordon admitted. "At any rate we put the body in the lower part of the big cupboard and closed the doors. Then we removed the ladder and went into Snyder's room to talk it over. While we were there we heard an unearthly shriek from the laboratory. Everybody thought that it was you. We supposed that you had come back and found the body there. We all rushed back to the laboratory."

"I was on my way to Boston, then" said Ernesta. "It was not I."

"No, it was the scrub woman. She had gone in there to clean up and the minute she entered the inner laboratory had seen—"

"Professor Hopkins' body?" interjected Ernesta.

"No," said Gordon, "she did not see the body."

"What then?" the girl asked breathlessly.

Her husband paused. It was difficult to describe the mysterious light that had so terrified them all. It was even more difficult to talk about it at all, but he went bravely on:

"I do not know what it was that she saw. We none of us could conjecture. We all saw it too, but we could not account for it. From the cupboard where we had laid the body a strange white light radiated. It certainly was enough to terrify anyone."

"What did you do?"

"We got the scrub woman out of the building and then we opened the cupboard. We found—we found the body of Professor Hopkins entirely filled with a strange, penetrating luminosity. We could not account for it."

"I can," said Ernesta, "but go on."

"It was utterly out of the question to take the body home in that condition. Think what a shock it would have been to poor Mrs. Hopkins. It was equally impossible to leave it where it was and have the janitor or the students discover it in the morning. After some discussion we decided to hide it until the strange brilliancy had abated."

"To hide it—where?"

"That was the question. Many places were talked of and finally we wrapped it up in blue-print paper and took it in a wheel-barrow out to the old ice-house on the shore of the pond and covered it with some boards and sawdust."

"And left it there?" asked Ernesta with horror in her tone. "Poor Professor Hopkins."

Gordon nodded.

"Where is the body now?"

"I do not know. I suppose it is still there. I had not heard of its being found before I left Graydon."

"But I don't see quite yet," said Ernesta, "what makes you think you may be suspected. If the body has not been found yet, how does anybody know? Did anyone see you take the body out there to the pond in the wheel-barrow?"

Gordon shook his head.

"Not that I know of. You can imagine, though, that the sudden disappearance of the professor caused quite a sensation."

"When was it learned that he was missing?"

"I don't know. One of us pinned a note on the door saying that he had been called away unexpectedly."

"But what about Mrs. Hopkins? Wasn't she worried about him?"

"She must have been, though I did not hear of her making any inquiries about him. People did a lot of talking. Some of them"—it was Gordon's turn ot blush now—"even pected of knowing anything about Professor Hopkins."

"How absurd."

"Of course; but you must remember that you and he had spent a great deal of time together and that you both disppeared at the same time, and nobody but myself knows where you both are."

"Still," objected Ernesta, "I do not see why you should think you are suspected of knowing anythig about Professor Hopkins."

"There are several things. I was the first one the Dean asked the next morning about Professor Hopkins. You remember, too, that strange man we saw in Madison Square, the man who followed us to the station."

"Yes," said Ernesta. "I saw him in Boston, too."

"I am certain he is a detective and that he is following me. I went down to the station to try to find out if you had left Graydon and he was there. He stopped me to ask for a match and the way he peered into my face aroused my suspicion.'

Ernesta gave a little shiver.

"Do you suppose he is still after us?"

"What if he is?" said Gordon, giving her hand a reassuring clasp. "You are mine now and I can protect you."

Both sat silent pondering over the strange happenings that had so suddenly come into their hitherto uneventful lives. It was Ernesta who first spoke again.

"George, dear," she said, "I think I had better tell my story now. It will help clear up, perhaps, some of the things in yours that seemed so inexplicable. Our marriage and Prof. Hopkins' death under these strange circumstances surely release me from the pledge I made to the professor to keep everything secret.'

"Yes," my dear," said Gordon, gravely, "I think the circumstances fully absolve you from any pledge of secrecy. Tell me your story and then we will decide what we are to do."

If Gordon's tale was calculated to astound his bride, hers was none the less astounding.

Here is what she told him:

"For the last six months Professor Hopkins has been experimenting with radium. At first he would not tell me what his expectations were. When I asked him, he would only say that if he succeeded in accomplishing what he hoped he would be, not only the most famous chemist in the world, but, perhaps, one of the richest. Day after day, when the last class had left, he would ask me to remain in the laboratory with him, working out abstruse formulæ, reading long reports on the results of experiments in the same field by various scientists all over the world, writing, at his dictation, long letters to different persons, several of these letters being to Monsieur and Madame Curie, the discoverers of radium. I had to take notes, read papers, prepare apparatus and all the time with only a vague idea of what it was all about.

"After awhile he got so that he would require my presence in the laboratory in the evening, and then, you know, George, what you thought, and how we quarrelled."

"That is forgotten,' 'said George, "Go on."

"Professor Hopkins had secured a small quantity of radium, through the courtesy of the Curies. His constant experiments, many of which were failures, finally exhausted this supply, and for several days he was very much downcast. He told me, when I asked him about it, that the reason for his discouragement was that his shortage should exist at the very time when he saw success ahead of him. I begged him to let me into his confidence more fully, and finally he said that he would.

"What he told me made me fear for his reason at first. He was confident, he told me, that radium rays or emanations were capable of exerting an effect on animal life that science had never dreamed of. He was on the point, he declared, of making a compound that would revolutionize the world in its far-reaching effects. He would not tell me what it was, but he assured me that it was the most wonderful discovery ever made in any field of science, and he would tell me all, but that he was afraid that I would think he had gone insane.

"'Now,' said he, 'I am about to call on you for help in a most critical situation. I have been afraid lately that the nature of my experiments has become known, or is suspected, by some of the members of the faculty. I have seen Professor Gordon looking at me strangely on various occasions.'"

"'I fear to leave my laboratory lest they will break in and try to see what I am doing here. It is absolutely necessary that I should have another ounce of radium.' I looked at him in astonishment. I knew that radium was worth several thousand dollars an ounce, and that there was not that quantity in America. There were not over seven ounces of it in existence in the world, according to report, at that time. He divined my thoughts and said: 'I know what you are thinking. Radium, as I am well aware, is worth at least $5,000 an ounce. That is all right. I have privately written to Madame Curie. You remember, too, that strange man an ounce. After much persuasion and only by revealing to her part of the nature of my experiments, she has agreed to sell it to me. A few days ago an agent of hers sailed for New York in possession of the priceless metal. He will arrive on May 20. I do not want to ask him to come here, nor do I dare to go to him. In the first place, my absence would cause comment, and in the second place I do not dare leave my experiments in the condition they are now in. I am almost on the verge of closing them successfully. I have thought on one or two occasions that even with the materials I now have on hand they were going to be successful at any moment. But I fear and it is not worth while taking chances. If I should fail now for lack of the radium it would kill me. Therefore, will you go to New York and get the radium from the agent of the Curies?"

In Search Of Beauty

You Must First Win Health by Getting the Blood Rich and Red

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

Every man and every woman has an individual idea of what constitutes beauty.

Is beauty skin deep or does it depend on the glow which health alone can give? Is it due to regularity of feature or to the gracefulness and elasticity which accompany health and vigour?

To win beauty you must first gain health. Rich, red blood is the secret. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is successful and popular because it forms rich, red blood and in this way gives gracefulness to every movement and a healthful, natural glow to the complexion.

Thin blood and weak nerves soon give one a tired, worn out appearance. Worry and anxiety show themselves in wrinkles and care lines. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food enriches the blood, restores vigour to the nerves and drives away headaches and bodily pains.

By filling the arteries with new, red blood, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food rounds out the form to healthful proportions, makes the muscles and tissues firm and strong and gives vivacity to mind and body.

Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

HOW OLD PEOPLE

May Prolong Their Lives

At an advanced age waste is more rapid than repair. The organs act more slowly and less effectually than in youth. The circulation is poor — the blood thin, and watery — the appetite poor and digestion weak.

We want to say to every aged person in this vicinity that Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic (without oil) will prolong life. It creates an appetite, aids digestion and makes good blood. In this natural manner Vinol retards waste and replaces weakness with strength, giving new life to the worn out system.

If people in this vicinity only realized how Vinol invigorates old people we would not be able to supply the demand.

Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you. McDermid and Jury, corner George and Charlotte streets; also Payne's drug store, corner George and Simcoe streets.

"FAKING UP" OLD BIRDS

Dealers Use Potash and Other Chemicals for the Purpose

According to a Paris contemporary, one of the inspectors under the French Department of Agriculture has discovered a new system of fraud perpetrated in the markets by some of the wholesale dealers. The plan is to sell old and barely eatable partridges for young birds. The young birds carry at the tip of the wing some white spots, which disappear as the birds increase in age. To sell the veteran birds as young the dealers have impressed the services of the chemist—and what is it that the chemist is unable to do?—so with the judicious application of potash, or some other chemical, the old birds are given the appearance of youth. For the chemist's embellishment the consumer has to pay about fifteen pence more than he would for the birds in a state of nature unadorned.

HOW CROCKETT SCORED

Among popular present-day novelists whose work was condemned in the first place by publishers is Mr. S. R. Crockett, of "Stickit Minister" fame. When he offered his first volume to a Scotch firm it was returned with a polite note assuring him that there was no market for that sort of thing. The letter was marked "No 396b." In later years when the same publishers asked him for one of his manuscripts he politely requested them to refer to their previous correspondence with him marked "396b."

WONDERFUL CAT'S BIG DAILY SWIM

A Deptford Feline that Crosses the River Thames Every Day—A Remarkable Feat

A cat that swims across the Thames River every evening and swims back again next morning is something in the nature of a novelty, but the people of Deptford claim that they possess such an animal. The feline to which such remarkable feats are attributed belongs to the ferryboatman who used to ply between the landings at the shipyards of Messrs. Robt. Thompson on the Southwick side and Messrs. Laing on the Deptford side. This man had up to about a fortnight ago ferried a small boat across the river, and on many occasions the cat, which has apparently discovered "pastures new" at Southwick, accompanied him in his boat each evening, and returned by the first ferry the next morning. Some times, however, the cat would travel so far in the boat, and then of its free will would leap overboard and finish the journey with a beautiful paw-over paw stroke.

On the cessation of the ferry service people thought that the cat would check its roving disposition and remain on its own side of the river, but evidently pussy found that the rats and mice on the Deptford side were not to be compared with those at Southwick, for every night with a beautifully graceful jump it takes the water and swims across the river, returning first thing next morning with a contented and self-satisfied smirk.

But Deptford is not the only place on the Thames that can boast of a clever cat. Harry Milham, one of the most popular boating men on the river, has a cat at his well-known boathouse at Strawberry Vale, between Twickenham and Teddington, which is a feline marvel. In the summer it may frequently be seen perched on the bow of a boat gazing into the water. All at once it will make a dive into the river and, swift as lightning, bring to the surface a small fish, which it proceeds to devour with evident satisfaction. Milham has had this cat from the days of its kittenhood, and believes it is the cleverest cat on the Thames.

"NONSENSE"

Whilst Lord Archibald Campbell was at Eton, he and his elder brother, the Duke of Argyll, and Lord Ronald Gower were commanded to Windsor by Queen Victoria. Her Majesty turned to Lord Gower and asked what form he was in. "In the fourth, ma'am," he replied. She put the same question to Lord Lorne, and received the same answer. "And what form are you in, Archie?" her Majesty said to Lord Campbell. "Nonsense, ma'am," he replied. The Queen was puzzled. She repeated the question. "Nonsense," repeated Lord Archibald, unabashed. Eventually it was explained that "Nonsense" was really the name of the form, to distinguish it from the "Sense" form, the difference between the two being that in the latter the Latin verses had to make sense, and in the former the boys might write nonsense so long as it scanned.

Restful Sleep Restored

"Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is far superior to all else as a strengthener and health builder for the aged, weak and sickly," says Mr. D. F. Sibert, 81 years of age but hale and hearty.

I find Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey far superior to all else, and while I am greatly opposed to taking spirits as thousands do, I will always use Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, be benefited and attain a clear conscience by taking it as a medicine as prescribed." D. F. Sibert, Scotland, Archer Co., Texas.

NEARLY HANGED AS A SPY

Perhaps the most remarkable incident in the career of the late Senator Elkins occurred when, as a young man, he was fighting for the Union in the Civil War. He was captured by a guerrilla band, and would have been promptly hanged as a spy had it not been for the intervention of a member of the band, who recognised him as a boyhood friend. Many years later when Senator Elkins was rich and famous, he heard that the man who had saved his life was serving twenty years in prison for robbing a bank, and he used his influence to bring about the release of his former benefactor.

STREET ARAB TO AUTHOR

A fine example of what "self-help" can do for a man is furnished by the career of Mr. F. T. Bullen, London. Years ago he was a youngster roaming about the streets of London without food, except when he got it by little, out-of-the-way tricks which only the street boys of London know. At last Mr. Bullen got a job as an errand boy, then he went before the mast, and rose to be chief mate, knocking about in the course of his career, in all parts of the world. And it was the experience thus gained which enabled him to write those absorbing stories of sea life, "The Cruise of the Cachalot" and "Idylls of the Sea."

Wise Men and Women Know that most of the sicknesses of life come from inactive bowels and from unhealthy condition of the organs of digestion. To take promptly

LIFE IN CANADA

The Right Kind of Person With the Right Kind of Aims Can Get Along

A large proportion of those who go out to Canada, says the "Evening Standard," do not realise that the conditions of existence are not the same as they are in England. In some respects Canada is like a foreign country. It is more largely influenced by American methods and ideals than the stay-at-home Englishman imagines, and it naturally takes time for one to get out of the familiar track and become habituated to a new outlook on life. The country also is raw and ungarnished, and the casual, make-shift conditions are irritating to people accustomed to the well-oiled orderliness of England. Educated persons miss the historic background, the culture, and the multitudinous social amenities of the Homeland.

Canada is busy with elemental things, with logs and plough and roads and bridges and railroads, and has no time at present to attend to the graces of civilization. As Kipling makes it say:—

"My speech is clean and single,
I talk of common things:
Words of the wharf and the market-place,
And the ware the merchant brings."

Such conditions are attractive to many natures who experience a keen satisfaction in taking part in laying the foundations of a great nation, but there are others, trained in a conventional groove, who find them irksome, and are unable to take kindly to the soil into which they have been transplanted.

This is particularly the case with those who have reached middle age. The wrench is often too great for them, and many return to the Old Country. We find, in fact, that, in addition to the broad tide of humanity flowing into Canada, there is a thin stream trickling back of disappointed persons, and it is these who speak slightingly of the country. It is not that the country is not all it is represented to be, but that it does not suit their particular temperament.

England, of course, will always possess a magic of her own to draw back her exiles from the ends of the earth, butt here is no reason why the right kind of person with the right kind of aims should not find in Canada a real home and a full and satisfactory existence.

SMASHED STATUETTE

Artist Disgusted—Paintings Have Also Been Destroyed

A celebrated French sculptor invited a number of his frends to come one Sunday and see a statuette which he had just completed, and which he himself announced to be the most perfect thing in the world. His comrades in art, anxious to see such a wonderful production, came in a crowd and examined the beautiful piece of sculpture with admiration. At length, however, one of them exclaimed, "I say! I thought you said this statuette was perfect, yet there are only four toes on the left foot!" It was perfectly true. Yet the missing toe, from the peculiar position of the foot, had entirely escaped the notice, not only of the artist, but all his friendly critics. So disgusted was the artist with this amazing discovery that he raised his mallet above his head and, before he could be stopped by his friends, smashed the beautiful statuette to fragments.

London has been talking lately about the pictures at the Grafton Gallary by the School of French painters who call themselves Post-Impressionists. These men go considerably farther in their contempt for all art conventions that the Impressionists who preceded them, and of whom Claude Monet was the great leader. But Monet was by no means a slap-dash painter, and even when he had won his way, not only into the Salon but into the Louvre, and when his pictures were going up in price by leaps and bounds, he voluntarily and deliberately destroyed $20,000 worth, because he did not consider them worthy of him or likely in the future to sustenance his reputation.

Rejected by the Academy

There was no more patient, painstaking, or conscientious painter ever lived in the world than Holman Hunt. He thought nothing of spending years over one canvas, and of travelling thousands of miles for his local color. He fixed up his easel on the arid shores of the Red Sea in order to paint "The Scapegoat," and he travelled through all the cities and villages of Palestine to find a suitable model for his "Shadow of Death," and, after spending seven years on his great picture, "The Triumph of the Innocents," he calmly set to work to paint it all over again.

It was no unusual thing with Millais, if he did not get the exact effect he wanted, to destroy, by a few strokes of his brush, the result of weeks of hard work, and many an artist whose picture, upon which much loving care had been spent, has been rejected by the Royal Academy has destroyed it upon its return to the studio. Even a famous artist who became an R.A. did this very thing. He says: "When my 'Hamlet and Ophelia' was rejected by the Academy, I was so disgusted with it that I tore it into strips and watched it disappear in the flames." The artist who thus used his picture so badly was Mr. Briton Riviere.

COMMERCIAL SLANG

Some Odd Expressions Used in Great Britain to Describe Salesmen

Many persons are unaware that there is quite an undeveloped mine of slang in the world of commercial travellers in the Old Country, who, by the way, are generally referred to as "knights of the road," or "highwaymen." For instance, the gentleman who travels in high-class jewellery is dubbed a "Black Maria man'," while the cheap jewellery man is a "brass bounder."

Continental travellers are "Channel rats," tea travellers are "leaf and lead men," and the cocoa commercials are designated "sediment sellers." The representative of a soap firm is a "bubbler," whilst the man who takes orders for candles is said to be a "will-o'-the-wisper."

The traveller in educational books is playfully spoken of as a "kid-killer," in drugs a "shake-the-bottle man"; the itinerant vender of stationery is a "cream-laid cruiser," of oil a "fat-forcer," and a coffee traveller is a "mahogany converter."

DEATH KNELL of the POUNDING SURF AT PEAKED HILL

THE Twin Bars, Where Fearless Life Savers in a Quarter Century Rescued More Than a Thousand

Hull Remnant and Part of Cargo of Laths of the Schooner Elwood Burton, Cast Upon Main Beach from Bar by Rising Tide October 14, 1904

THE wrecking of the Philadelphia and Reading Coal Company's barges Trevorton, Corbin and Pine Forest, and loss of their entire crews, on the inner Peaked Hill bar, January 10, was succeeded by the following published statement:—"No vessel once in the clutches of the bar has ever escaped."

That statement was erroneous. It is true that very many vessels, and a great company of sailor men, have come to an untimely end through collision with that bar of ill fame, but it is equally true that many other vessels were gotten safely afloat after a stranding thereon.

Nevertheless Peaked Hill bar is a good bar to avoid. Its victims have been many, and its shouting waters almost seem to be voicing the message:—"All hope abandon, ye that enter here."

Perhaps the earliest wreck there of which we latter day people have real knowledge occurred November 2 and 3, 1778. The British frigate Somerset, the craft that was stationed third in line in Boston Harbor while the Battle of Bunker Hill was progressing, then ended her voyaging on the bar. Thrown upon the main beach a day or two later, the ship was entombed by the shifting sands and lay far below the surface of the earth until the winter of 1885-86, when her salt preserved bones were exhumed through the medium of a beach carving gale, only to be buried afresh a few weeks afterward.

Until the establishment and maintenance not long ago of a big whistling buoy just seaward of the outer bar Peaked Hill waters took mighty toll of ships and sailors' lives every year. But since the placing of that buoy shipwrecks and drownings there have, happily, decreased.

Three crews guard the Peaked Hill section of coast. At the western end, near Race Point, "Sam" Fisher and followers of the Race Point crew are in harness. "Charlie" Kelley's tried and true crew are stationed at Peaked Head, six miles to the eastward, and "Wal" Cook's gallant band occupy Peaked Hill bar station, midway between the other localities named.

Danger ever dances attendance upon this trio of crews, much of whose life saving work must of necessity be performed within the smother of bar breakers, hundreds of yards from shore, beyond the range of beach ordnance.

They have helped force scores of stranded ships off the bar into navigable water, have culled hundreds of dead from the harvest of the sea. Their duties are manifold—prodigious; yet, despite the hardships and perils of the region, full ranks are steadily maintained, and every night these quiet men walk the beach, ready to hazard life for the sake of any sailor who may blunder into the death trap on the bar.

The average reader may have some knowledge of the duties of the life saver, but only they whose vocation brings them in touch with the life saver can know the hardship, monotony and danger that are interwoven with the warp of his daily labors.

Patrol Work an Unenviable Task.

To some the term "patrol" may suggest a leisurely ramble along a smooth, well defined path, interchange of checks with patrolmen met at the extremities of the beat and a return to the comforts of the station.

There are, doubtless, localities where the routes may be covered without overmuch expenditure of strength or discomfort, but such routes do not exist on the Peaked Hill shore. Patrol routes there are uniformly heartbreaking in their capacity for leg and lung exhaustion, their utter lack of path and guide mark, their uneven, miry nature and the countless pitfalls created by eddying winds and myriad bits of wreckage that strew the sands.

During pleasant weather, especially at low tide, the patrolling of Peaked Hill Beach is not a dangerous task. It is arduous, however, always, for the foot sinks ankle deep at every step in clogging sand, while the sloping strand renders imperative the employment of "a long leg and a short one," so Cape Codders say; and this patrol work contains an element of danger each time as the tide is high and the weather is stormy, compelling the patrolman to forsake the flooded beach for the rugged top of the precipitous sand bank that fronts the ocean. Patrol work then is an unenviable task, for of all mystifying routes the zigzagging, uneven banktop route of seamost Cape Cod is the worst.

At one step ice, at the next snow or sand is encountered. A stumble over a tiny hillock is succeeded by a plunge into an unseen hollow. The foot just now entangled in long, dried grass becomes embedded thigh deep in a snowdrift, and all manner of inequalities of footing succeed each other with exasperating frequency, while heavy falls occur occasionally, and danger of toppling to death over the bank edge is ever imminent.

When the stinging sleet of a winter night blinds his eyes the patrolman of the banktop route with difficulty distinguishes the cliff's verge, for the snow carpet at top and the yeast of the waves at the base look as one, calling for wariness if he would avoid a fall to death over the brink.

The wintry wind, laden with sea damps and cutting sands, buffets him sorely as, with shoulders bowed, he combats the gusts that seem aiming to prevent his progress. Cold, too, nipping cold, adds its pangs to the discomforts of the night, and the plodder longs for the warmth and quiet of his weather beaten station. Back and forth he must go, however, until, his watch ended, he gives place to one who, just emerged from warm blankets to face the night rigors, beholds, perhaps, a moment later a dim light oscillating above the worried waters in dangerous proximity to the bar.

In such event he maintains a sharp lookout. If the light grows smaller and fainter gradually he replaces the Coston signal, drawn for ignition, and resumes his weary march, knowing that the ship is laboring on the off shore bank; but should loudly flapping canvas, sudden outeries and the crash of breaking spars herald the stranding of the unknown, there straightway ensue a hurried run seaward, a sharp summons to duty, the dash of cart along unstable sands, the launch into a tocking arena where the yells of drowning men dominate the diapason of the elements and icy spray flies torrentlike before the blast.

In no locality along our coast can there be found a more perilous field for the exercise of the surfman's calling than that which offers on the ocean side of Provincetown.

The Baffling Shore Surf.

An unbroken waste of waters stretches from the shore line eastward to the Irish coast. During northerly and easterly gales huge walls of water, springing into being leagues away, sweep westward, gathering volume and impetus with every mile of distance traversed, to break and die in foam on the Cape sands.

They pile a shore surf that constitutes a baffling barrier to the would-be "launcher." Of great height, prodigious weight and surprising velocity, this gale wrought surf offers a moving bulwark whose surmounting demands untiring energy and consummate skill. Yet the labor of launching the lifeboat athwart that revolving liquid wall is as boy's play in comparison with the task of penetrating the double line of bar breakers further seaward.

Twin bars, each miles in length, extend parallel with each other and the convex shore, the outermost being one thousand yards from the beach and half of that distance seaward from its hidden mate.

These bars make for evil. But for their presence the majority of ships that were driven upon them by adverse winds would have struck the mainland, where rescue work would have been simplified and the loss of life been far less.

Beach ordnance is available in the majority of shipwrecks in most localities, but it has been shown repeatedly that rescue work cannot be effected by means of the Lyle or Hunt gun when ships become fixed on Peaked Hill bars during on-shore gales, the innermost one of the twain lying beyond gun range.

Main beach strandings occur rarely in the Peaked Hill zone. Almost all of the shipwrecks occur during the prevalence of heavy weather and while the wind is blowing "dead on shore." Communication with the distressed craft by means of gun cord and breeches buoy being denied, the Peaked Hill beach life saver must, perforce of circumstances, rely almost wholly upon his oar if he would carry succor to the dying.

No bit of coast on earth is better devised for the drowning of the stranded mariner than old Peaked Hill region. Not a cove or indentation of any sort cuts the beach. All launchings must be effected in the full swing of the shore surf.

In the event of a shipwreck on the bar the crew on whose bounds the wreck lies takes precedence in the matter of launching. The boat is rushed into the wash at the sea's margin. If life saving bands from neighboring stations are on the scene the launching crew spring to the thwarts and the oars. The crews of the other boats—brought to the spot on wheels—now cluster at the "launcher's" after end, and, holding the gunwales, "meet her"—that is, force the stern to right or left along the sands—in an endeavor to keep the bow pointed directly at the seas that rush upon her, and thus avoid swamping and overturning.

As soon as a favorable opportunity offers the keeper gives the command and the forward oarsmen ply their blades, while the swarming, half submerged fellow life savers at quarters and stern push vigorously. And then, while the shore surf curls straight overhead and cascades thunderously down upon boat and men, the boat, water borne but standing almost straight on end, moves slowly, draggingly ahead, clears the shore sands, dives through the first of a series of ponderous shore breakers, and, if successful, emerges half full of water beyond the shore seas at length, to be followed as soon as possible by another boat—the one to aid the other in the event of a capsize.

One thing can be said in favor of the bars—by breaking the initial force of the seas that roll in from oceanward they lessen to some extent the surf wall along the shore line, thereby making launching easier than would be the case if no bars existed.

But, rising as they do from a considerable depth to within a few feet of the sea's surface, their interposition occasions a disruption of the onswinging columns of water that results in a veritable maelstrom over all the shoal. The heads of seas are actually hurled from the main bodies through collision with the bars and, as a consequence, the waters are churned to a milky whiteness and made to dance fantastically.

The tortured bar waters leap and swing and revolve erratically. Unlike the waters of the open sea, which march onward with well defined ridges and pulselike regularity, these myriad fragments of disembodied waves halt seemingly and engage briefly in a whirl wind dance before resuming the boreward flight.

They fling ghostly arms high in air, pelt geysers at the low flying clouds; they mount in turn upon the shoulders of their fellows and, impelled by powerful counter currents that vex their bases, swing off at a tangent from their former courses, making long, mad flights and describing more than half circles ere they collapse in the general pandemonium of clamorous waters. And in point of ubiquitousness and force of upthrust they are the peers of the rapids of Niagara.

On the occasion of the wreck of the three-master Willie Higgins, March 31, 1898, the writer saw one portion after bit of Peaked Hill bar water leap suddenly skyward, bearing on its bosom the Race Point lifeboat and crew, and fall with such amazing abruptness as to leave the boat suspended in midair for just the briefest space of time. For an instant boat and crew were wholly out of water, enabling the onlooker to view the entire foreshortened craft. Instantly thereafter she was lost to sight in the cloud of sea spray caused by her reboarning. That actual experience of Captain Fisher and crew was unique, unparalleled doubtless in the world's history.

Owing to their head throwing practice-and-diverse direction of flight, the bar breakers are infinitely more dangerous than the worst waves of the open sea. Their aspect is horrifying, their clangor deafening. And they constitute the main arena of the gladiators of the coast guard.

Because of the turbulence of the inner bar seas the strength of the life savers is sometimes ineffectual and they are hurled back from their goal—hapless craft out on the shoal.

The chances for the saving of a crew wrecked on the inner bar are immeasurably greater than for one hung up on the outer range, for in addition to the advantage derived from the intervention of the vast hidden shoal to windward the greater nearness to shore makes for time saving and danger diminution.

Ships Break Up Like Matchwood.

Vessels which ground upon the outer bar during an on-shore gale never escape. The giant billows which pound that shoal almost invariably destroy vessels stranded there within a few minutes of the stranding.

The stoutest hull is as matchwood when exposed to the titanic blows of the seas, and in the inability of the hull to long withstand the pounding lies the greatest danger to the crew, since a certain time must elapse after the stranding before help can come, if at all, from the shore, and in the event of immediate or nearly immediate collapse of the vessel's fabric the only hope remaining to the sea wrapped mariner is that of being swept ashore or within the reach of the lifeboat men.

The bar seas batter the man overboard severely. Although life preserver enwrapped, he is more often beneath than above the surface, gyrated and tumbled heels over head by the riotous jumble of river waters. And if he emerges after only a few minutes of immersion, it is with clothing burdened with many pounds' weight of sand—the grains sucked from ocean's floor and held in solution actually being forced through the garments' filaments by the stupendous pressure of which those boiling waters are possessed.

The struggling man who is washed ashore at a gale lashed point not guarded by surfmen or others has not one chance in a thousand of escaping alive, for the cruel sea of the Peaked Hill beach region clings tenaciously to its prey. The horrible surf not only pounds and wrenches its victim, but it flings him headlong far up the strand only to drag him back and roll him over and over, as if in sport, in the undertow, and this alternate coasting and drawing continues until death mercifully intervenes.

A powerful longshore current ever in action east or west, with grip most potent at a point just outside of the shore surf's undertow, proves the despair of the swimmer who endures to the very gateway of salvation.

Two sailors who were swept swiftly shoreward on a plank from the Italian bark Giovanni on the afternoon of April 4, 1874, got within thirty feet of the land. There the longshore current seized the plank, completely checked its shoreward progress, and bore it sidewise, parallel with the beach. The two, pounded in rear by landward rushing waves and in flank by the undercurrent, were overridden repeatedly by the seas.

One man was swept away, but swam back and got a fresh grip on the plank, only to be washed off anew and perish in full view of the horrified spectators, who, keeping pace with the drifting plank adown the shore line, watched proceedings from the opposite side of the surf wall.

The other sailor was finally rescued by a beachcomber, who, with a line fastened around his waist, threw himself into the surf, was dragged outward by its recoil, fastened upon the drowning man and was hauled back to land by his comrades, holding stoutly to his living prize—only man saved of the bark's company of fourteen men.

Despite the celerity of the life savers, stranded vessels sometimes dissolve before the lifeboat can be got through the cordon of surf and the inner bar breakers. Life has been lost as the result of the almost instant dissolution of the ship, but, to the credit of the Peaked Hill men be it said, comparatively few of the multitude cast upon the bar since the erection of the life-saving stations have perished, though the calls of duty were frequent and urgent and the difficulties seemingly insurmountable.

Take the case of the Helmont. That craft struck the outer bar during a howling, snow laden gale and in a quarter of an hour was rent into chips, not a vestige of her remaining in sight. She collapsed like a punctured balloon while the Peaked Hill boat was half way between the shore surf and the inner bar, six of her crew perishing instantly. That crew had no apparent way of escape, yet the Race Point men, hurrying to the scene, pushed off to the sole sailor freighted fragment of floating wreckage and rescued three men, one of whom died the following night of injuries sustained in the disintegrating of the ship.

The bark Monte Tabor struck the bar at midnight and almost instantly succumbed to the furious waves. Directly after the stranding, and while the combers were thundering over the ship, smashing spars and bulwarks like straws, the captain, mate and cook calmly united suicide, deliberately took their own lives while under the spell of a perfect frenzy of fear. Whether the other two lost men died by drowning or their own hands could not be ascertained, for their bodies were never found. The life savers, unable to launch or perceive the bark's shattered material, took to the sea's margin and succeeded in rescuing seven men from floating debris, and they would have saved the entire crew, doubtless, had the knife and pistol not been called into play.

The loss of the men of the Helmont and Monte Tabor was beyond the power of the life savers to avert, the deaths occurring before the life savers could reach the scene or get their apparatus into position for relief work.

During the last quarter century nearly one hundred vessels, with crews numbering 1,100 men, have rushed upon the Peaked Hill shore. The rescue of 1,064 of those men was effected by the life savers of the Peaked Hill district.

To accomplish that good work numerous sallies into hideous jumbles of broken waters were required. Sometimes, but often, the beach gun and breeches buoy were used with telling effect. But by far the greater amount of good was wrought by means of the lifeboat—for this is a lifeboat field—and the deeds of daring performed on many occasions reflect glory and credit upon the entire service.

RÓBES HAND-WOVEN.

Cottage Looms in Suffolk at Work on Royal Velvet.

In the ancient borough of Sudbury in Suffolk the few remaining hand loom weavers are hard at work making the velvet for the coronation robes.

Among the number are the Misses Foakes, members of a family of weavers who in days past were makers of bunting for the royal navy. In their cottage, which was once visited by the Queen, are two hand looms on which are two lengths of beautiful velvet, one rich crimson in color and the other dark brown.

The weavers are seated when at their looms, their feet working pedals resembling those of an organ. There ar two sets of threads, the visible one forming the back of the material, and the other the pile, each of these being delicately threaded through vertical threads known as the harness. The weaver passes the shuttle backward and forward, and each warp and weft is pressed home by a swinging wooden frame. A cutter which runs across the loom on a wire cuts the threads to make the pile.

The process of manufacture is slow and tedious. The time is occupied not so much in the weaving as in the cleaning. At each foot or so made the weaver uses a curious knife like a spokeshave and shaves the surface of the velvet to clean it. There are now not more than thirty hand loom weavers left in Sudbury, the Misses Foalkes being among the number. The rows of weavers' cottages, now occupied by other artisans and general workers, show the extent of the industry fifty years ago.

Obstinate Open Sores are Healed by Zam-Buk

For sores which defy all ordinary remedies, Zam-Buk should be tried. Old wounds, varicose ulcers, cold cracks, blood-poisoning and chronic skin diseases cannot resist the healing influence of this great herbal balm.

Miss Alma Bourge, of Notre Dame, Kent Co., N.B., gives the following account of what Zam-Buk did for her after various other ointments and salves had failed. She writes:

"For months I suffered with a running sore on my leg. I tried several ointments and salves, but none of them could bring about a cure. The sore would just heal over, and then break out again. I read in a newspaper, one day, of the good Zam-Buk had done, and so I determined to try it and see what this balm would do for me. I also purchased some Zam-Buk Soap.

"I washed the sore night and morning with the soap, and then applied the balm. I continued with this treatment, and after using Zam-Buk for a few weeks the sore was completely healed. I have recommended Zam-Buk to one or two om my friends for sores and in their cases it has been equally effective."

All druggists and stores sell Zam-Buk at 50c. box or may be had post free from Zam-Buk Co., for price. It is a sure cure for piles, inflamed places, cuts, burns, scalds, chapped hands, ulcers, eczema, scalp sores, and all similar diseases and injuries. Refuse harmful imitations.

"Why didn't you say so in the first place?" asked the waitress. "You'd 'a' had 'em by this time."

"Well, of all things!" said the young man.

"I knew what he was drivin' at all the time," began the waitress as the young man departed. "But he's one of them fellers that thinks they can get by with anything. He don't know that they're using plain English now in restaurants."—Kansas City Times.

Knew Just How.

Many years ago in Paris at the first presentation of a tragedy that had for its closing scene the murder of a Swedish king which had taken place nearly half a century earlier all went well till the murder scene came on, when a very dignified old gentleman in the stage box showed signs of strong dissatisfaction and at length called out angrily:

"Absurd! They've got it all wrong!"

The manager himself heard this plain spoken comment, and, being naturally disturbed by so sweeping a condemnation, he sought out the critic and politely begged to know what fault he had to find with it.

"Why, my good sir," cried the old man, with an air of authority, "the whole grouping of the scene is incorrect! You have made them kill the king to the right of the door, whereas we murdered him on the left!"

WHERE COOK'S MEN DIED.

Interesting Relics of Massacre Discovered Recently.

The exact spot where 10 members of Capt. Cook's expedition were massacred by the Maoris 137 years ago has been definitely determined, and some interesting relics of the ancient tragedy discovered by Robert McNab in Grass Cove, Queen Charlotte Sound.

It may, perhaps, be remembered that on Dec. 17, 1773, the captain of the Adventure sent two officers and eight men across the sound to gather wild geese for the ship's company. They failed to return, and searchers who were sent out finally discovered evidence of a tragedy in a number of baskets containing human flesh and fern root, also a hand of a white man. Grass Cove was previously conjectured to be the scene of the ancient tragedy, but Mr. McNab, however, has settled the question once and for all by discovering the exact spot where the Englishmen were murdered.

After Mr. McNab and the party of friends with him had decided that the massacre took place in a certain bend in Grass Cove—a conclusion to which they came by comparing the locality with the description given in Cook's popers—they went ashore and spoke to a settler, Mr. Greensill, who was living on the spot, regarding any evidence of the massacre that he may have seen. Mr. Greensill said he had dug up in his garden an old flintlock, a barrel, a bayonet, and some other kind of a weapon he was unable to identify.

This latter weapon Mr. McNab at once identified as an officer's hanger, which was doubtless the one used by Midshipman Rowe, who was in charge of the boat's crew. There was a description of the sword given in the accounts and they corresponded exactly with the weapon dug up.

It was with that hanger that Midshipman Rowe killed two Maoris and wounded the chief before being overpowered and killed. This discovery places beyond a shadow of a doubt the exact locality of the massacre, which took place on the spot now occupied as Mr. Greensill's garden in Grass Cove. Mr. McNab discountenances the idea that the weapon may have been carried there from the fact that the locality exactly corresponds with the description given by Capt. Cook.—London Standard.

PALE, ANAEMIC GIRLS

The languid, semi-invalid girl is no longer popular. Firm flesh, rounded form and a healthy glow to the complexion are the results of using Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food. Mrs. Goodson, 104 Sebastopol St., Montreal, Que., writes: "My daughter's appetite was bad and she was pale and bloodless. Since using Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food there is a marked change in her condition. She is stronger and healthier in every way."

A Famous Parlor Maid.

Sydney Smith, the famous author and wit, in describing his early married life in a Yorkshire parsonage told how he made a butler out of a village girl:

"A manservant was too expensive, so I caught up a little garden girl made like a milestone, christened her Bunch, put a napkin in her hand and made her my butler. The girls taught her to read, Mrs. Sydney to wait, and I undertook her morals. Bunch became the best butler in the county."

But Bunch was not merely butler—she was valet too. A visitor thus describes her:

"Coming down one morning, I found Bunch pacing up and down the passage before her master's door in a state of great perturbation.

"'What is the matter, Bunch?'

"'Oh, ma'am, I can't get no peace of mind till I've got master shaved, and he's so late this morning!'

"This 'getting master shaved' consisted in making ready for him with a large painter's brush a thick lather in a huge wooden bowl as big as Mambrino's helmet, which she always considered as the most important avocation of the morning."

When the Danes Were Skinned.

In former times the Danes used to sail up the mouths of the English rivers to pillage the churches. When they were caught they were skinned and their skins nailed to the door of the church they attacked. In course of time all the exposed portions would peel off, but that covered by the nail would be protected and thus bear testimony to the cruelty of the ancient Englishmen. In the London College of Surgeons may be seen three specimens of human skin bearing labels such as this: "Portion of human skin said to be that of a Dane from the door of a church at Hadstock, in Essex." A second specimen is from Copford, in Essex, and a third from the north door of Worcester cathedral. Such fragments of sacrilegious Danish hide have been found on doors in Westminster abbey.

GREAT SALT LAKE.

Plan to Transform Part of it Into a Body of Fresh Water.

A remarkable engineering feat is being considered in Utah, the aim being to convert a portion of Salt lake into a body of fresh water. This is an ancient dream long deemed impossible of fulfillment, but the present plans give promise of proving successful. If it is, then will be witnessed a transformation as complete as has ever been seen upon the wastes of the west, where irrigation has converted barren deserts into fruitful gardens.

The plan of the engineers is to build a dam across the eastern eftremity of the lake, where the principal streams that feed the body flow into it. This dam is to be seventy feet higher than the present water level, and the design is to divide the lake into two parts. The theory is that the water will flow into the first lake, rise to a level with the dam and then tumble into the other section. The water in the first division will move constantly and, according to the theory of the engineers, will retain its freshness, while that in the lower lake will continue to be briny, as at present. If the plan proves successful it is believed that the territory adacent to the lake can be made highly attractive, giving it infinite possibilities as a summer resort.—Exchange.

HERE IS A TALE WITH A MORAL

Little Edith Harris Cured of Dropsy by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Two doctors said she would die, but to-day she is a healthy, happy girl.—Healthy Kidneys in children the guarantee of a happy, useful life.

McTaggart, Sask., Feb. 20.—(Special).—That no child is too young to have Kidney Diseases even in its worst form, and that Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure it in any form has been abundantly proven in the case of little Edith Harris of this place.

In May, 1903, this little girl, then two years old, was so swollen with Dropsy that her waist measure was increased from 18 inches to 34 inches. Two doctors said she must die. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured her and to-day she is as merry and healthy a child as is to be found in the neighbourhood.

In a recent interview her father says: "Edith is better than ever. She has no return of dropsy since she was cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills, over seven years ago. She goes to school and is healthy. I always keep Dodd's Kidney Pills in the house."

There's a moral for parents in this story. Many a child has grown up to a life of pain and suffering because its kidneys were neglected. A life of health and usefulness is assured if the Kidneys are kept in order with Dodd's Kidney Pills.

USE OF THE FLAG.

National and State Laws in Reference to Advertising.

The following states have statutes which, among other things, make it a misdemeanor to sell, expose for sale or have in possession for sale any article of merchandise upon which shall have been printed or placed for purposes of advertisement a representation of the flag of the United States:

Arizona, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Idaho, Indiana, Illinois, Kansas, Maine, Massachusetts, Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, New Hampshire, New York, North Dakota, Nebraska, Ohio, Oregon, Rhode Island, Utah, Vermont, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

While over half of the states have enacted such statutes, congress appears to have established no regulations as to such use of the flag except that contained in the act of 1907, authorizing the registration of trademarks in commerce with foreign nations and among the states, "unless such mark consists of or comprises the flag or coat of arms or other insignia of the United States or any simulation thereof."—Case and Comment.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

ON Jan. 14, after a two weeks' trial, one of my friends gave over her New Year's resolution.

The resolution was to take every day, night and morning, a certain set of exercises which a first doctor had promised would correct the ungainly stoop, broaden the narrow shoulders and improve the sallow complexion which kept my friend from being a pretty girl.

Incidentally, of course, the exercises would also vastly improve her health, but the young lady in question, being at an age when appearance is paramount, that was the bait which was used to lure her to make the resolution.

My friend gave up the exercises, she pointed out to me, when I expressed my regret, not because she hadn't the backbone to keep them up—not at all. If they had been doing her any good, she would gladly have kept them up until doomsday. But she couldn't see that they were. Her mirror told her as plainly as ever that she was still narrow shouldered and stooping and sallow.

And she had taken the exercise two weeks.

And she had been acquiring that narrow chest and stooping shoulders and sallow skin about eighteen years.

Wasn't that logic for you?

And yet it's the logic that kills enough good resolutions and reforms to make us a world of healthy, wealthy and wise men and women.

Rome was not built in a day.

But it might quite as easily have been as a good complexion or a good figure or a sweet disposition.

I know a girl who by strictly adhering to certain facial treatment for a year has won for herself a good complexion. The change in the last few months is startling. But for the first few months she worked without any apparent results.

Because she had the common sense not to expect a miracle and the courage to keep on without one, she won out.

The bulldog tenacity to hang on during that time before apparent results make hanging on seem worth while—isn't that one of the characteristics that has conquered the world?

Seldom is a fortune made without it, never is a character built, good health gained, or a reform put through without it.

The world is full of failures who failed just because they couldn't get along with apparent results in a day.

When you have reached the crest of the hill and are going down with the momentum of success behind you it's easy enough to keep on going.

It's climbing the hill with the back-pull of no apparent results that show a man's mettle.

Courage, comrade on the up-slope; think what fun it will be going down

MARKET REPORTS.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Lower—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, Feb. 20.—Snow aided the bears to-day in the wheat market. At the close prices showed a net decline of ½c to ¾c to 1¼c. The day's trading left corn ⅛c to ¼c off, oats down a shade, to ⅛c, and provisions varying from 5c lower to 7½c advance.

LIVERPOOL, Feb. 20.—The market at the opening showed a steady undertone with prices ½c higher on the steadier American cables on Saturday and the decrease in local stocks here. Following the opening the market was depressed with a lower tendency and values declined ½d with the undertone heavy. Pressure resulted from the liberal American shipments and larger Russian shipments for the week than expected. Russian shipments amounted to 2,178,000 bushels, against 2,784,000 bushels last week. The amount on passage showed a large increase.

CATTLE MARKETS.

LIVERPOOL, Feb. 20.—John Rogers & Co., Liverpool, cable to-day that trade was very slow in the Birkenhead Market, but prices generally were well maintained and ruled as follows: States steers from 12½c to 13c, and Canadians from 12½c to 12¾c per lb.

Union Stock Yards.

TORONTO, Feb. 20.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Stock Yards were 110 carloads, consisting of 2268 cattle, 229 hogs, 592 sheep and lambs, and 30 calves.

Exporters.

E. L. Woodward bought for Swift & Co. 386 cattle for export, as follows: Steers for London 147, averaging 1260 lbs., at $6.06, or a range of $6 to $6.10; 3 heifers, 1060 lbs., at $5.10; 12 bulls, 1450 lbs. each, at an average of $5.20, or a range of $5.15 to $5.25.

Butchers.

Butchers' cattle were lower in sympathy with the exporters, selling from 10c to 15c lower, and in some instances the light unfinished grades were reported 25c per cwt. lower. Prime picked lots sold at $5.40 to $5.50; loads of good, $5.25 to $5.35; medium, $5.00 to $5.20; common, $4 to $4.75; bulls, $4.25 to $5.00; cows, $3 to $4.50; canners, $2 to $3.25.

Milkers and Springers.

A moderate number of milkers and springers sold at $40 to $65.

Veal Calves.

Veal calves, 42 of which there were 20 reported on sale, sold at $5.50 to $8.50 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Five hundred and thirty-two sheep and lambs sold as follows: Sheep, ewes, $4 to $4.60; rams, $3.50 to $3.75; lambs, $6 to $6.40, and one or two selected lots sold at $6.50 and $6.65, weighing 90 lbs. each. Wesley Dunn reports the lamb trade dull and sure to go lower.

Hogs.

Selects, fed and watered at the market, $7.25 and $7.50 to drovers for hogs, f.o.b., cars at country points were the prices quoted by all dealers here to-day, with 10c per cwt. deducted for all thick fat heavy hogs.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Feb. 20.—At the Montreal Stock Yards West End Market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending Feb. 18 were 2200 cattle, 225 sheep and lambs, 2250 hogs and 250 calves. The offerings on the market this morning were 1000 cattle, 125 sheep and lambs, 1000 hogs and 200 calves.

The supply of cattle was a little larger than a week ago, but this fact seemed to have no depressing on the market as values were firmly maintained. The weather was decidedly cold, which tended to curtail the demand some, as the attendance of buyers was not as large as usual, but on the other hand a very fair trade was done and as the close few were left over.

There is no change in prices here to note, sales of choice steers being made at 6¼c, good at 6¼c to 6½c, fairly good at 6c to 6¼, fair at 5½c to 5¾c, and the lower grades at 4½c to 5c per lb. Some of our loads of extra heavy cows and bulls calmed were made at 5½c per lb.

There was a somewhat unsettled feeling in the market for hogs, notwithstanding that the offerings were smaller. Packers in some cases tried to get prices down by only bidding $7.25 to $7.50 per cwt. for selected lots, which drovers would not accept, and in consequence trade in the early part of the day was slow as the buying was left to one concern, who paid the same prices as ruled last Wednesday, viz., $7.65 to $7.75 per cwt. for selected lots, weighed off the cars.

A feature of the market for small meats is the high prices that are being demanded for calves and spring lambs, $16 per head being paid for choice stock of the former and $8 for ordinary ones, while spring lambs sold at $12 to $14 each, at which figures butchers state they stand to lose from $1 to $4 per head, according to the prices they are realizing for them in a retail way. Sheep are steady at four cents to 4½c and lambs, at 6c to 6½c per pound.

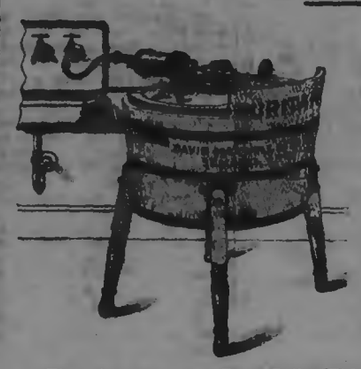
Don't Miss Seeing the MAXWELL House and Garden Specialties

At the Hardware Dealers' Convention



Every woman, or man either, who is interested in the easiest and most up-to-date way of doing what used to be the heaviest tasks around the house, should certainly see the MAXWELL exhibit in the Armouries. It will be on view from February 21st to 24th, and is open to everybody.

MAXWELL Washing Machines are there in several styles — Electric, Puritan, Water, Motor Washers, Champion High Speed Washers, Blue Belle Washers—each run by a different method, each the leader of its type. Whatever style you like best, you are sure of satisfaction if it's a MAXWELL.

Then there are the Blue Belle Wringers—The very finest made, with covered cog wheels, ball bearings and solid rubber rolls, guaranteed for five years: The MAXWELL "FAVOURITE" Churn, whose sales are bigger than those of all other churns sold in Canada combined: MAXWELL Lawn Mowers, famous for their clean even cutting, easy running and long wearing qualities: MAXWELL Wheelbarrows in nine different styles, from the steel Mortar Barrow to the light Garden type.

We extend to you a most cordial invitation to come in and look over the MAXWELL specialties, for we believe you will find it well worth while.

CANADA'S FUTURE.

A British Official's Tour and His Opinion.

Of late years the Colonial Office has adopted the excellent policy of making their officials familiar with the Overseas Dominions at first hand. Mr. H. W. Just, of the Dominions branch of the Colonial Office, and the permanent secretary of the Imperial Conference, has just returned to his official duties after a tour of eight weeks in Canada. "It was not my first experience of the Dominions," said Mr. Just, "for Mr. Chamberlain took me out with him on his tour in South Africa. My recent journey in Canada arose from the Conference of 1907, when several members gave expression to the view that it would be an advantage if members of the Colonial Office, especially those in the Dominions Department, had personal acquaintance of the countries with which they had business dealings. It was with this idea in view that I went to Canada, and I do not wish to pose in any way as an expert on Canadian business affairs. I have been simply a traveler, taking a traveler's hasty view. I landed at Quebec from the Empress of Britain, saw Montreal, stayed for a few days at the Government House at Ottawa, and then went straight across to Vancouver and British Columbia. On my way back East I dropped off at various places, such as the Okanagan Valley, for the fruit farming, and the Arrow Lake. Two days I spent at Banff, a place of great resort for Canadians in the summer. One great attraction there is the National Park, where herds of moose and a few of the remaining buffaloes are kept. Sir Wilfrid Laurier was there at the time, and I had a long conversation with him, but the matter was entirely confidential.

Canada made a great impression on me. It is a land of immense possibilities which few of us in this country are able to realise without actually visiting there. On every hand I saw evidence that the Canadians were taking full advantage of the enormous possibilities of their country in wheat growing, mining, or fruit farming. But the land as compared with the people is out of all proportion. The country is crying aloud for a larger population, and a larger population it must have if its development is to proceed on the truest lines. This applies more particularly in Western Canada and British Columbia. In those parts of the country the skilled agricultural laborer and the farmer are wanted, men who have an expert knowledge of land and are able to put it to good use. Much of the land in favorable situations, that is, in near proximity to the railway line, is taken up, but as the railway system extends this difficulty will be met."

Mr. Just's attention was called to the recent importation of Canadian peaches into England. "This is almost what I expected. They came from Ontario, I believe, but districts further west, British Columbia, for instance, are growing fine fruit. The question is: How can you get fruit from those far-away places into the English market? To the original cost has to be added the cost of freight over many thousands of miles of land and sea. At the present time British Columbia is supplying the country as far east as Winnipeg with fruit, but the British Columbians want to do greater things and extend the sphere of their operations. In respect of fruit the people of Winnipeg are fortunately situated. A great deal of the early fruit from California is sent to that city, and later in the year they reap the advantage of the British Columbian harvests." Mr. Just said that his knowledge of the fisheries of British Columbia would not allow him to pass judgment on the suggestion of Sir George Doughty, M.P., for introducing a race of white fishermen on the coast. But he pointed out that the fishing industry of that province is largely in the hands of the colored races. Railway development had interested him greatly, especially the construction of the Hudson Bay Railway, the first sod of which has already been cut.

SUFFERED THREE YEARS

Till Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cured his Kidney Trouble

There are few diseases that cause more acute suffering than Kidney Trouble, and Mr. F. A. Thomas, of Sudbury Ont., is one of those who know it. He writes:

"For over three years I suffered from kidney disease. First I thought I had sprained my back, for suddenly the pain would catch the small of my back and it would be impossible for me to straighten myself up for several minutes. A dull ache across the kidneys was always present, my urine was thick and cloudy, and passing it caused a burning, scalding pain. Tried medicines, but they failed. I was advised to try Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, as they had cured my wife years before. A few bones affected a complete cure. I now enjoy the blessings of good health, which is due to this remedy."

Don't neglect kidney trouble—it's too dangerous as well as too painful. That old, reliable family remedy, Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, has cured thousands and will cure you. It is equally effective in curing constipation and its attendant evils, biliousness, indigestion and sick headaches, and in purifying the blood. 25c a box at your druggist's. 10

So, it's with an appreciation of the incident borne at his expense that he tells of what happened to him in Ireland a couple of years ago.

Mr. Wilkinson was one of a party of about sixty on a trip through the Old Land. In a hotel at which they stayed in Killarney, the maid said to him one morning, "And how did your good wife sleep last night?"

"I don't know," was the answer.

"You don't know?" said the maid.

"My wife is about three thousand miles away," said Mr. Wilkinson.

The maid looked at him from head to foot and then said, "Oh, I beg your pardon. I took you for another little ould man."

"Do the stars have to be repaired, pa?"

"I never heard that they did. Where did you get that idea?"

"I have been reading about fixed stars, and I supposed that somebody had to fix them."

THE HUGE HARDWARE CONVENTION NOW OPEN

MAYOR MORROW EXTENDS FORMAL WELCOME ON BEHALF OF CITIZENS

Opening Session of the Big Convention Was Held This Afternoon in the Band Room in the Armouries---President and Secretary Make Reports---Exhibition is in Full Swing Now and a Magnificent Success.

A MAGNIFICENT DISPLAY OF HARDWARE ACCESSORIES

CONVENTION TIME.

(Tune—The Good Old Summer Time.)
There's a time in each year that we always hold dear,
Our convention time,
When we meet some retailers and jolly wholesalers,
Our convention time,
When stock-taking is over and we are in clover,
And life is one beautiful rhyme,
No troubles annoying, each one is enjoying,
Our glad convention time.

In hardware convention time,
In hardware convention time,
Meeting together once a year,
With a crowd so fine,
You shake our hand and we'll shake yours
And that's a very good sign
We're bound to be bigger and greater than ever
From this convention time.

The sixth annual convention of the Ontario Retail Hardware and Stove Dealers' Association is now in full swing, the exhibition opening this morning at 9 o'clock, while the first session of the convention was held this afternoon when the delegates were formally welcomed to Peterborough by His Worship Mayor Morrow on behalf of the citizens.

There is no doubt as to the success of the event. The attendance promises to be very large. Already the city is packed full of exhibitors and travellers and the retail merchants have been arriving on every train to-day. To-morrow will see the attendance at its highest mark. Not only is every part of of Ontario represented, but there are delegates present from the Eastern and Western Provinces as well., while among the exhibitors are manufacturers from different points in the United States, giving some idea of the wide range of the Association's influence and the importance of the convention. There was a large attendance of exhibitors and retail men in the band room of the armouries this afternoon when President D. Cinnamon, of Lindsay, the president of the Association, took the chair and called the convention to order. His Worship Mayor Morrow was present to welcome the delegates to Peterborough.

THE ADDRESS OF WELCOME.

Mayor Morrow read the following address:

Mr. President and Members of the Ontario Retail Hardware and Stove Dealers Association:—

Gentlemen:— It is with a great deal of pleasure that I give you, on behalf of the Council and citizens of Peterborough, a hearty welcome to our city. We were greatly pleased when we learned that you would hold your annual convention and exhibition here. It is a pleasure to welcome visitors, and especially in the case of your Association, which is composed of men engaged in important lines of business in all parts of the Province. We are glad also to have present representatives of important manufacturing industries from different centres in Canada and from the United States. We give you all the heartiest welcome and hope that you will make yourselves thoroughly at home while you are here.

We are pleased that you are holding your convention here, because we wish you to become acquainted or better acquainted with Peterborough. You are no doubt particularly interested in all that pertains to hardware, and our stores in this line of business, wholesale and retail, we think you will find to be a credit to the trade and to the city, while our factories that produce goods which are dealt in by members of the Association are among the important industries of the city and turn out a class of articles that take a place second to none. We hope you will visit these industries, and not only these, for as business men interested in all that relates to the industrial advancement of the country you will find much in the important industries located here worthy of your attention. We are not a little proud of our industrial growth which has been so rapid that the value of the products of our industries was nearly quadrupled in five years, and we are looking for still greater things.

In other respects our city holds a position of which we are not ashamed. You have seen our armouries, and the Collegiate Institute, our chief municipal educational institution, and we have several fine public schools, as well as a Provincial Normal school for the training of teachers, all well equipped and officered. Other public buildings, such as the Public Library and government offices and the churches, Young Men's and Young Women's Associations buildings, hospitals, Opera House, Conservatory of Music and a number of others, are creditable and worthy of inspection, as the parks would be if this were the season in which they could be seen to advantage. Even now those who have not seen the lift lock on the canal should take advantage of the opportunity to inspect this great feat of engineering.

I hope your sessions will be profitable, that the exhibitors will reap many advantages from the excellent exhibition which you have arranged, and that every visitor will have a thoroughly enjoyable as well as profitable time, and that you will be so well pleased that you will before long return.

After the annual address by the President, Secretary Wrigley presented the following report:

Gentlemen.—In making my fifth annual report I wish to refer first of all to the hearty support given me by the officers you selected at London a year ago. With hardly an exception I received replies to my letters by return mail, and when meetings of the various committees were called every member responded. Comparisons are always odious so I won't compare. But credit should be given where due and I must particularly commend the keen interest taken in the Association work by President Cinnamon and Vice-President Chown. They have given me a great deal of work to do, their letters being full of practical suggestions. If Mr. Chown's work during the past year is anything to judge by, he will be a worthy successor to the President's chair during the year to come. That old stand-by, John Caslor, has also been an invaluable co-worker, and his sound sense and keen judgment have helped me very much in making the arrangements for the successful exhibition we have in connection with this convention.

A Secretary's job is no sinecure, as many of you know by experience, but when a secretary has the co-operation of a willing corps of officers, and realizes that his work is appreciated by the members, he is willing to 'sit up nights and disregard the calls of "come to bed."

Reference might also be made to the broadening out of our Association work by the appointment of a larger number of committees. Last fall special work was assigned to various members, and with few exceptions, the assignments made were accepted. As a result several of the committees were already organized, and had their work planned by correspondence before the President's gavel was raised in opening the Convention. This presages success and indicates that at this, and future conventions, "business" will come first and a "good time" will be looked for inside the walls of the convention and exhibition halls.

Admit Clerks to Membership.

The growth of the Association membership has been very encouraging, and for the first time in our history we have over 300 members in good standing on our books. It is probable that the 350 figure will be reached before the close of this Convention.

Two suit-cases were offered as prizes last spring to the travellers and retailers who secured the largest number of new members. The following retailers secured one or more new members, but none reached the minimum of six: R. C. Chown, Belleville; J. R. Hambly, Barrie; H. P. Morgan, Peterborough; W. A. Rankin, Ottawa; John Caslor, Toronto; W. F. Macpherson, Prescott, W. W. Bennett, Gananoque; C. W. Conn, Tillsonburg; W. J. Bell, Beeton, and S. B. McClung, Trenton. Amongst the travellers, W. B Screaton of the McClary, Mfg. Co., London, secured six; and J. W. Gallaugher, of D. Maxwell & Sons, St. Marys, five; P. A. Cheevers, of the Metal Shingle and Siding Co., Preston; Tom Wright of H. S. Howland, Sons & Co., Toronto, and L. J. Levy, of Boeckh Bros. Co., Toronto, also showed keen interest in enrolling new members. Mr. Screaton is the winner of the suit case.

The enrollment of 85 travelling salesmen as associate members of our Association last year is an indication of the increased interest being taken in our organization by

A SOURCE OF MUCH REJOICING

Has Been the Great Success of the Effort to Procure a Set of Chimes for Peterborough — Mr. Dumble's Appreciation

"PROMOTERS" OF HARMONY

The following letter, published in the public interest, speaks for itself:

Peterborough, Feb. 20th, 1911.

Rev. J. C. Davidson, M. A., City—

Dear Sir,—The great success which has crowned your effort to procure a complete set of bells for chimes is to me, as no doubt it is to all our citizens, a source of much rejoicing. No more interesting feature could be added to our beautiful little city, and no more appropriate site could have been selected for those bells than the picturesque tower of your beautiful church. The unanimity of approval and support given you in the matter is very gratifying. I am told that those who worship on the western hill to the number of considerably over one hundred contributed to these chimes. This is, indeed, as it should be. May the harmony of the bells ever be a promoter of harmony and good will amongst all who in common citizenship worship our common Lord. Please accept from me the enclosed further contribution to the chimes.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

D. W. DUMBLE

THE TERRIBLE STATE OF AFFAIRS IN CHINA

The Rev. D. McGillivray writes from Shanghai, quoting a correspondent of the 'North China Daily News,' under date of Jan. 11, as follows, concerning the famine around Suchien, in the province of Kiangsu:

'The Famine Relief Committee organized in Shanghai, acting in the strong faith that the benevolent would liberally respond to their appeals, have borrowed money sufficient to begin the relief work at places. Protestant and Catholic missionaries vie with one another in offering their services in distributing relief. But since the committee was formed they have received numerous appeals from other places where the famine is little if any less severe. Whether these or other places shall receive any help depends on the liberality of Canadian American and British friends. The weather has recently been exceedingly cold and the mortality among the refugees has already been severe. Many of the aged, the women and children, and the weak in body have already perished. May God in his mercy move those who have, to give liberally and quickly 'ere it is too late.'

Mr. John Crane, of the Dominion Bank is prepared to receive contributions to this fund.

TOLD DOCTOR HE FELT LIKE DOING MISCHIEF

William James' Mind Has Been a Blank Since December ---Left West With $200 and Arrived Here in a Lumberman's Outfit Without a Cent---Appears in Court.

THE CASE REMANDED FOR MORE PARTICULARS

A man named Wm. James appeared in the police court this morning, charged with being insane and dangerous to be at large. The Chief explained that the prisoner's mind had been a blank since last December. He said that he had been in the asylum in the west from September to February. It appears that the prisoner's parents are well-to-do people in the old country, his father being an emigration officer. James had been working on two sections of land in the west which his father had purchased for him on his yearly trips to Canada. When he left the West he had $200 and his ticket with him, and when he landed in this city he was attired in a lumber jack's outfit, without either money or ticket. He is unable to remember anything, not even where he got his last meal. He could remember picking himself up off the ice in front of the armouries yesterday. He wandered into the office of a local physician yesterday afternoon and stated that he felt very funny, and felt like doing mischief. He was examined by Dr. McPherson, also at the police station, but the doctor could not understand his case. He related to the police a story of being slugged on the back of the head in the west and attributes his ailment to this cause. The Chief requested that he be remanded until the particulars could be ascertained. The Magistrate remanded him until his father could be communicated with.

George Doald, a Peterborough man, was charged with indecent exposure, the location of the offence being on Hunter street out at the west end. He pleaded drunkenness. The same man was in the police court yesterday morning on a charge of drunkenness. The case was remanded for a week until full information of the case can be gotten.

STRATTON AND WARREN KNEW NOTHING WRONG IN REGARD TO THE LOAN

Ex-Manager Travers This Afternoon Stated That it Was Obtained From the Trusts and Guarantee Company in the Ordinary Way.

Special Wire to The Examiner.

TORONTO, FEB. 21.—J. R. Stratton, M.P., and J. J. Warren, Manager of the Trusts and Guarantee Co., were interested defendants present this morning at the police court, when the charges of conspiracy against them and the provisional directors of the Farmers' Bank were resumed. ex-Manager Travers looking none the worse for his flying trip to Kingston, was the chief witness. He said the loan was obtained from the Trusts Company in the ordinary way, and he had no notion that either Mr. Warren or Mr. Stratton knew anything wrong about it. Travers said he thought he could have weathered the storm were it not for trouble with his manager.

ASQUITH INTRODUCES LONG PROMISED VETO BILL

Examiner Special.

LONDON, FEB. 21.—Premier Asquith's long-promised bill to abolish the veto power of the House of Lords, was introduced in the Commons this morning, and promises to occasion a crisis, and change in the constitutional government of Great Britain. The Bill provides that if a money bill, including all measures for regulation of the tariff and taxation having been passed by the Commons, is not passed by the House of Lords, within a month it shall, unless the Commons otherwise directs, be presented to His Majesty, and become law, upon the Royal assent, notwithstanding that the Lords have not considered the bill. Other provisions of the act, make it possible that in the case of a rejection of a bill by the Lords, for three successive sessions, it shall become law, without submission to the Lords at all. In introducing the bill, Premier Asquith characterized the rejection of the budget by the Lords in 1909 as the most stupendous political blindness ever perpetrated. "On that fatal day," said Asquith, "the Lords knew they were committing political suicide."

Lesder Balfour, answering Asquith, said the Government has no warrant from the people for such a revolutionary and unwarranted legislation as proposed.

WAS PAID IN EXCESS AND RETURNED THE AMOUNT

TORONTO, FEB. 21.—Wm. Greenwood, General Manager of the Equity Fire Insurance Co., said to-day "It may be of interest to your readers, as something unusual, to know that the Equity Fire Insurance Co. has received a cheque for its parts of $1600 which Mr. A. W. Cressman, of Peterborough, has returned, after discovering that he had been paid in excess of his actual loss by fire which occurred in his store last August."

NEW YORK CITY, FEB. 21.—Rich but without a country that will shelter her, is Madame Helen Soloff, a Russian exile, who arrived aboard the St. Korona to-day, but was not admitted to land on instruction from the Russian government. She was also refused admittance into Great Britain and now she proposes to try Canada. Her baggage was transferred into vessel bound for St. John, N.B.

GIN PILLS SAVED HIM

513 James St., Hamilton, Ont.

"Five years ago, I was taken down with what the doctors called Inflammation of The Bladder—intense pains in back and loins, and difficulty in urinating, and the attacks, which became more frequent, amounted to unbearable agony. I became so weak that I could not walk across the floor.

My wife read in the papers about GIN PILLS and sent for a box. From the very first, I felt that GIN PILLS were doing me good. The pain was relieved at once and the attacks were less frequent.

In six weeks, the Stone in the Bladder came away. When I recall how I suffered and how now I am healthy and able to work, I cannot express myself strongly enough when I speak of what GIN PILLS have done for me." John Herman. 48

SUBSTITUTE FOR ARGUMENT.

The patriotism is spurious that exploits the flag and the sacred intrests it stands for to the purpose of party politics. The yellow journals who most fiercely oppose reciprocity do so on the ground that it will bring annexation—a most palpable absurdity to any one that takes the time to think a moment. Last year the trade between Canada and the United States amounted to 350 millions of dollars, and there never was a whisper of annexation till the yellow politicians and the yellow journals, had in default of any other adverse argument, to raise that cry. No one in his sober senses, thinks for a moment that increasing our trade with our neighbours a hundred million more, will have any effect in the direction of annexation. There may be reasonable arguments, both for and against the proposed trade agreement, but annexation has no more to do with its merits or demerits, cuts no more figure, than the change of the moon. It's only Dr. Johnson's "scoundrel" who makes patriotism or the prostitution of patriotism, his last refuge, that sees anything like annexation in the trade agreement, and he only sees it with his party-blind eye, and has no belief in it.

WELCOME.

The sixth annual convention of the Ontario Retail Hardware and Stove Dealers' Association is in session in the city. The Examiner, on behalf of Peterborough, extends a most cordial welcome to the members and hopes that their deliberations will be successful and conduce to the promotion of the very important interests the Association represents. As an earnest of our welcome we have had placed at their disposal, safe and commodious quarters, the Armouries, which are necessary for the purposes of the Association. They have taken possession and converted the immense floor space into a miniature business city, with streets for the disposal and display in booths of the countless articles produced and handled by the Association. An exhibition of articles will be held on Wednesday night, when the Armouries will be opened to the public, who will be well repaid for a visit by a view of the thousands of articles that enter so intimately into our every-day lives. The machinery of cooking and cutlery, the locks and bolts and bars that give convenience and safety to our dwellings, all have an interest for us; and it is only when all these conveniences in modern life are brought so secretly to our attention, as now in Peterborough, that we appreciate their importance. Not only do the members gain by exchange of ideas and experience in the deliberations of the Association, but the perpetual exhibit constitutes an object lesson which enlarges their knowledge of the trade in regard to the improvements and inventions continually being added to their stock-in-trade, so to speak. We urge our citizens to show the welcome we all extend to our guests by not only extending every possible courtesy, but also by taking a practical interest by visiting the exhibition, which, in addition to its intrinsic interest, will be brightened by an band concert. Welcome, and this makes it thrice welcome, the Hardware and Stovedealers' Association.

MAYOR MORROW EXTENDS FORMAL WELCOME ON BEHALF OF CITIZENS

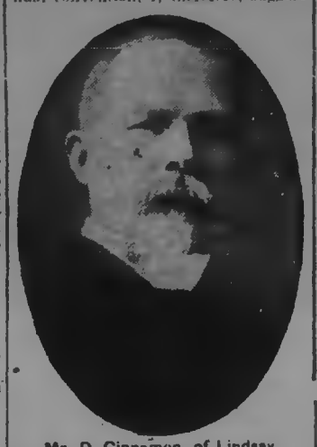
our traveller friends, and the wisdom of opening our doors to the travellers will not be disputed.

Another step farther should now be taken and provision made for the enrollment of retail salesmen, the merchants of to-morrow, into our Association as junior members, at a nominal fee of $1.00, yearly. From our first convention, in 1906, until the present, we have had retail salesmen in attendance at our meetings, and some who first attended as assistants now attend as merchants. In Great Britain the Ironmongers Assistants have an organization of their own, but in this country the best plan would, probably be to form a clerks' branch of our Association, just as we now have a travellers' branch, both clerks and travellers electing a chairman to act for them in bringing matters regarding their branches before our executive or annual convention. I, therefore, suggest



Mr. D. Cinnamon, of Lindsay
President of the Association, Who Presided at the Opening Session of the Convention This Afternoon

the addition of the following clause to our Constitution:

"Article 2, section 3—Any clerk, manager, etc., engaged in a retail hardware store in the Province of Ontario shall be eligible for junior membership in our Association on payment of an annual fee of $1.00."

International Affiliation.

Several letters have been received during the past year, asking our Association to affiliate with the International Federation of Ironmongers' Associations, which is composed of Hardware Associations representing several European countries, as well as the National Retail Hardware Association of the United States. The Affiliation fee is only $10, annually, and as the affiliation may be of advantage in securing information on the subject of parcels post laws in other countries, I recommend that we affiliate as requested.

In connection with this subject appreciation might be expressed for the many courtesies extended the representatives of your Association who visited the Toledo and Detroit conventions during the past year. As a result of ideas picked up at these meetings our office system and convention arrangements have been improved and we can safely say that our exhibition compares favorably with the largest hardware exhibitions held in other countries.

During the year one firm in Nova Scotia joined our Association and dozens of applications were received for copies of our stove "lien notes" from retail firms in Western Canada and the United States.

Supplies in Demand.

The "collection letters" supplied to Association members in lots of 100 for $1.00 continue to be used successfully by a large number of members, the W. W. Chown Co., Belleville, ordering their fifth set last week. The stove "lien notes," adopted at the London Convention, and sold at $1.00 per 100, are now being used by about 30 members. A plumbing lien estimate form is now being prepared.

A membership button was also adopted during the year for retail and traveller members, and many firms have ordered extra buttons for partners or clerks at 25 cents each.

Not Many Complaints.

Complaints have been received from several members regarding the methods of business used by a Cleveland concern selling linseed oil and turpentine to Ontario retailers from supply depots in Canadian cities. Your Secretary has been unable to secure satisfactory replies to letters sent this concern and judging from the complaints, it would seem to be the best policy to buy only from reputable houses, located in Canada who will be willing to treat customers fairly and courteously.

An increasing number of complaints are being received regarding the extension of catalogue house competition, and as the jobbers have assured your joint committee that they will co-operate with us in fighting this evil, manufacturers might also be asked to assist by establishing resale prices on their goods, and strictly enforcing the lists arranged. The cataloguing of a five-foot saw at $1.45 is a case in point, and manufacturers who supply goods at prices less than quoted to retailers should have the dangers of their actions pointed out to them.

Place for Next Convention.

Invitations have been received from Guelph and Niagara Falls for our 1912 convention, but before accepting either it would be wise to secure full information regarding the hotel accommodation available. When Peterborough was chosen a year ago, the accommodation available seemed ample, but so large has been the attendance at this year's convention and exhibition that we will all have to submit to inconvenience in order to assist in accommodating the crowds. Guelph, which accommodates several thousand people during its Winter Fair each December, ought to be a suitable convention place.

In conclusion let me urge that every member make it a point to write the secretary expressing his views on matters pertaining to the trade, as every assistance given in this way helps to make the Association of greater benefit to all members. The organization is yours—use it.

WESTON WRIGLEY,
Secretary.

The other business of the afternoon included the report of the Executive committee, and the appointment of committees. Fraternal greetings were presented from the Canadian Wholesale Hardware Association through the president, S. H. Alexander and the secretary, James Hardy, from C. W. Kelly, president of the Ontario Retail Merchants' Association, J. A. Beaudry, secretary of the Montreal Retail Merchants' Association, H. T. Kirk, representing the British Columbia Retail Hardware Association and other speakers.

From 4 to 5.30 o'clock there will be an hour for the travellers, the feature of which will be talks on methods of salesmanship.

To-night there will be a concert by the 57th Regimental Band in the Exhibition Hall, open to those wearing convention badges or association membership buttons.

The Exhibition.

The exhibition in the armouries by the different manufacturers is surprising in its range and in its proportions. Certainly such a display has never been seen in Peterborough before, and it is hoped that the public will take advantage of the opportunity afforded them by the throwing open of the exhibition at a nominal admission charge to-morrow night to see the various exhibits. The spacious armoury floor is entirely taken up with the booths, which are arranged in streets with a seven foot passage between them. Every booth is occupied throughout the building, and the manufacturers have spared no pains or labour in making their display as attractive and as comprehensive as possible. Hundreds of yards of decorating material has been used throughout the Exhibition and the appearance of the different exhibits is a credit alike to the quality of the articles they manufacture and to the good taste of their rerepresentatives. GILLETTES IN THE MAKING

An Exhibit Worth Seeing at the Gillette Booth in the Armouries

We are all familiar with the finished form of that ingenious and effective little instrument, the Gillette Safety Razor. A good many of us have a pleasant little interview with it every morning. Most of us would like to know how it is made.

There is a chance to satisfy this curiosity at the Gillette booth in the Armouries, where the Stove and Hardware Dealers of Ontario are holding their convention.

The Gillette exhibit includes all the parts that go to make up the finished razor sets, in almost every stage of their manufacture. There you see how, step by step, thin ribbons of finest steel become double-edged blades that will split a human hair; how flat brass blanks become beautiful nickel, silver or gold plated cases, lined with purple plush; how brass tubing turns into shaped, knurled and plated handles; how all the different parts take form and come together into one of the most popular of modern inventions.

It's certainly an exhibit worth seeing, and one which will enable you to appreciate more fully the quick, clean, efficient little Gillette.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

LOCK WORKS DEFEATED IN HARD FOUGHT GAME

One of the hardest fought and most exciting games that has been seen in the Mercantile League so far this season took place at Brock street rink last night when the Pill-pounders defeated the Lock Works by the narrow margin of 2 goals to 1. There was little to choose between the teams, both having about an equal share of the play and it was not until just before time was up (in fact the Lock Works claim that time was up) that the drgots scored the winning goal. It came to nothing in favour of the Pill-pounders at half time, but early in the second half the Lock Works took up the game and the teams battled along on even terms until finally Sefferman scored for the Dope Artson on a long rush. Both teams worked hard all through and neither could break away from the other. The skating was hard but clean and Referee Fred Kelly had an easy time. Herman of the Grillers scored both goals for the winners, while Whaley was responsible for the Lock Works score. A large crowd of spectators saw the game.

CURLING

By a margin of fifteen shots the Peterborough Curling Club captured the Hill-Sheppard Trophy from the Orillia Club yesterday, four rinks of each club playing simultaneously at Orillia and Peterborough. The local rinks won an easy victory here, all rinks being up and the majority in favour of Peterborough being 24 shots. The Peterborough rinks, which visited Orillia were not so successful, being nine down on the total. The only skip to win in Orillia was R. M. Waddell, who had a 15 to 12 victory over Skip Grant to his credit. The scores follow:

SOME HOCKEY HAPPENINGS

The Pill Pounders and Grady's Soft Drinks will meet in a game of hockey at Brock street rink between 10 and 11 o'clock to-night. Ambulances and doctors please take note. It promises to be the class of the season.

(Port Hope Guide.)

The Peterborough press hands out a lot of sarcastic remarks about the professional hockey match there on Wednesday, expecting no doubt to gain favour with the O H A for the same. The Examiner makes the statement that the exhibition did not approach the standard set in the Peterborough - Trenton series. We know nothing about the exhibition, but as to the ability of the Port Hope team it is safe to say that they could trim Peterborough and Trenton combined.

Following is the line-up of Grady's Soft Drinks for their game to-night against the Pillpounders.

"Cherry Sour" Callaghan goal.
"Birch Beer" Wade, point.
"Lemon Sour" Halpany, cover.
"Ginger Beer" Grady, centre.
"Sarsaparilla" Thompson, rover.
"Mineral Water" Halpany, left wing
"Champagne Cider" Pratt r. wing.
"Syphon" Pearce, spare.

All young ladies are invited to attend the Soft Drinks-Pill-pounders' hockey match to-night.

The East City hockey team challenge the Canoe Co's junior team to a game of hockey to be played at Brock street rink as soon as possible. For further particulars apply to any of the East City men.

HOUNDSDITCH CASE

The pictures of the famous battle in the streets of London, between the London police and soldiers on one hand and a couple of desperate anarchists besieged in a house in Houndsditch, which are being shown at the Princess theatre to-day, are attracting a lot of attention and should be seen by every one. They give one a good idea of the nature of the fight about which so much has been heard.

ALBERT CHEVALIER IN "DADDY DUFARD"

For the first time in this city a genius that has commanded respect of two continents will be revealed through the medium of a three act play at the Grand next Saturday, Feb. 25th, matinee and night. Albert Chevalier, whose wonderful characterizations shown largely in the London music halls and during his American tours, in the vaudeville theatres in this country, have been a factor in winning the vaudeville entertainment its increase in vogue and good name has never before appeared in a "legitimate" drama in America. His English appearances in this medium have been altogether too infrequent, though colossal success has met each re-entry on the regular boards. In Oliver Twist, in Pantaloon, and here and there in some strong character part, he has made his mark as one of the truly great actors of modern times. At The Grand he will appear in a character comedy, "Daddy Dufard" which he wrote himself, with the assistance of Lechmere Worrall, Chevalier has often supplied himself with dramatic material. "Daddy Dufard" is a play dealing with the life and adventures of a number of men and women struggling for success on the music hall stage. This is a life that Chevalier and his collaborator know very well. The play's heroine young, pretty and talented, meets with all sorts of obstacles inspired by jealous sister artists in her career, and so her father, a retired veteran of the French stage, is called upon to exercise all the wily diplomacy of his race to smooth out the young woman's path and make it one of roses. The part of the old Frenchman, one of these lovable, humorous types, is the part Chevalier has allotted to himself with the exception of a few moments in the last act, which takes place on the stage of a London theatre, and in which he will appear as himself, giving a few of the greatest characterizations that made him famous. It may be that those classic gems "Our Little Nipper," "A Fallen Star" and "My Old Dutch" of which American audiences have always been so fond may be among them. Beside Chevalier the company contains many English actors of reputation and some who are well known here. Of these latter special mention might be made of Violet Heming, who created the title role in "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" Mary Barker, Leslie Kenyon, Harry Brett, Horace Mitchell, Hilton Allen, Frankie Raymond and others.

Tipping and Trusting.

There are two practices in this country that are being justly condemned. One is tipping and the other trusting. To be sure, we are not responsible for originating either. Away back in the days of Queen Elizabeth every coffee house had a box bearing the inscription, "To Insure Promptness;" hence T. I. P. Neither is trusting an innovation. Some of the Caesars, so says history, used to get badly when their guests could not see the bottom of the glass often enough. But both have got such a hold on Americans that they have come to be recognized as national habits, and the latter sometimes as a national evil.—Indianapolis News.

HOW ALIENS CREEP IN

THOUSANDS OF FOREIGNERS EVADE BRITAIN'S LAWS.

Return Excursion Tickets Are One of the Popular Methods of Getting Past the Officials — Second-Class Passengers Are Exempt From Inspection and Many Cross Channel by That Way.

Whatever may be the legislative outcome of the amazing siege of Sidney, there is no gainsaying that it presents our immigration laws are more ineffective than those of any other country in the world, says a London paper. Any alien with the intuition of a rabbit, however black his history or blighted his health, can easily enter England against the will of the authorities, and can, in fact, snap his fingers at them.

The latest method of evading the inquiries put to to come to this country with the return half of an excursion ticket, which can always be purchased on the continent or obtained by post from London or from a confederate who has used the other half. Not long ago a Frenchman well-known in Leicester Square, thinking it polite to leave his usual haunts for a short time, went to Paris by a day excursion. While there he gave the return half of his ticket to an old comrade in crime, who with it came to London, giving a false name and address to the purser as he crossed the channel.

But there are many other dodges for evading the Aliens Act. One which results in hundreds of "undesirables" entering this country is systematically practised on some steamers. It is keeping the number on a ship just below the limit allowed for exemption from inspection. Originally a steamer which carried fewer than twenty steerage passengers was not, for the purposes of the act an immigrant ship, and was not, therefore, liable to inspection. Then the number of third-class passengers allowed for exemption was reduced to twelve, and now it is again twenty. Mark how matters have been adjusted accordingly. Some captains used regularly to bring over seventeen or eighteen third-class passengers, then nine or ten, and at present they are back again to the old number, except when they cut things very fine and arrive in the Thames with nineteen.

It is not uncommon for the aliens thus "scraped through" to include at least one who has been refused leave to land. He or she previously came to England in an immigrant ship, and was turned back owing to lack of means or for some other reason. No fewer than four rejected aliens were about a year ago dumped in a batch at Hull from a (technically) non-immigrant steamer.

The same steamers bring over many "undesirables" as second-class passengers, and thus defeat the object of the Aliens Act in another way. No sooner were second-class passengers exempted from inspection than such companies lowered their second-class fares till they were only a little higher than the steerage fares, and ever since many immigrants unable to pass inspection, as well as not a few of those refused permission to land, have triumphed over the authorities by coming to England in the intermediate class.

Shipping agents in continental ports also have many tricks whereby they dump "undesirables" on us. About eighteen months since, for instance, some of those at Bremen kept in stock letters of invitation written by people in this country. These they supplied — for a consideration — to aliens for shewing to the inspectors when they reached England as conclusive proofs that there was not the remotest chance of their becoming burdens on John Bull.

A moderately wideawake immigrant, however, requires no assistance to enable him to enter England without even a "By your leave." What is to prevent him from slipping as a cattleman or sailor and landing at one of our ports as such? Nothing. As a fact, this game is played on us thousands of times every year. Out of the total number of cattlemen who arrived in this country in 1909 no fewer than 2,309 did not return on the cattle ships. Some may have left as ordinary passengers, but the majority doubtless remained in England. Whether they are likely to become good citizens may be gauged from the fact that thousands of cattlemen who have landed in this country have straightway sought the hospitality of the casual ward.

The ranks of Chinese residents in this country are steadily recruited in the same way. Of late years many "sailors" from the Celestial empire have married English girls and settled in our large ports, particularly Liverpool, where laundries "run" by their compatriots absorb some of them. Six or seven years ago an attempt was made to establish Chinese laundries in London, with the result that the promoters got such a fright from hostile crowds that the enterprise faded away. But in Liverpool, Birkenhead, and the Wallasey district there are many such laundries, and a few have recently been opened in towns so far inland as Stockport.

They compete strenuously, not only against our native laundries, but against one another. One described himself as a "Christian Chinaman," and his rival in the same street, boldly announced, "No no religion; me wash clothes!"

Still more undesirable immigrants work a passage to this country. One of the men responsible for the twenty-five or twenty-six casualties at Tottenham undoubtedly came to England as a fireman on a steamer, and probably the other desperado evaded the Aliens Act in a precisely similar manner. Both, at all events, were nominally sailors when they landed.

Where Once a Home Stood.

And what is more melancholy than the old apple trees that linger about the spot where once stood a homestead, but where there is now only a ruined chimney rising out of a grassy and weed grown cellar? They offer their fruit to the wayfarer—apples that are bitter-sweet with the moral of time's vicissitude.—Hawthorne.

THE TERCENTENARY OF THE ENGLISH BIBLE

Twelve Hundred People Heard a Most Inspiring Address Last Evening by Rev. Mr. Gilmour, Formerly of Peterborough, and Now of McMaster University.

About 1,200 people turned out last night to take part in the celebration of the 300th anniversary of the English Bible, held in St. Paul's church.

The Rev. Jas. Rollins occupied the chair. In his opening remarks, leading up to the introduction of the leading speaker of the evening, Dr. Gilmour, of McMaster University, Toronto, he said that it was gratifying to see such a large audience out on this memorable occasion, and was particularly pleased to have the pleasure of introducing Dr. Gilmour, a former resident of Peterborough, and a man of love, who had come back to speak of things eternal in this his native city. Dr. Gilmour was well known, both at home and abroad, and it was a matter of congratulation to be able to secure the services of so distinguished a speaker as Dr. Gilmour of McMaster.

Dr. Gilmour, in his opening remarks, said that out of all the places in the world, where similar celebrations were being held, there was none gave him more pleasure to attend than the one being held in his native city, Peterborough. He referred in glowing terms to the love and respect which he always entertained toward the people of this city, and fully realized the honour and responsibility which he had to contend with in connection with the subject of the evening.

It was 300 years since the authorized version of the Bible became an actual reality, and during the 300 intervening years it had been going about and speaking into the hearts of the people. He thought the people should take the matter more seriously and only wished he could rise to the occasion.

The speaker went on to say that it was not by the address he was about to give, but by the magnificent congregation which was assembled that a true sense of love and respect was shown to the Bible, by coming under these conditions. There was no book compared, with the Bible, no book that had such a large sale. Last year the British and Foreign Bible Society circulated six and a half million copies of the Scriptures. The Bible was made up of sixty-six books, all written under different circumstances, by different men, such as kings, prophets, etc. The story of how these sixty-six subjects came together was one of the most interesting subjects of the human race to-day. God was the key-note of all the Bible from beginning to end. The Bible was read too little, and not understood as it ought to be. It has taught people that God is one and not many. The Bible was made up of the finest literature, in fact it had no equal in the literary world to-day. In it people had the war songs of the king, poetry, songs of David, etc. John Wesley said there were no phrases in the English language compared to that which went to make up the poetry of the rugged contemporary of Hosea. Amos, as he lay out on the mountain sides and listened to the roaring of the wild beasts in the valley below, and his herd of sheep were terrified. Then there was the wonderful wisdom book of Proverbs, with their grand, sound and wholesome advice. The people of those days spoke not of the abstract things, but of the concrete things, the fundamental subject of the day. There is no man we owe any more to for the authorized version of the Bible than William Tindal, who lived in 1418.

Tindal had one ambition, and that was a Gospel and Missionary desire; an ambition which was planted by God.

"The older I grow, the more I reverence the ambition which is planted in the boy's life," said the speaker, and which often serves to influence him to follow the path that God would have him go, thereby helping to carry out God's plan of the universe."

During the early days of the 17th century it was considered criminal to be caught carrying on the work of translating the Bible. Therefore, Wm. Tindal, who was known to be engaged in this illegal practice, deemed it prudent to leave the country, and he accordingly fled across the continent, later he was betrayed and convicted. He died a martyr's death. The Puritan and the Conformist were the two authorized Bibles of those early days, until the year 1611, of his Majesty King James' reign. A conference was held with a view to seeking legislature to permit the Bible to be translated into the English language. King James readily gave his consent, thereupon a company of fifty-four learned men banded themselves together and were divided into groups of six men each. They were assigned a portion of the old and new testament for the purpose of translation. After this preliminary work was completed it passed into the hands of a committee of six learned men, who examined the work and criticized it. Then it was sent on to press. Now, a translator has certain difficulties in connection with his work that are very little known by the public in general. Take Hebrew or Greek, for instance, and to turn it into English translations involves incalculable difficulties, in order to infuse that musical and sweet grammatical sense to the work. But how well they succeeded in infusing the most precious of the English language in this great work—words that illustrate to us the birth of Christ and what tremendous effect they have had upon the British race; how they have inspired great moral reform and great religious movements. It has been an important factor on every great occasion since its inception. If we only accept it as our guide in the future we would rise again with new life and new fervour.

There are some who were wont to criticize a little to create a new interpretation, but we must guard against such encroachment. The Bible has already been printed in 424 languages, but there are still three people out of every ten in the world to-day who are unable to read the Bible in their own language.

Mr. S. W. Dumble took occasion on behalf of the audience, to thank the Rev. Dr. Gilmour for his kindness in coming to Peterborough, and referred in kindly terms to the reverend gentleman's school boy days. He concluded by moving that a vote of thanks be tendered the speaker by the audience, Mr. Eastwood, seconded the motion, and accordingly the audience signified their sanction to the motion by the clapping of their hands.

Dr. Gilmour, in reply, said it gave him great pleasure to be back in Peterborough once more, and referred in tender terms to the school on the hill, where he got his first impressions of English literature. He concluded by thanking the movers of the vote of thanks for their kind words.

The Rev. Canon Davidson brought the meeting to a close by pronouncing the benediction.

SPLENDID EXHIBITION OF PICTURES, ARTS AND CRAFTS

Display in the New Public Library Under the Auspices of the Women's Art Association is Well Worth Seeing

The third annual exhibition of pictures, arts and crafts, under the auspices of the Peterborough Branch of the Women's Art Association of Canada opened yesterday afternoon in the lecture room of the Public Library, and will be continued until Thursday night of this week. There was a large attendance, both afternoon and evening yesterday, and those present were loud in their praises of the Exhibition, which includes not only water colours and oil paintings by Canadian artists, but specimens of home spuns, Indian bead work, Irish lace, hand-made jewellery and other beautifully made articles, which are well worth seeing, and the whole exhibition easily surpasses its predecessors. Everyone should take advantage of the opportunity that is afforded by the fact that the exhibit is to continue until Thursday, to look over the magnificent display that the Women's Art Association has arranged.

Local artists have their share in the Exhibition, and also in the honours; the work of the local contributors having been greatly admired by those who have had the privilege of seeing it. Miss Bennett shows a sketch entitled "Autumn." Miss Hatton contributes two pictures, "Evening, Lake of the Bays, and "A Sketch in Jackson's Park." Mrs. Frederick, a study, "Roses," and Mrs. Travers five pictures — "Pumpkin Field," "Woodcock," "Quail," and two splendid portraits.

Peterborough is also represented by the splendid plaster statue by Miss Kathleen Wallis which that clever artist has presented to the city, and which is a fac-simile of her statue entitled "Mercury Charmed by His Own Invention." This is the first time that it has been on exhibition here and it deserves the prominent place it has been given in the lecture hall.

Among the outside contributors are Mrs. Dignam, the president of the Women's Art Association of Canada: Mrs. B. Dowsley, Miss M. Firstbrook, Mrs. T. E. Elliott, Miss F. L. Lindsay, Miss L. Murray, Miss A. Gormley, Mrs. T. C. Pick, Miss L. Scythes, Mrs. M. S. Samuel, Miss E. Birnie, Mrs. Hemsted, Mrs. Cook, Wm. Armstrong and Lawrence Lamb.

Landscapes predominate in the pictures, and they lose none of their intrest or merit because Canadian subjects have been chosen by the artists. In all, sixty-two pictures are shown.

The exhibit includes some splendid pictures by the well-known artist, Armstrong loaned by Mrs. W. R. Morris, and a group by the famous Ottawa artist, Mr. H. H. Vickers, loaned by Mrs. James Wood. The Association is very grateful to these ladies for their kindness in sending in the pictures, which have added greatly to the success of the Exhibition.

The work that the Women's Art Association of Canada is doing in helping to preserve among the people of Eastern Canada their knowledge of the ancient crafts is well illustrated by the splendid showing that is made in these lines at the local Exhibition. There are some beautiful specimens of home-spuns for dress goods and trimmings, portieres, curtains, cushion tops, etc., all made by the peasant women of Eastern Canada, whom the members of the Women's Art Association encourage in their work. These have been admired on every side by all who have seen the specimens. There are, in addition, some samples of Indian bead work of a very superior quality—a strong evidence of the artistic senses of the Indian women.

Other articles shown are handmade beaten silver rings and bracelets, Torchon lace, Irish lace and leather novelties.

The Exhibition is free to members but to the general public 25c. admission fee is charged. Tea is served every afternoon. The hostesses yesterday were Mrs. Fred Reand Mrs. (Dr.) Frederick. To-day, Mrs. Arthur Stevenson and Mrs. R. Hall are in charge, while to-morrow Mrs. W. H. Hill, Mrs. Burnette and Miss Bennet will preside ove the tea things. There will be muslin Tuesday, Wednesday and hursday night.

POST CARD COLUMN

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—In the issue of an evening contemporary last night appeared a letter signed "Be Merciful, Etc.," which revealed an illogical narrowness or the spirit of that disciple of our Lord, who was so scathingly reproved for suggesting that the alabaster box of precious ointment had better be sold for three hundred pence and given to the poor, than be "wasted" upon the Saviour of Mankind. Did anyone ever see so absurd and illogical suggestion as that the "Chimes Fund" should be turned over to the Chinese Fund?

Why does the writer, except perhaps for special animus, stop at the Chimes Fund?

If, as he says, he believes that "God will never forgive us if we sacrifice the poor creatures while we listen to sweet music," if he believes this why does he not demand that the fifteen or twenty organs in twenty city churches, worth altogether between forty and fifty thousand dollars—the unholy contributors to "sweet music"—be turned over to the Chinese Famine Fund?

Why does he not demand that the costly enrichment of our churches—frescoed ceilings, stained glass windows, richly upholstered pews and aisles, be converted into cash, and our churches themselves converted into consecrated barns?

Why does he not demand that the thousands of riotously, ungodly women's hats, that swamp our churches, representing the cruel slaughter of thousands of birds, and representing every manner of bird known to Noah, except the dove, that descended from heaven and "lighted upon Him"? Why does he not have the price of these, so far as money can pay the price of Neronian cruelty, pooled and placed to the credit of the Chinese Famine Fund?

Why does he not also demand that the selfish man give up his costly cigars, his strong drinks, his gorgeous club rooms, his club suppers, his steam launches, his fast horses, his lady friend, and the long list of expensive luxuries that suck up money like a sponge, and perhaps at the expense of the comforts of his family?

Why does he not demand that our preachers resign their two thousand or three thousand dollars' salary and maintain their families by snow shovelling so that they can have more to give to the poor Chinese?

Why does he not ask that the tens of thousands of frivolous Society church women, whose ambition does not rise above outshining their sisters in dress, at church services, who give rollicking Sunday afternoon teas, and, in order to keep up their end in "bridges" or "pink teas," bend all the powers of their humming-bird intellects to "standing off" the butcher and the baker, who, between the honeyed "hold-ups" of society, and the just demands of the bank, haven't ready money enough to send a "neck-cut" to China.

Why doesn't this "merciful" disposer of other people's generosity gather on the market square all the pianos, organs, violins, mandolins, and gramaphones—Heaven bless his dear heart for this any way—all the costly furs, silks, carpets, silverware, jewellery, the dust gathering and unthumbed family Bibles in regal binding? Why does he not make a stack of these and hold a heavenly auction with Messrs. Haggart and Stapleton, knocking them down to the highest bidders, on condition that the buyers turn them over again for sale, thus providing a Chinese Famine Fund in perpetuity?

I merely mention these things to show the absurdity of the principle behind "Be Merciful's" suggestion, which is perfectly insane and visionary, yet I perfectly agree with him that there is much spent in luxury, that might "be sold for three hundred pence, and given to the poor." But who will draw the line? What is luxury to one is a necessity to another. A potato roasted in the ashes is a luxury in many a poor Canadian home, but it would be a necessity to a starving Chinese; yet even "Be Merciful" wouldn't ask the poor man to sacrifice the luxury of his children's potato to feed the starving in China, who are of the poor, who the Master said we should always have with us.

However, I have no objection to the application of "Be Merciful's" doctrine to himself. I am quite willing that he should withdraw his subscription to the Chimes and place it with the Famine fund, and I am sure, Mr. Editor, that you would gladly acknowledge it in that form in the list of contributors to the Fund.

Yours thankfully—for having been given a glimmering of

COMMON SENSE.

SLEIGHING PARTY

A party, consisting of about eighteen young people enjoyed a very pleasant drive to Bensfort last evening. They left the city about 7 o'clock and drove down through Otonabee to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Waterman, Bensfort, where a most enjoyable evening was spent. The time was occupied by dancing and playing games. Music and singing was indulged in, and the social side in general, was cultivated. During the evening, a dainty luncheon was served. Mr. and Mrs. Waterman deserve credit for the splendid time provided. The party arrived back in the city in the early hours of the morning, well pleased with the good time they enjoyed.

SPLENDID SERMON TO THE KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS

Rev. H. R. Trumpour, of All Saints' Church, Addressed the Local Knights on Sunday Evening

The members of Marathon Lodge, Knights of Pythias, attended All Saints' Church in a body, on Sunday evening, and heard a most eloquent sermon from the rector, Rev. H. R. Trumpour. The text and address were highly appropriate to the occasion, and the remarks of the speaker were followed with an appreciative attention.

He chose for his text Sam. 18 chap. iv. It relates to the marvellous friendship which existed between David and Jonathan in the time of King Saul's administration. He vividly recounted the story of Damon and Pythias, from which the society derived its name and referred to the remarkable love which these two famous characters entertained toward each other, love which gave one power to be willing to sacrifice his life for the other, the story of which has long been familiar to all.

A knight in those days, said the preacher, was entirely different from one of our modern knights. To-day, to be a knight, is often to be part of a political machine or a financial success. A knight in those days, as exemplified by the knights of King Arthur's round table, possessed all the attributes which go with chivalry—gallantry and nobility. They were endowed with power, the higher rational powers, therefore the Knights of Pythias to-day should be men who go forth in the name of truth, and challenge wrong in every form and manifestation. Pythianism is symbolical of friendship. In the hey-dey of life, when young and confident, one often does not feel the need of friends, but wait until trouble creeps in, sooner or later, and then is felt the longing for some sympathetic soul to whom we can unbosom ourselves. Also, when enemies attack us in the dark, a friend who will stand up and say a word for us is appreciated. The man is to be pitied who has no friends, for friendship and fellow communion is the natural heritage of man.

"The slightest element of unselfishness should never be allowed to penetrate fraternity.

"Again, there are many people who are "very much your friends" but he is not always your most sincere friend who heaps your merits on your back when in your presence. One of the grand things about fraternity is that it develops unselfishness, and the Knights of Pythias should yield themselves to unselfishness and allow their lives to be moulded along noble, enlarged lines. If such a service is developed in Peterborough, then the society is doing a philanthropic work.

The spirit of fairness and squareness should also be cultivated, as it is another essential element of fraternity.

At this juncture the speaker referred to the waste of spare time by young men and women after working hours.

"While factory workers and those confined at work all day need recreation, still it can be obtained in more congenial places than on the street, idly walking up and down. The moment a young man commences frequenting pool rooms. Against the game itself I have nothing to say, indeed wish someone would present a pool table of our parish hall, the moment he acquires a liking for such places, he drifts away from the church. His habits cease to be noble and uplifting, and his character does not become enriched or refined.

"If the Knights of Pythias can in any degree save young men from such—from sinking to such levels, then indeed they will be doing as grand work as did the members of King Arthur's round table.

"There is in our Ontario and Canadian homes, the curse of impure speech. The amount of foul, smutty talk which may be commonly heard, and the familiar use of expressions in regard to unmentionable things is shocking, and this commonness is the most regrettable feature of the city. There is a class of impure stories circulating to-day which is deplorable.

"As Knights of Pythias, I entreat you to take an organized stand against all impurity and intemperance, and degrading habits.

"Whenever you walk the streets you hear the name of God blasphemed. There are men driving carts and walking the streets and engaged in every day employment who make the very air reek with curses without cause.

"Assuredly national ruin will overtake the land if Christ's name is thus defiled."

As Knights of Pythias, Rev. Mr. Trumpour entreated the members to keep their speech clean and live up to the highest ideals of purity and temperance and assured them if they did they would continue to prosper. They should also inquire into their relationship with God. Many were prone to think that as life wore on they became poorer by the loss of loved ones, but such was not the case, as fraternity lived on in the life hereafter, in Heaven.

In concluding his address, the reverend speaker urged the members of the lodge to seek only as associates those who were pure and good, and noble, and unite with this the teachings of Jesus Christ.

"Feature fraternity and brotherliness in your society and take the power and example of Christ into your lives," was his closing appeal.

Hair Dressing That Makes Women's Hair Grow Radiant

Women of Canada are demanding a perfect hair tonic, one that is daintily perfumed, that is not sticky or greasy and that will make the hair grow profusely and give it a luster that attracts admiration.

Like their clever sisters in Paris, they have learned that a woman with scant, dull, lifeless hair grows old all too soon.

Since the introduction of Parisian Sage into Canada, druggists in every town are recommending Parisian Sage because they know that it will do exactly what the makers say it will do.

Besides being a hair grower and beautifier Parisian Sage is rigidly guaranteed to stop itching scalp, to stop hair from falling and to banish every trace of dandruff or money back.

Parisian Sage causes the hair to grow strong, vigorous and lustrous because it kills the dandruff germs that infest the hair roots, which is the basis of all scalp and hair diseases and also because it furnishes natural nourishment to the weakened and run down hair bulbs.

Parisian Sage is sold by druggists everywhere for only 50 cents a large bottle. It is guaranteed by Wm. Madill. The girl with the Auburn hair is on every pacakge. Mail orders filled, charges prepaid, by Giroux Mfg. Co., Fort Erie, Ont., upon receipt of price.

SACRED HEART T.A.S. WON AN INTERESTING DEBATE

Operation by Private Company is Better Than Municipal Ownership Was the Decision—Some Clever Points Made.

MUSICAL PROGRAMME

The concert and debate held at St. Peter's Lyceum last evening was a brilliant success. It was featured by a large crowd. Rev. Dr. O'Brien made an ideal chairman, and started the programme by making a short speech. The programme was an excellent one, and every number was well received. It was in part as follows:

Song (selected)—By Miss Devlin.

Duet, "Excelsior"—By Messrs New and Lee.

Vocal Solo, "The Old Sexon"—By Mr. New.

The accompanists of the evening were Miss Picard, Miss Doherty and Mr. Perrie. This, the musical part of the programme, was well received, and the entertainers are worthy of praise for the splendid way in which the numbers were given. The duet "Excelsior," was greatly applauded by a very enthusiastic audience.

The debate, "Resolved that municipal ownership of public utilities is much more advantageous to a community than operation by a private company."

The affirmative was taken by Mr. J. J. Duffus and Mr. Vincent McCabe, while Mr. R. Picard and Mr. J. Nicholl took the negative.

Rev. Fr. Fitzpatrick of Ennismore, ably acted as judge. The decision was given for 60 p.c. for oratory and 40 p.c. for points. In summing this up, Rev. Fr. Fitzpatrick said they were equal in points, but in the line of oratory, the negative carried. He stated that he was in a very embarrassing position, as the both sides were so well matched that it was extremely difficult to decide.

Short congratulatory addresses were given by Rev. Fr. McColl., Rev. Fr. O'Sullivan, of Victoria Road, Rev. Fr. McCaulay and Rev. Fr. Fitzpatrick of Ennismore, also the chairman, Rev. Dr. O'Brien.

The evening proved a most enjoyable and profitable one. It was closed by singing the national anthem.

WOMEN HAVE BACKACHE

Many women have kidney disease and do not know it because they attribute backache to other causes. The use of Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills makes short work of backache and prevents serious trouble from deranged kidneys. Ask your neighbours about this great family medicine.

"MY CINDERELLA GIRL"

There is enough entertainment in "My Cinderella Girl" for a dozen musical comedies. It is a corking good farce to begin with, simply overflowing with ludicrous situations and bright and sparkling repartee. It tells a consistent story in a really humorous manner, and wittily caricatures a typical co-educational fresh water college, in a wholesome, clean and refreshing manner.

There is an exciting baseball game at the end of the third act which imparts just the requisite thrill to the spectator. The whole has been given an unusually tuneful musical score with a dozen song hits, sung by principals and a chorus who can really sing. Grand Opera House (to-morrow) Wednesday evening.

LOCAL FAMILY IS IN DESTITUTE CIRCUMSTANCES

A case which we have reason to believe would be deserving of the notice of a few of our local philanthropists came to the notice of Chief Howard a few days ago.

It concerns a destitute family situated in the vicinity of Bolivar street who moved in from the country some time ago and have been the victims of hard luck ever since. The husband has been on the sick list and has been unable to secure work of any kind. The furniture has all been sold piece by piece out of the house until nothing but a chair and table remains.

The only child, a nine months old baby, was stricken down on Saturday with pneumonia and died last night, presumably from lack of nourishment and proper medical care, while the emaciated appearance of the parents told the story of want and privation. Since the case came to the notice of Chief Howard, which was on Saturday, their wants have been looked after and the man has been given employment. But they are still in destitute circumstances as far as clothing and household effects are concerned. Any one, who is desirous of assisting in any way this unfortunate family can, by interviewing Chief Howard, learn the names and particulars of the case. The husband is extremely sensitive to the humiliating position in which the fact of having to accept charity places him.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT

Mr. Leonard Giroux Has His Eye Badly Injured

The many friends of Mr. Leonard Giroux, son of Mr. George H. Giroux, Stewart street, will be grieved to learn that he is in St. Joseph's hospital as the result of a very painful and most serious accident. Mr. Giroux, who is a representative of the J. Parsons firm of Toronto, was spending a couple of days at his home, intending to resume his duties this morning. Yesterday he was opening a window at his home when his foot slipped, and he fell, the blade of a small pen-knife, which he was holding in his hand, at the time, penetrating his eye and cutting the cornea. He was removed to St. Joseph's Hospital, where his injury was attended to. The accident is a most serious one, but it is hoped that he will not lose the sight of his eye.

FEATURES OF YESTERDAY'S SESSION OF THE BIG HARDWARE CONVENTION

Travellers' Hour Talk Was a Great Success—The Reports of the President and of the Executive Committee Were Heard by the Convention.

TO-DAY'S DOINGS

There was a considerably larger representation of retail hardware men present at the armouries this morning, the trains last night and this morning bringing in large delegations and the attendance at the exhibition was the biggest since the opening. The convention will hold a business session again this afternoon and to-night the exhibition will be thrown open to the public.

There was a large attendance at yesterday afternoon's session. In addition to the business reported in yesterday's Examiner, the following reports were received:

PRESIDENT'S REPORT.

Gentlemen,—Before giving you my report, I wish to thank the Officers and Executive members for the very great assistance they gave me during the past year, and more especially do I wish to thank our Secretary, Mr. Wrigley, for the splendid work he has done, and the great interest he has taken in Association matters. You know the success of any organization of this kind, depends a great deal upon its officers, and I feel that too much credit cannot be given them. Because of their good work I, as President, had very little hard work to do.

Our Executive met on Good Friday, and Thanksgiving Day, in Toronto, and I am pleased to say that every member attended both meetings, which shews the interest they took in the Association work.

Many matters pertaining to the interests of the Association were taken up and discussed, and referred to committees. During the year we met the Railway Passenger Agents' Association, and took up the matter of single railway fares, while attending our Convention. We met Attorney General Foy and the late Howard Hunter, Superintendent of Insurance, and discussed the matter of Mutual Fire Insurance with him. We met a committee of the Wholesale Hardware Association, and discussed trade grievances, but, as all these matters will be laid before you, by their respective committees, it is unnecessary for me to say anything more fully about them.

However, there is one matter I would like to refer to, and that is re the marking of White Lead. You know there has been on the market for years a brand of White Lead labelled No. 1, and some dealers sold this to their customers using the expression "This is the best No. 1, White Lead," and customers thought they were getting the best quality of lead, equal to that sold by other dealers and marked "Genuine" or "Strictly Pure," believing, that if an article was No. 1, it could not be any better. This caused a lot of annoyance and trouble in many cases. Your Executive took this up with the White Lead Grinders' Association, and after considerable time and correspondence succeeded in getting the White Lead Grinders to discontinue using the No. 1 label. Seeing we were successful in this matter, is it not reasonable to expect, that we will be just as successful in other matters of equal or greater importance to our business, if our Association demands it.

During the year, I had the pleasure of attending two large Hardware Conventions, in the United States, in company with our Secretary and Treasurer and I believe a great deal of the success of our present Convention and Exhibition, is due to the fact of our having visited these conventions, and getting the information we did.

The first we attended was the Ohio State Convention held in February, at Toledo, and the second was the Michigan Convention in August in Detroit. Both of these Conventions held Exhibitions in connection with them, and were largely attended. Many new lines of goods were shown for first time. Convention matters were gone into, with much interest, the leading features being the "Question Box" discussions, and the Mutual Insurance reports. One of the most important questions from the "Question Box" was, "What per cent. of the cost should be added for the cost of doing business, or in other words what per cent. does it cost to do business." We found that the same thing existed there that exists here—that many merchants had never taken into consideration, the cost of doing business at all. Those who took part in the discussion of this question, stated that it cost all the way from 15 to 22 per cent.—according to the amount of business done. What a surprise this will be to the merchant who marks an article, that costs him $1, in the jobbers warehouse, $1.25, and thinks he is making 25 cents clear profit, when really, he is making absolutely nothing. As this is a very important matter, I would recommend that our Executive get all the information they can on this matter, and have cards printed, showing

SKULL FRACTURED BY THE FALL OF A TREE

Frank Sullivan, of Indian River, is in a Serious Condition But is Expected to Recover---Was Working in Cresswell Camp.

Yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Mr. Frank Sullivan, son of Mr. Dennis Sullivan, of Indian River, had his skull fractured by the fall of a tree on Cresswell's timber limits, in Cavendish Township.

The young man, who was about 22 years of age, was at work in the woods, when he was struck by a falling tree and rendered unconscious. He was at once placed in a sleigh, and the fifty-mile journey begun to Peterborough, which was reached at two o'clock this morning—twelve hours. From the Albion Hotel the young man was removed to St. Joseph's Hospital, and came under the care of Dr. McGrath.

After examination it was found that some protruding object, probably a knot on the tree, had made a circular fracture, about the size of a silver dollar, on the back of the head just behind the ear, crushing through both tables of the skull and embedding the circular fragment of bone in the substance of the brain.

In spite of this terrible injury, which rendered Sullivan unconscious at first, he regained consciousness on the way down. On consultation the operation of trephining was performed, the depressed portion of bone raised, and the injured man now has excellent chances of speedy recovery, after an experience which few survive.

FARM HOUSE AND CONTENTS WERE TOTALLY DESTROYED

Home of Mr. John Lemay, Dummer, Wiped Out by Fire Yesterday During the Absence of the Occupants ---Neighbours Arrived Too Late to be of Assistance

Special to The Examiner :

WARSAW, FEB. 22.—The home of John Lemay, who lives six miles from this village on the boundary between the townships of Douro and Dummer, was totally destroyed by fire yesterday during the absence of the inmates. Mr. Lemay is employed in doing some work at a Stony Lake cottage and the rest of the family were not at home when the fire broke out, caused, presumably, from a spark from the chimney. The blaze had obtained a good start before it was discovered by some of the neighbours and before these could arrive on the scene the structure was a mass of flames and there was no chance of saving it or any of the contents. The building was a log house with a frame addition and burned very rapidly. There is, as far as is known, no insurance.

London Magistrate Sentences Two Convicted Men---Remarks That Clergymen and Others Had Pestered Him Out of Patience With Pleas for Leniency.

Special to The Examiner :

LONDON, ONT., FEB. 22. — One year in Central Prison was the sentence this morning on Walter Richards and George Lee, convicted of stealing sugar from Grand Trunk cars. Superintendent Gillen said fourteen thousand dollars was paid London shippers last year for stolen goods. In sentencing the prisoners Magistrate Graydon declared that clergymen and others had pestered him out of patience for leniency for the prisoners and he wouldn't countenance such interference again.

ADDRESS WAS GIVEN BY REV. DR. SHEARER

A very instructive and interesting address was given at St. Paul's church last night by Rev. Dr. Shearer, representing the Social and Moral Reform League, of the Presbyterian churches of Canada. The meeting was well attended and the information imparted was of vital importance, as regards the welfare of the young people of the country. The subject of his address was "The White Slave Traffic." He stated some facts, which were very startling, and roused the people to a state of intense interest. He said that the traffic caused the death of upwards of sixty thousand in the United States annually, and that a greater number of people were enlisted in the abominable habit annually. He explained in a very able manner how the young people were drawn into the snare of this great sin, and dealt with the subject in such an able manner that he opened the eyes of the people, as regards this subject, as they never were before.

Why the Optical Institute Succeeds

There are Optometrists in Canada who do a larger business than ourselves. There are Optometrists and Opticians who do a smaller, but the Optometrist who does better work or gives better values has not pushed his head above the Optical Horizon. A strong statement to be sure, but when we point to twenty years of the best training and experience in both United States and Canada and over 27000 persons helped to the best possible Eye-sight are we not justly proud of our work? We are even adding to our facilities and studying the latest methods. This is way we succeed.

RED HERRING PATRIOTS.

A correspondent sends in the following inquiry—"Please say if, when reciprocity comes, we shall have a vote?" The answer is, yes, if the applicant can show that he has more sense than implied in asking such a fool question. It is remarkable—no, it is only natural—that people who want to gain a political point, should persist in taking such absurd views of the proposed trade agreement. It has nothing to do with political interests, standing or other questions of the kind. It is simply a proposal to make free exchange of certain products, chiefly agricultural. It is designed to be of advantage in the way of securing a greatly enlarged markets more conveniently situated. There is no question of annexation, or any change of political relations. Our British connection will be unimpaired, the British preference will not be interfered with—but on the contrary, strengthened. As remarked, the agreement simply provides for enlarged facilities of trade. Upon this point it is a debateable question. It may be either good or bad for Canada in this respect, and that is fair ground for argument. But the absurd annexation cry is only raised by those who do not wish to discuss the question on its merits. Annexation could only be had with the consent of Canada and the firebrand yellow journalists know that there could not be found ten responsible men in a million of our population who would dare to favour annexation. They cry "annexation" and impudently wag the old flag, and so doing degrade it for the sake of making party capital. Such men would prostitute their own mothers' good name to serve their political ends. The annexation cry is an insult to our people. It converts Canadians into a nation of Esaus, willing to sell their British birthright for a mess of pottage—willing for the sake of gaining a larger market to sell their nationality and submit to a political absorption repugnant to every national and patriotic instinct of every Canadian. The trade agreement now under consideration, relates to trade only. The Liberal government which showed its disinterested patriotism by giving—in opposition to Conservative politicians—a loyal preference to Great Britain, without asking, but even refusing an equivalent—a price for their loyalty and love—would not submit a trade proposal that would for a moment weaken the bond that unites the empire. The Annexation cry is only a red herring drawn across the real line of scent.

COMFORT IN OLD AGE.

The impression which some people have that the Canadian Government Annuities scheme is available only to persons over the age of 55, is quite erroneous, an impression arising, probably, from the fact that 55 is the earliest age, except for invalidity or disablement, at which an Annuity can begin. Naturally, the younger the person is when the purchase is begun, the smaller will be the payments which he, or she, will have to make to secure the same Annuity, and smaller will be the apparent cost. But any person over the age of 5 may purchase an Annuity. An account of the sad ending of an old gentleman who had until recently lived all his life in a Canadian Province, but upon whom fortune, for some reason, had not smiled, was communicated a few days ago in a despatch from a United States city. He had gone to Michigan to stay with a son for the remainder of his days, but shortly after his arrival the son died, leaving no means, and the father, who preferred death rather than the poor house, to which he was to have been sent the following day terminated his life. If the old gentleman had been provident in his younger days and had laid aside but 10 cents a week, the amount accumulated, at 3 ped cent., compound interest, which he would have had at his disposal at 80, would have purchased for him an Annuity of $160 a year, an income sufficient to have enabled him to have provided for himself for the remainder of his days. Had he had the opportunity at 20, as all residents of Canada have to-day, of paying in to the Government Annuities fund the sum of 10c. a week, his income at 80 would have been over $525, instead of $180, and had he died at any time before attaining the age of 80 his heirs would have received every cent that he had paid in, with 3 per cent. compound interest up to the date of his death. As the old gentleman reflected upon the past, it no doubt seemed but yesterday when he was a boy. Still, young men and women are disposed to spurn the thought that old age is inevitable, that the day will come when they, themselves, will be old, and that the poor house must be their ultimate destiny if they have not made provision against such a contingency. But it will be impossible for them ot dodge the issue, and the system of saving which the Annuities Act affords them is positively the only means available by which they can make this provision with absolute certainty, and with the small est outlay. Explanatory literature may be obtained at the Post Office, or will be supplied on application to the Superintendent of Annuities, Ottawa, to whom letters may be sent free of postage.

THE CATTLE EMBARGO.

(Montreal Herald)

Many people have long wondered why the British Unionists, who have been advocating with great persistency for years, the principle of preferential trade within the Empire should ave never thought it worth while to prove their sincerity by fighting for the removal of the embargo that decrees the slaughter of Canadian cattle within ten days of their landing at a British port.

The plea advanced for the retention of the embargo is that it prevents the possible infection of British cattle by disease from this side of the Atlantic, but the insincerity of the argument is shown by the fact that there are no diseased herds of cattle in Canada and that there has been no disease in the country for several years. It has long been transparent enough to deceive nobody familiar with the trade that it was simply a protectionist expedient for the benefit of the English farmers, many of whom are too slow-going or careless to take the necessary trouble in the matter of fattening of Canadian cattle.

The Imperial preference champions have never essayed the task of enlightening the farmers on these points, although they have no lack of talent of the kind required in their ranks. The more progressive Scottish farmers, who would like to have the opportunity of fattening up Canadian cattle of good quality for the home beef market have called in vain for open market for them for years. This would be a very real and substantial measure of preference, in return for the preference given by Canada to British merchants and manufacturers, and it could be given too without violating the principle of Free Trade in the slightest degree. It would give Canada the advantage of a market that is closed to the United States. The present would be a specially favourable time for action as it would forestall the new conditions that will arise in the States as the result of reciprocity. It is not easy to say what the effect of the removal of the customs duties may be but it is reasonably certain that it will mean an additional price for Canadian cattle across the border and the diversion of some part of Britain's food supply.

TRUTH ABOUT THE PREFERENCE.

(Ottawa Free Press.)

In his speech in the British House of Commons upon the address at the recent opening of the session, Mr. Austen Chamberlain, who led the attack of the Unionists upon the reciprocity agreement, gave an excellent the Liberals, of making an increase of or perhaps it would be better to say the detrimination of his party to ignore, the true basis of the Canadian tariff preference. After lamenting that the effect of the agreement must be to lessen the value of the Canadian preference he went on to say that "Canadians desired to maintain it and even to give us a larger preference, whenever we should be prepared to grant mutual preference for Canadian goods."

Could any statement be more misleading to the English elector who is not acquainted with conditions in this country? There has never been any question in Canada, at least among the liberals, of making an increase of the preference, dependent upon "mutual preference." The Canadian tariff preference in favour of British goods was introduced for domestic reasons, and when the time comes it will be increased for equally good domestic reasons.

It was the Canadian Conservative party which was ready to give a preference to Great Britain only if and when they got something in return. That was their policy in 1892 when they supported the resolution of Alex. McNeill, declaring.

"Resolved that if when the Parliament of Great Britain and Ireland admits Canadian products to the markets of the United Kingdom upon more favourably terms than it accords to the products of foreign countries, the Parliament of Canada will be prepared to accord corresponding advantages by reductions in the duties it imposes upon British manufactured goods."

To that proposition the Liberal party opposed an amendment, moved by Hon. (now Sir) Louis Davies, which, said:

"Inasmuch as Great Britain admits the products of Canada into her ports free of duty this House is of the opinion that the present scale of duties exacted on goods mainly imported from Great Britain should be reduced."

And when the Liberals came into power they gave such reduction as a free-will offering, not in the spirit of huckstering, but out of good will and loyalty.

And the preference was steadfastly opposed by the Canadian Conservative party right from the day of its introduction on April 22, 1897, until the present year of grace, when it has suddenly been taken to their hearts as a great item of tariff good.

Indeed the whole Conservative party is on record as having voted against the principle of the preference on more than one occasion, and even to-day the lament of men like Foster and Armstrong is still that Canada has not forced her will upon the electors of Great Britain and made them agree to a system of "mutual" preference which would tax their food and make them regard the self-governing dominions not as loyal daughters but as leechers who would take all the advantages from the old mother and give little in return.

an approximate cost of doing business, and send a copy to the different members of this Association.

The reports from the Mutual Fire Insurance branches showed a saving of from 25 to 50 per cent. on old line rates, and I would strongly recommend that our Mutual Fire Insurance Committee be instructed by this Convention to continue its work until we here in Ontario also succeed in forming a Mutual Fire Insurance Company, for the benefit of our Association members.

While at these conventions, we learned that many of the trade grievances, that bother and worry us here, exist there also—such as small manufacturers and jobbers selling direct to the consumer—the unfair competition of the Catalogue Houses and Departmental Stores, and the retailers themselves, instead of standing together for fair profits, in many cases sold lines of goods on margins far below what it actually cost to do business. But things had very much improved since Associations had been formed, conventions held, and members became better acquainted with each other, and had learned the folly of doing business for nothing. I would recommend that this Convention before its close, appoint a strong committee, to confer with a committee that might be appointed by the manufacturers and jobbers, to discuss the matter of "Re-sale" prices, and also consider the ways and means of how to best do away with the evil of selling so many staple lines at a margin of profit far below the actual cost of doing business.

I would also recommend that this Association assist us far as possible, through its executive the formation of local Associations

In conclusion, gentlemen, let me urge upon you the importance of attending every session of this Convention, and of taking part in its discussions. It is your convention—upon you depends the success of this Convention and the success of our Association. I would rather hear twenty members express themselves for one or two minutes each, than hear one member speak twenty minutes or half an hour. If you have complaints to make, faults to find, suggestions to give, do it during the proper sessions, and do not wait until after this Convention is closed. Spend as much time as you can outside of Convention sessions, in the Exhibition Hall, among the exhibits, as you cannot learn too much about the goods you are supposed to sell. Visit all the manufacturing plants you can, and see the class of goods you sell under process of manufacture, place as many orders as you can consistently do, with the manufacturers and jobbers here represented. Exchange ideas and thoughts with each other upon the different ways of doing business, and I feel satisfied that we will all go back home, better business men, and more determined than ever to help on the good work of our Association.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

D. CINNAMON, President.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE'S REPORT.

The Executive reported, in part, as follows:

Some talk has been heard during the year that our Association is overcharging firms which exhibit at our Conventions, and that the Association is making too much money out of this feature. The facts are that the fees charged by us are far below those charged at similar exhibitions in the United States, while the sizes of the booths given to Exhibitors by us is much larger than across the line. The rates charged at this convention are practically the same as at London, yet we increased the area of the booths from 68 to 120 square feet, and in addition, paid for a sign 12 feet by 18 inches for each exhibitor, as well as erecting and decorating the booths as at London last year.

Expenses in connection with the London and Peterborough Exhibitions will average between 60 and 70 per cent. of the receipts. The balance is not an extortionate profit, taking into consideration the large amount of work undertaken by your Secretary in arranging the details of this important feature of our annual gathering.

The chief value of the Exhibition lies in its educational features, and in its ability to encourage members to attend our convention. We urge members to show their appreciation of the assistance given us by the Exhibitors by placing orders during the convention. And we particularly urge that enterprise be encouraged—that the exhibitor who goes to the trouble of showing new lines, of demonstrating them, and of trying to make his booth a place where merchants and clerks can go for selling ideas, should be encouraged. We are pleased to see the salesmen who have a glad hand and a good cigar for us. They help to make up the crowd. But the exhibitor who shows originality and enterprise is helping us in a manner which deserves encouragement.

Resolutions of appreciation were suggested to the Peterborough City Council, and to the officers of the 57th Regiment, for the use of the Armouries.

Also to the Gillette Safety Razor Co., of Canada, for the magnificent badge supplied to all in attendance, as a gift from that enterprising company.

Amendments to the Constitution were also suggested, to make it possible for hardwaremen from other Provinces to join the Ontario Association, if their own Province is not organized, and to make the membership year end at the close of each Annual Convention

PRESENTATION TO TRAVELLER.

Walter B. Screaton, McClary's, London, was called to the front and handed a suit case for his services in enrolling new members.

Then Tom Wright, of Howlands, Toronto, chairman of the "Travellers' Hour" Committee, did himself proud by taking the chairmanship for the most interesting hour and a half ever spent at a hardware gathering in Canada. Tom called on A. S. Howe, the Asbestos Sad Iron man; George Boomer, Shurley Dietrich Co.; J. A. Hossack, who sells ass-skin tapes for less than cost; and Arno Bittues, who does the opposite with Gillette Safety Razors; and one by one they handed out hot stuff.

Then Russell Chown set the grass on fire by handing the travellers some straight talk, criticising the jobbers for failing to have their travellers show samples and help educate the retailers on selling points. "There are too many order-takers," said next year's president.

Harry Clucas, who pushes "beauty and utility" goods (see page 53, February Hardware and Stove Journal), A. F. Collins, the Ever-Ready live wire, and John Irwin, the Brandram-Henderson King pin, followed, after which Jimmy Hossack had a second spasm, during which he got off his chest some most practical talk about travellers carrying samples and the jobbers' duty to retailers. Talking about jobbers' salesmen selling from catalogues, he said: "None of you would marry a girl from a picture—you'll want to see the real article."

"THE INNOCENT MURDERERS"

By Wm. Johnston and Paul West

"'But,' said I, 'the money—the $5,000'

"'You shall have that,' he said. 'Meet me to-night, here, in the laboratory. I will give you five thousand dollars.'

"I hesitated. I did not want to go away from you, George, while our quarrel was in progress. Nor did I like the responsibility imposed on me by the professor. He asked me to think it over, and to let him know on the following day. After consideration, I thought I would do as he asked, he had been so kind to me, and was so earnest in this instance. So I dropped a little note to him, and told him I agreed to go. I also reminded him that he need not fear that I would tell anybody the secret.

"I had forgotten the date on which the agent from Paris was to arrive in New York, so when I went to the laboratory on Monday evening to get the money, I was not prepared to go at once. Professor Hopkins reminded me, however, that I must leave that night, and that I had just time to catch the eight o'clock train. I took the money—all in bills—and started for the train. Suddenly I remembered that he had not told me where I was to meet the agent in New York. I ran back to the laboratory. It was locked. I called his name, thinking he must be in there. No answer, and I looked through the keyhole. It was then—"

"Yes," said Gordon, shuddering at the memory, "it was then."

"Suddenly I recalled that the professor had given me the money wrapped in a slip of paper. I took this out as I went back down the village street, having started for Prof. Hopkins' house to get further instructions. To my delight the slip of paper contained instructions, the agent's name and address, that building I went into on Madison Square. I hurried for the train, but, on looking at my watch, I found that I had lost it.

"I was in dismay. I did not dare wait till morning. I did not know what to do. Just then Dr. Carter drove by in his buggy. He was going over to Hardwick on a sudden call. I asked him if he would take me over, so that I could catch the trolley, thinking that in this way I could connect somewhere with a train to New York.

"He did so and never asked me why I was in such a hurry.

"I found that there was no train to New York that I could catch, but one to Boston, which I got. I spent the night in Boston, and in the morning hurried to the station to take a train to New York. The agent might arrive on Tuesday, Professor Hopkins had said, which was my reason for wishing to go to New York so early.

"It was then that I lost the money and telegraphed to you. The rest you know. The man we saw in Madison Square I saw as I looked out of the lawyer's window in Boston, when you were getting the money for me. He had the next room to mine in the hotel last night, and when I saw him in the park I was completely unnerved."

"And now you have the radium and Professor Hopkins is dead!" cried Gordon.

"It is horrible, horrible!" said Ernesta. "Oh, the poor old man! The poor old man! What is to be done?"

"We must wait to see," said Gordon.

"No," said Ernesta, with a sudden burst of decision. "We must not wait, George, you must do as I say. You must—we must—go back to Graydon at once and tell all. Yes," she continued, as Gordon seemed to wince at this suggestion. "It is the only way. You are my husband now, and you must be an honourable man. You are to go back to Graydon. Tell the cabman to drive to the station."

Gordon was clay in the hands of his wife. He did her bidding to the letter, and they took the train for Boston, leaving New York at one o'clock. It was a strange beginning for a honeymoon.

CHAPTER NINETEEN.
Detective Sullivan's Shock.

The setting of Thursday's sun found the three hardened conspirators in a desperate mood. As the great red ball sank behind the western hills they turned their gaze furtively in the direction of the cemetery, scarcely daring to breathe. Six thousand other eyes in Graydon were turned in the same direction, and the professors found themselves so brutal as to wish that blindness might strike the eyes of the entire population—except themselves — in case the glow was to appear again from the vault.

Now that they had changed their minds about their course in this evnt They were ready, in the case of necessity, to stand forth in the village forum, which was in front of the drug store, and announce their perfect willingness to lead an investigating party to find out what was causing the puzzling illumination. But, though they waited and waited, and it grew darker and darker, the light did not come.

"Are you sure you can see nothing?" asked Snyder of Rice, as they met on the street. "Your eyes are better than mine. Look closely."

"There is not a sign of it," said Rice, "not a sign. But wait."

Finally it became evident that the light would not appear to-night. They were not disappointed, naturally, though the rest of Graydon was, and did not hesitate to express itself so. The town felt that it had been cheated, and went to bed early, grumbling.

"But what shall we do now?" asked Snyder, when it was decided that the opportunity for heading a searching party had vanished as completely as the light itself. "Are we going to leave the—leave it over there?"

Rice looked at Fischer, who, in his new capacity as leader, was deeply in thought. The German professor did not like the way matters had turned out. His plan for ending the difficulty had seemed to him such a good one that he hated to see it proved ineffective. He was almost hoping that the light had repeated its performance of the previous night.

"Vell," he said, "der situation has changed. Evidently der peculiar properties of our friend vich caused it to glow dot vay haf exhausted demselves. But dot don't alter the fact dot it is still dere. It may not be seen, but it exists. Now, are ve to leaf it dere? It stands to reason dot of all der people in dis town, somebody is going to investigate sooner or later. Besides—"

"Look!" cried Snyder in a frightened whisper. They were passing Dean Quimby's house. Snyder had looked in that direction, attracted by a light in the hall. What he saw made the blood freeze in his veins. In the hall, by the open door, stood the Dean, and with him, apparently about to come out, the mysterious stranger they had seen around the college so often on Tuesday, but who had disappeared during the day. Strangers were rare in Graydon, especially strangers who visited the Dean and spent an hour with him in his study during college hours, unless they were other scholars from out of town. This man was not a scholar, judging from appearances. There was something about him that aroused the suspicions of all three. At Snyder's warning they stopped. The lilac bushes in the Dean's front yard, by the fence, hid them as they stepped back a few paces, and they could listen without being observed. The Dean and the stranger stepped out on the piazza.

"And how do I get there?" asked the stranger.

"Turn to the right and keep along as far as the street leads," said the Dean. "Then to the right again, by the woods, until you come to two roads. Take the right again, the one lined with hawthorn bushes, and it will lead you directly to the gate. A path leads right up to the top of the hill."

Nature's Cure For A Cough

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is the Most Largely Imitated Medicine in the Country

What to give the children for croup and colds is the problem mothers now have to solve. Most of them finally decide on Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and make it a rule to always have some in the house.

In this medicine are linseed, turpentine and other well-known ingredients of unmistakable value in the cure of colds. It is pleasant to take, so much so that children delight to use it.

So generally is this great medicine used that several imitations have been put on the market. All alike in name only. They are not made from the same formula, nor do they bear the name of Dr. Chase.

You know what you can expect from the use of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, but you cannot put much faith in an imitation which sells on the reputation of the articles it imitates.

On every bottle of the genuine will be found the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., the famous Receipt Book author. This is for your protection and for the protection of your children. Be sure to get the genuine, even if it costs a few cents more. 25 cents a bottle, family size, 60 cents; all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

has a sample room in his store for travellers, said there were too many "train catchers" on the road.

C. M. Woodburn, who carries the biggest line of hardware samples in Canada, said if Taylor had to stay at Carleton Place hotels he'd catch the first train out, too. L. J. Levy, who brushes up trade for Boeckh Bros., Toronto, followed.

Tom Wright then told of how he had landed Dan. Cinnamon as a customer by showing him samples of new goods. H. J. Carter, Picton, C. M. Woodburn, N. Turner, Sol Waffle, N. B. Misener, Toronto, J. D. Robinson, the wide awake Imperial Varnish man, and J. Smyth, of Boeckh Bros., closed the discussion.

Secretary Wrigley suggested a "Travellers 'Afternoon" next year, and the suggestion was applauded. The meeting adjourned at 5.45.

At last night's session of the exhibition there was a splendid attendance and the booths looked at their best under the glow of the many electric lights that have been been strung throughout the Armoury building. The feature of the evening was a concert by the band of the 57th Regiment under the direction of Mr. Gliddon. The musicians were stationed in the east balcony and their splendid playing added a great deal to the enjoyment of the evening. The band played in grand form and their numbers were received with every indication of approval by the hundreds of visitors present. Many were the complimentary remarks heard on every side among the delegates and in the case of several numbers encores were demanded. A feature was the cornet solo by Band Sergt. Hughes who contributed the beautiful selection "Lizzie" Polka to the delight of the audience. The band programme was as follows:

March—"The Bonnie Brier Bush" ..
Overture—"Guy Mannering" .....
Indian Intermezzo—"Valley Flower"
Cornet Solo—"Lizzie" Polka .....
Band. Sergt. Walter Hughes
American sketch — "Down by the Suwanee River" .....
Novelette—"The Whistler and His Dog" .....
Idyll—"The Forge in the Forest" ..
"Reminiscences of the Plantation."..
Highland Patrol—"Wee Bob. McGregor"..
Burlesque—"The Village Band . . ..

To-night will be the only occasion upon which the exhibition will be open to the general public. It has been decided to charge a nominal admission fee of 10 cents, but the executive has since determined to dispense with this charge and the exhibition will be thrown open to the public, the only proviso being that children not accompanied by their parents will be refused admission. Men will be stationed at the doorse to see that this rule is enforced. The people of Peterborough should take advantage of this opportunity to see the magnificent display that is being made. It is full of interest even to those not interested in the hardware trade and of great educational value. The exhibition opens to the public at 7.30 o'clock to-night with the 57th Regimental band in attendance.

Convention Notes.

The only complaint heard in regard to the convention was that the armoury building was rather too cold for comfort, but the energetic executive soon remedied this defect by securing fifty oil stoves and distributing them throughout the hall, with the result that the temperature is at a much more comfortable level to-day.

Secretary Wrigley states that the display at the present exhibition is the finest that he has ever seen anywhere.

The fact that Peterborough is strongly on the map as an industrial centre is brought forcibly to the attention of the many visitors. The Peterborough firms exhibiting have their booths grouped at the east end of the building, while from the gallery in that section is suspended a huge sign bearing the legend, "Peterborough Manufacturers." The firms exhibiting are the Peterborough Lubricating Company, B. F. Ackerman, Son and Company, Adam Hall Limited, Peterborough Canoe Company, Rapid Tool Company, Lundy Shovel Company, Peterborough Lock Manufacturing Company and J. J. Turner and Sons.

The following song has been dedicated to Mr. Weston Wrigley, the Secretary of the convention:

..Has Anybody Here Seen Wrigley..
Has anybody here seen Wrigley,
W—R—IGLEY
Has anybody here seen Wrigley,
Wrigley with his sunny smile,
Sure his hair is black and his eyes are blue,
And he's Association through and through
Has anybody here seen Wrigley,
He's the Captain of our crew.

EXHIBITS.

Ruberoid Roofing.

An exhibit that is of particular interest to both builders and occupants is that of the Rubberoid Roofing, made by the Standard Paint Co., of Montreal. This material has special features that adapt it for use on buildings with a very low pitch. The noted architect, Gustav Stickley, originator of the Craftsman style of houses, strongly recommends coloured ruberoid roofing for use instead of shingles. This coloured roofing material is made in red or brown, and gives a good finish to a roof. It is non inflammable and stands the weather well. Messrs. Maitland and Moore, are Peterborough agents for ruberoid materials.

Canners' Washers.

J. H. Connor & Son, Ltd., of Ottawa, are exhibiting some of their new improved types of washing machines and clothes wringers. Their leader in the Connor ball bearing washer. This machine is a tub that swings on ball bearings and special tempered steel springs that reverse the action of the tub. There are a number of machines that work on this principle, but this is the only machine of this style that has the hinged cover and rubber. All dealers who have seen this washer were unanimous that this improvement in the Connor ball bearing washer makes it the best machine on the market. These machines are not sold by departmental stores but through the retail dealers all over Canada. This company makes a specialty of their Life Buoy clothes wringers. They are guaranteed to be pure rubber and to ring drier and last longer than any other.

Razors and Brushes.

One of the catchy exhibits that has been arranged in a showy style, regardless of trouble or expense, is that shown in the booth occupied by the International Distributing Co., of Montreal. The exhibit is for the purpose of exploiting the merits of the Rubberset shaving brushes, Even Ready safety razor, and the Yankee safety razor. A mechanical demonstrator shows figures in the act of shaving, applying the lather with the Rubberset brushes, in readiness for the manipulation of the razors. No one can pass this booth without pausing to observe this unique contrivance, and the extensive display of the above goods are then brought into prominence. See this display in the third aisle. Mr. A. F. Collins, the sales manager of the company is in charge.

Onward Mfg Company, Berlin, Ont.

One very important exhibit is that of the Automatic Vacuum Cleaner, the machine with the double tank, superior to any other machine on the market, and the Onward Sliding Furniture Shoe, successor to the old-fashioned wheel castor. It is made with glass base and mott metal base for all kinds of furniture and metal beds. Don't fail to see this exhibit. First aisle.

Peterborough Exhibits.

One end of the Armouries hall is occupied by the exhibits of the Peterborough manufacturers. Their exhibits class up well with the others and are certainly a source of pride to visiting citizens. With the exhibit of Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons, all are familiar, but the present showing deserves a special study, comprising as it does all the new features lately introduced by the big tent, awning and flag manufacturers. Alongside it is a booth containing a display of the goods made by the Peterborough Lock Works, which gives a splendid idea of the wonderful assortment of goods made at this local factory.

Next comes the Lundy Shovel and Tool Co. and Rapid Tool Co. exhibits, perhaps as great eye-openers to many Peterborough people as anything that is shown in the building. Another interesting corner contains a fine showing of canoes and skiffs, from the factory of the Peterborough Canoe Co., in charge of the genial Mr. Richardson. Some of the unusual products of the Adam Hall & Son Stove Works, are given prominence in the next booth. An immense hotel range is shown along with some smaller designs and makes up an imposing exhibit.

Another well known local industry is next represented by a well varied assortment of harness and collars from B. F. Acker man's factory. As still another flourishing Peterborough concern, this exhibit has a special interest. A neatly displayed selection of the attachments turned out by the Peterborough Lubricator Co. is worthy of more than a passing glance. A close look at the fixtures, explained by the good natured man in charge, shows their interesting features, and what desirable parts they are on machinery, in this age when waste of time and material are looked upon as serious leaks in any business.

THE METHOD OF CHARGING FOR MAINTENANCE OF INDIGENTS IS DISCUSSED

Council Takes Up the Matter in Connection With the Clause in the City's Private Bill.

SOME SUGGESTIONS

The City Council met last evening in special session, and considerable important business was transacted. Mayor Morrow was in the chair. He said that the principl reason for calling the meeting was the question in reference to the city's Bill before the Legislature. The Private Bills Committee had dealt with most of the clauses except the one in connection with the Protestant Home. The Roman Catholic ratepayers wanted all Incorporated companies, whether Protestant or Catholic, to be taxed, and that the taxes be divided between the two institutions—Protestant Home and House of Providence, in proportion of the assessment of Protestants and Catholics.

A deputation from the city waited upon the Private Bills Committee last week at Toronto to press the passage of the city's bill. There was also present a deputation, representing the Roman Catholic interests, the members of which urged that for the maintenance of indigents, all incorporated companies be also assessed, and the taxes therefrom divided between the Protestant Home and the House of Providence, in proportion of the assessment upon Protestants and Catholics, apart from companies.

This clause of the bill was returned to the Council for further consideration and it was for this purpose that the meeting was called.

The Council's opposition to the amendment was shown by the adoption of the following resolution:

Moved by Ald. Duncan, seconded by Ald. Graham, that the Mayor and City Solicitor be instructed to advise the Private Bills Committee that the Council is willing to have the Bill amended to provide that the Corporation may apportion the rates for the maintenance of indigents between the Protestant Home and the House of Providence, in the same way, as they are now enabled to do between Public and Separate School Act.—Carried.

Ald. Buller thought that if the Bill were thrown out altogether, it would upset the Council's plans.

Ald. Metheral read a report of the Board of Works.

Moved by Ald. Metheral, seconded by Ald. Graham, that the report be adopted.—Carried.

Ald. Morgan thought that the sign by-law should be amended. He said that there was not a great deal contrary to the wishes of the merchants, and that considering the light which the illuminated signs threw on the street, it was advisable to do something, as the merchants were taking the signs down and darkening the street. Ald. Morgan was in favour of the city taking the responsibility of accidents caused in the event of a sign falling, if the city was going to levy the license. The Mayor thought that this was the most important eature of the by-law and hat it would be better left alone.

Moved by Ald. Metheral, seconded by Ald. Graham, that the $500 due to Mr. W. Chipman for his engineering services, should be paid.—Carried.

Moved by Ald. Metheral, seconded by Ald. Graham, that the account of $732.31, due to the Ontario Sewer Pipe Co. be paid.—Carried.

Regarding the protection of the South End streets, the Railway Commission wanted to close Park, Perry and Chamberlain, and have a subway on Park. Ald. Buller was in favour of the original plan of putting the subway at the Boundary Road. He thought this would please the ratepayers. The City Solicitor thought that that action would not better Park street any.
